Chapter 1121

So, that must be the same for General Ralph.

Just ...

What was the point of all their previous efforts?

Karl said glumly, "It had been so hard for us to find out the truth and know Joyce's true identity, and I couldn't tell her now."

"Of course. If we tell her right now, she must be so desperate. She had been away from her biological parents for more than twenty years. They had not yet recognized each other, but they were already in such a crisis. She would definitely give up everything to help them out." Luther took over the words.

"This is not a problem that can be solved by giving everything away. The military power is not in the hands of the government, and the president only a few teams of guards. We have even less recourse." Karl said, "We all saw those Telecom vehicles. Now the military's internal communication network has all been cut off, and my contacts never sent me any message after that. Otis's men are loaded with guns and we can't even enter the door."

Chapter 1122

After Luther made the call, he took a few laps downstairs alone to de-stress himself.

He did not want to bring the depression home, and he would hate it to cause any burden to Joyce.

For now, it's best to let her be an outsider. Otis would not have the time to bother her for a while. He himself had just established a new military power and had a lot to keep him busy.

The night breeze was cold and it kept getting their way into his body.

Just now he was in a hurry to go downstairs and he did not wear much. Gradually he felt his limbs numb.

He rubbed his stiff hands together and decided to go back to the apartment.

He then went upstairs and opened the door and entered the living room.

Anderson had already taken a bath and changed into his cute little dinosaur pajamas, and Joyce was walking out of the bathroom with him in her arms.

"You look cold! Do you want to go in and take a bath? It's very comfortable." Anderson said with concern.

As if suddenly remembering something, he turned towards the door and reached out to open it.

As he opened the door, the cold breeze from the corridor poured in slowly.

He looked like he wanted to get out.

Joyce watched him leaving, and suddenly felt a void in her heart.

Surprisingly, he instinctively spoke up to stop him, "Where are you going? Stay."

Luther's footsteps were stopped with a start.

He tilted his head, his handsome eyes widened, his thin lips slightly opened, and he looked incredulously at her.

When she realized the ambiguity of what she said, she hastily explained, "I mean, you stay and sleep in my room ..."

He looked at her tenderly.

She almost wanted to bite her tongue off! What the hell did she say?

"No, no, I mean, I'm sleeping with Anderson. You can sleep in my room."

After saying that, she covered her lips with her hand.

Time passed.

Yet nothing particular had ever happened.

People were still coming and going on the lively street, and the lights were still colorful. It seemed that nothing had changed.

Joyce went to work on time every day, and picked up Anderson herself every day, and life was surprisingly peaceful, as if nothing had happened.

Otis seemed to have disappeared from the world, and there was no news about him from the outside world.

And of course no one knew what happened inside the military after the change.

It was as if everyone was isolated from each other.

At the secret hospital.

Inside the clean and tidy ward, there lay a woman, wearing an oxygen mask and breathing evenly. She seemed to be asleep, her eyelashes were slightly trembling. She was not at all like ill.

He knew something must have happened!

He never thought that there would be such an overhaul in the military.

They had then all heard Otis' official announcement to the public about his takeover of the military.

Frank wanted to tear Otis to pieces.

Fortunately, his keen instincts led him to the right place.

This secret hospital was in an excellent location. It came with a mountain spring inside the hospital, so they would not have to worry about water problems, and in the basement is connected to a cave half way up the mountain, which they hid a diesel fuel depot and an independent generator, so they did not need outside support for electricity at all.

Moreover, the hospital was rich in food reserves. They had enough food for all the soldiers, doctors and nurses for more than a month.

Most importantly, they could set up defense around Hill 372 Hospital easily. There was only one bridge between the hospital and the outside world, so it required only four snipers on top of the bridge tower on a rotating basis.

He knew Luther, who had once been engaged with Charlotte.

Moreover, everyone in the country had more or less heard about the name.

Earlier, Cecelia had told him to contact Zora and to keep it a secret.

She had particularly mentioned that he should not tell even her family.

She gave him Zora's business card and asked him to make a personal trip to meet Zora. That afternoon, he went to Zora's office, but unfortunately, he did not meet Zora.

He thought he would come again early the next morning, but Cecelia had an accident that night.

It was because Cecelia had asked him to keep it a secret especially from her family.

When he saw Cecelia in that pool of blood, he knew Charlotte had pushed her. The first thing he did was to mark both Charlotte and Otis as enemies. It also made him cautious when he made follow-up decisions.

And because he had been to Zora's office, he knew that Luther's office was there too.

So, he made a timed mailing.

Annoyed, he picked up the pen on his desk and kept spinning it in his hand.

But it could not disperse the depression in his heart.

At that moment, a "knock" on the door sounded.

"Come in." He said in a deep voice.

The person who pushed in the door was the receptionist, Eloise.

Eloise came forward and handed a package to Luther, "Mr. Warner, a package just arrived. There is no sender's address and no phone number written on it. There was just your name."

"Oh?" Luther took the black package suspiciously.

Usually the package would not be sent to him personally. They would be sent either to the company or to Casey, the special assistant.

It was for him?

And, it was sent to Cloud Bay?

It's so weird.

Eloise could see Luther's confusion, and she boldly volunteered, "Mr. Warner, do you think there's something wrong with the package? Do you want to call security?"

Luther jolted to his feet.

Now, he held Cecelia's cell phone in his hand.

Wouldn't that be the biggest turnaround?

He darted through the contacts in Cecelia's phone and found a long list of names. From the notes attached to these contacts, he could tell how close they were with Cecelia.

He even found the recent call records and private messages.

He immediately thought about contacting Karl, and he took out his cell phone and dialed Karl's number.

When he got through, he couldn't wait to say, "Karl, the turnaround came up. Someone mailed me Cecelia's cell phone, and there is everything we need. Where are you now? I'll come over and find you."

Karl froze at first, and then he said, "You come directly to my office. If you need to use the equipment, it's more convenient here."

"Good." Luther hung up the phone.

"Fuck you." She shrugged him off awkwardly.

She stood up, moved her limbs and joints, and said coolly, "Just a casual question. Anderson will ask me when the time comes."

"Tsk, who cares what kind of flowers you have outside and need to entertain. We're not a couple. Just do what you like." She did not forget to add a faint sarcasm to her words.

Luther looked at her with amusement. No matter how long it had been, no matter how she had tried to disguise herself, her nature was always like a hedgehog.

With just a gentle touch, all her thorns would stand up. It was simply too cute.

The more this happened, the more he liked to tease her sometimes.

"I'm just meeting with Karl. What flowers are you talking about." He said back.

Joyce froze, "Karl?"

Several teams of men with loaded guns patrolled back and forth at the Military Staff House, keeping a firm watch on all those people inside.

In front of the Heath residence, six soldiers guarded the door, and all of them were Otis' cronies.

Inside the guest room on the first floor, Charlotte's eyes were slightly closed. She was leaning on the side of the bed, her face was gaunt, and her lips were pale without a trace of blood. She sometimes frowned, and sometimes sighed. The torment of the illness made her lose her old brightness. In just a few days it seemed like she had aged many years.

Suddenly, she coughed violently and never stopped. She almost thought she would die from it.

Tommy, the personal escort, heard it from the outside and rushed in with a cup of hot water.

"Miss Charlotte, drink some water to wet your throat while Jane goes to wash your sheets and clothes." He let out a sigh.

Charlotte just took her cough medicine and still the coughing never stopped. He had no idea what had happened to her.
