Chapter 1321

"I'm not trying to figure out what to do? I'm the co-pilot, and isn't our main driver already troubleshooting the problem? It's too cold, maybe it's frozen on somewhere, fix it and go." The bus driver explained.

"Who knows when you're going to fix it? I'm calling a crane to come and tow your car away." The staff didn't budge and took out their cell phones ready to call.

"How big of a crane does it take to tow away a bus? Do you have any common sense? Forget it, I don't want to talk to you. I'll go see if it's fixed." The bus driver grunted coldly.

"You have ten minutes, if you don't leave, I will report you for huge damages." The staff put down fierce words.

"Oops, got it, all right. It's already fixed." At that moment, another driver came over and greeted the guests, "Everyone line up and get in the car so we can leave for another hotel."

Joyce and Luther passed by and didn't take it to heart when they saw that things had finally worked out.

At this point, Luther pointed his finger across the room.

"Is that Julia's wedding car, and Andres should be on it?"

Joyce followed Luther's gaze.

Julia's big, misty, watery eyes are frozen at this moment.

In the nick of time, she used all her strength to push Anderson violently forward.

Luther had already rushed out, and in a flash, he grabbed Anderson's sleeve and yanked it violently with such force that he fell backwards.

He held Anderson firmly in front of him and rolled him twice in a row before stopping.

In front of her, the two wedding celebrants who carried Julia's skirt were caught directly under the wheels of the truck, leaving a bloody mess.

Julia was not hit head-on, but her skirt was too long to run away, and the huge impact from the side of the truck sent her flying hard.

Finally, it fell straight down on the windshield of Karl's car with a "bang" and then slid down ...

This resulted in Julia having to park her wedding car convoy across the street.

It was all arranged.

It's a conspiracy!

She didn't expect it at all, no one did.

Instead of working on the inside, they worked on the outside, so everyone got careless.

She looked up and saw that twelve hours had passed since Julia had been taken in for resuscitation, and it had long since turned from day to night outside. She was both looking forward to the operation being over as soon as possible, and so worried that she didn't even dare to look up.

Joyce then realized that her feet were weak and she couldn't move.

"Doctor, what's the situation?" She heard herself ask.

"The patient has a brain hemorrhage, although her vital signs are stable for now. However, the posterior cerebral neurological response is currently lacking, so I'm sorry we don't know when she will wake up."

Joyce stood frozen, really wanting to hear nothing.

The mind is buzzing, unable to think.

His face was extraordinarily heavy, and he could not hide his exhaustion.

Julia was lying quietly in bed, her face slightly white, her expression peaceful, her body poorly connected with many tubes and various monitoring instruments.

Joyce covered her lips, and her sour, dry eyes finally shed tears.

Karl glanced up to see them and he spoke, his voice hoarse, "You're here, sit down."

Luther walked over to Karl and patted him on the shoulder, "I'll contact the brain specialist at Muftron, it'll be fine. Cecelia is awake too, and Julia is young and recovering fast, she will be awake soon."

"Hmm." Karl nods his head.

He gently stroked the back of Julia's hand and blamed himself, "I'm to blame, blindly confident. I thought it was seamless and watertight. I didn't expect that the slightest omission of details would still let others exploit the loopholes."

Cecelia came to Julia's intensive care unit.

She brought someone with her.

"This is Dr. Price," Cecelia introduced, "a senior talent within the warlord, a rare general practitioner, and well versed in brain surgery. At the time I was in a coma, it was Dr. Price who took care of me and regulated the medication until I finally woke up."

Joyce met Dr. Price for the first time and rushed forward to thank him, "So you saved my mom, thank you so much."

Dr. Price said politely, "That's what I'm supposed to do."

He took out one and inserted it into Julia's Hegu point and Yangming point, then took out several more and inserted them into Baihui point and Shenting point respectively. Each time he inserted a silver needle, he would gently rotate it.

Dr. Price held his breath, showing an unprecedented level of seriousness.

After applying the needles, Dr. Price stood up and said, "This is the first time today, we should not move too much. After I touched her, I felt that she was responding. Don't worry too much."

Karl hurriedly stood up, "Thank you very much, please take care of yourself in the future."

"As it should be." Dr. Price put the silver needle away.

Joyce went to Julia's bedside and gently held her hand, which was warm and not even a little cold, which somehow made her feel at ease.

Luther held Joyce, who was rushing out the door, by the throat.

"You're crazy, where are you going to find him?"

"The command room, he should be there." Joyce pinned her gun to her belt, her eyes determined.

"You went to break into his command room by yourself? Have you thought about the consequences? No, I won't allow it!" Luther was annoyed, Joyce had always been sensible, and today Julia's accident had hit her too hard.

"He wouldn't dare to do anything to me, at least not now. I'm just going to warn him. Don't worry, I have a plan." Joyce's tone was cold and unshakeable, "No one can stop me today."

"There's a measure, is that the way it's done now?" How could Luther not be worried?

"I'll be right there." Joyce wrenched herself free of Luther.

She rushed out the door.

Inside the command room, Otis is talking to Eugene, who is half lying on the couch, smoking a cigarette, with a relaxed look on his face.

The door was kicked open, and he was so startled that the cigarette in his mouth fell on his clothes.

He hurriedly stood up and shook, the cigarette fell to the ground, but his uniform had been burned with a hole.

Eugene is also stunned, completely unexpected, actually the guard downstairs, also did not pull the alarm.

He wanted to protect Otis also too late, he simply did not have time to draw a gun, and Joyce's hands he had seen.

Otis narrowed his eyes and stared at Joyce, who barged in at the door with a gun. She was still wearing her peach dress, which she hadn't changed out of, apparently for the wedding today.

Reflecting the moment she is extraordinarily beautiful and enchanting.

Otis straightened his collar and made himself look more calm, although he was threatened by her with a gun, he did not look afraid.

Joyce ran all the way down to the command room.

Looking back, I glanced at the plaque hanging high in front of the door, the four big words "the whole army through the military".

She laughed coldly, reorganizing the army, governing the armed forces, to Otis such scum?, it was a joke.

Turning around, two shots hit the screws that hang the plaque directly.

"Clang" a loud sound, the plaque fell straight to the ground, falling in half.

The orderlies inside ran out, saw the scene, and shrank back down with a grey nose, and no one dared to speak, let alone stop it.

Everyone let Joyce in and out as if no one else was there.

Joyce flew down the steps.

Luther arrived just in time to see Joyce shoot down the plaque, and he inclined his head and smiled. She was so cute in her anger.

He stepped forward and swept her up to him, "Warned?"

Joyce put away her gun and looked even colder, "I wish I could have shot him, asshole."

with relief, "It's only a matter of time. It's not the right time yet, when we take him down and get all his incriminating evidence.
