Chapter 1441

Karl gently took Michal's hand, which was cold, and advised, "Mom, what has been decided is done. Don't you worry, wait for the result without worry."

See Joyce and Luther arriving.

Cecelia stood up, "It's almost time for the surgery. You are here just in time. I'll call Senator Sanchez not to come, and he'll be notified of the results."

As we speak, the nurse pushes a hospital bed and brings Julia over.

Julia was lying quietly in her hospital bed, her face flushed as if she was asleep.

Everyone standing in front of the operating room couldn't help but look at Julia for a moment.

The thoracic surgeon comes out of the operating room, "Push in, it's starting. Length of surgery, expect 6-8 hours. After it's over, I'll come out first and explain the situation."

The thoracic surgeon nodded to them and gave a brief explanation.

As the nurse pushed the bed in, the automatic door closed, separating them completely.

AS Kindergarten.

I hadn't seen him for two days over the weekend, and Fair was particularly happy to see Anderson.

After morning class, she noticed Anderson was a little distracted and asked, "What's wrong with you, what's going on?"

"Today, godmother had surgery and I was worried about her." Anderson let out a sigh.

"Is she very sick?" Fair tilted her head gently, "The doctor will find a way, don't worry."

"Hmm." Anderson nodded, "If the operation is successful, she will wake up, if it fails, I may never see her again."

"It won't. She'll be fine." Fair stroked Anderson's back, soothingly.

Anderson felt as if Fair's hands had magical powers and he was in a much better mood.

From his pocket, he took out the small gift he bought over the weekend and handed it to Fair .

"What's this?" Fair asked with a wink.

"Just open it and see." Anderson purposely wrapped it in a small bag yesterday.

Anderson looked at her breathlessly, "Your family is so confusing. Are you going to get it right or not?"

Fair shook his head, "Mommy brought home a younger sister, eight months younger than me. It's the sister I just said looks like you."

"How can it be your sister when you're only eight months younger." Anderson knew a lot and immediately noticed the problem.

"I know that too." Fair pulled her fingers together to show Anderson, "So either I'm not mommy's biological child, or my sister is not mommy's biological child."

She thought for a moment, "Maybe I'm not, because Mommy seems to have a good relationship with her sister."

Anderson gave Fair a sympathetic look, "You're pathetic."

Fair opened his mouth.

Before going to school today, her mommy Athena mentioned to her that she would like to invite her best friend to play at her house after school. If she could do it, she would take her to Mufron later and live with her sister.

Because Iris kept clamoring to see her friends.

She wanted to talk to Anderson about it, but thought about it and didn't.

The expected surgery time is nearing the end.

The lights in the operating room were still on.

Michal and Cecelia were already sitting in front of the operating room door, waiting.

Michal rubbed his hands together, clearly in a much better mood than before and no longer nervous.

Luther told Karl, "Don't worry, the most dangerous time of the operation has passed. It's definitely winding down now. There will be no more life-threatening injuries."

Karl nodded his head, "Julia's matter is thanks to your help this time. If you hadn't thought of a multidisciplinary consultation and brought in experts from all over the world, Julia wouldn't have known when to wake up."

Luther glanced at him, "You've done your best and helped enough over the years. If things work out for the warlord this time, it's time for you to live some normal life."

"A normal life?" Karl looked back at Luther, "Not everyone can have that luxury."

Luther shrugged.

Joyce also said, "I wish I could have been there the first time Julia woke up."

While everyone is in a relaxed mood.

Cecelia was sensitive to the sound of a slight vibration.

"Whose phone is vibrating?" She asked.

Everyone takes out their cell phones to each other.

"It's for me." Luther took out his phone, saw that the caller was Aaron, and was just about to answer when the vibrations had stopped.

Joyce took out her phone, glanced at the screen, and exclaimed, " my, I have six missed calls, the kindergarten teacher, and Aaron."

Because of Julia's surgery, they all put their phones on silent for fear of disturbing others.

The final wait was so intense for everyone that no one paid attention to their phones.

Fair's round eyes glared at several black-clad men in the car, "What are you people? Why are you arresting us?"

A man in black held her down.

Fair struggled desperately, legs stirring, "You catch me, let him go, he came out with me to see, not the person you want to catch!"

She saw the opportunity to bite on the back of the black man's hand.

The man in black was in pain and raised his hand and slapped Fair across the face.

Fair, after all, was just over four years old when she was slapped across the back seat and flung into Anderson's side.

"Be honest, or I'll make you look good!" The man in black in the back seat warned in a stern voice.

Fair, dazed from the beating, barely managed to get up from her seat.

"You let him go, he's not the one you're after!"

Anderson held Fair, shook his head, and spoke calmly, "You stop it. The person they want to arrest is me."

"Drip." The detector called up again.

In the narrow compartment, it was extraordinarily harsh.

Anderson's heart sank and he knew it was over.

His luck, it seems, is not so good.

The man in black looked at the detector suspiciously, why did it suddenly go off? He yanked off the shoes on Anderson's feet. With the detector measured inside and outside, when the detector touched the sole of the shoe, once again issued a "drop" sound.

"Shit, boss. This kid has a tracker in the bottom of his shoe!" The man in black shouted.

"SHIT, almost got wobbled over by him." The man in black cursed and took off both of Anderson's shoes.

The boss sneered, "It's really not easy to deal with. Open the window and throw them all out!"

Anderson's eyes clouded over.

Fair nervously grabbed Anderson's arm, his little face full of worry.

"Yes." The man in black answered, and he pressed down the window and threw all of Anderson's pair of shoes and watch out the window with force.

Joyce and Luther, along with Karl, arrived at AS Kindergarten in a hurry.

Both Miss Webb and Miss Hunt were waiting anxiously for them at the door.

Karl was on the phone the whole way.

The Special Investigation Unit's Telecom vehicles arrived in front of the kindergarten simultaneously and completed the area lockdown in a short time.

Miss Hunt's face went white with fear; she had never encountered anything like this before.

Joyce looked anxious, and Luther soothed, "Don't worry, there will be a way."

At that moment, her cell phone rang.

On the way, she called Kane first.

Because Anderson had a tracker on him, it was her last hope.

To be on the safe side, the watch and the sole of the shoe, both have trackers.

It is used to confuse and disorient the opponent.

It was Kane's call, "Sis, Andres' trackers, all of them have been removed. The last communication location, at No. 37 in Warehouse Road. 4:17 minutes later, no new display. It's on the side of the expressway, they must have dropped it!"

"No. 37 in Warehouse Road, which is the way out of town, means they are now no longer in THE CAPITAL."

"Sister, the tracker on the bottom of the shoe must not be discoverable by ordinary people. They must have used professional detection instruments. Damn, who the hell is it that did this to a child."

"Mom!" Fair recognized the back as Athena! The woman who called herself her mother.
Now she feels in her heart that this woman, for sure, is not her mother.
Whereas we had seen Athena in a wheelchair before, this time, Athena was standing.
For some reason, Athena stood, giving a stronger sense of fear and oppression.
Fair looked around, "Where's Iris, why don't I see her? Mom, isn't Iris with you?"
Athena turned her back on them and sneered.
She didn't answer.
Instead, he took a cigarette out of his pocket, very thin and long.
