Wrong marriage and sweet love (Joyce and Luther)

Chapter 251

"Joyce, I'm truly happy for you. It's just unbearable that they mistook you for a murderer!" Charlotte feigned indignation, "Finally, the facts were cleared up today."

Joyce shrugged, her beautiful eyes narrowed, looking straight at Charlotte, "I have never done such a thing, and I must track down the killer, and let grandma rest in peace. As long as I live, I will never give up."

After a pause, Joyce continued, "Charlotte, the day of Grandma's accident, you had also seen Grandma at noon, nothing unusual?"

When Joyce spoke, a cold light crossed her eyes, and Charlotte could not help but shudder.

Charlotte only felt the sweat stand up, and surprisingly felt somewhat guilty in her heart.

She bit her lip, "The police also asked me, but I really did not notice anything unusual. When I left, Grandma went back to bed. After I found out that Grandma was killed, I also kept thinking back, but there was nothing. I also blame myself, if only I could see some clues."

Shelly rushed behind Charlotte and gently rubbed her back, "Charlotte, what's wrong with you? You looked terrible."

Jacqueline was quite experienced with it and naturally understood why, "Dry heaving is natural during pregnancy. The older generation always says that the worse the dry heaving is, the more likely you will have a boy."

It took a while before the dry heaving stopped. She straightened up, rubbed her chest to catch her breath and apologized repeatedly, "Sorry, sorry, sorry, I couldn't help it today, I made a scene here, maybe it was a little hot."

"Feeling better?" Shelly opened a bottle of mineral water and handed it forward.

Charlotte took it and took a few sips, "Thanks, that's better."

In fact, she had never had dry heaving, and it was all faked.

She smoothed her breath and raised her eyes to Jacqueline, half shyly and half deliberately, "Auntie, you are right, it is indeed a boy." After saying that, she lowered her head in embarrassment.

"Since Grandma chose to modify her will before she died, there must be a reason behind it. Grandma died for no reason, and I will not divorce until we find out the truth." Luther stated his attitude on the spot.

Charlotte also heard it clearly, and her face changed.

Find out the truth? She knew best who the real murderer was. The day they found out the truth, won't it be the day of her death?

She could never let them know about the truth and Luther would never get a divorce?

"Luther, the Heath family wants to see you. Rodney will meet you personally. Cecelia and I have agreed on a time, the night after tomorrow, and we will go together. At least there should be an explanation." Jacqueline wanted to use the Heath family to suppress him.

Luther's thin lips curled up, "Yes, that's exactly what I'm going to do. I'll make my attitude clear to Rodney in person."

As he spoke, his eyes glanced over to Charlotte, who had always pretended to be clueless.

"Missy, I'm sorry, I'm the one who overlooked it. I didn't expect that this Karl could even have such a background. This time Joyce was only able to get out of danger, as far as I know, with the help of Karl in the beginning." Ricky said in a cold voice.

"Karl? Isn't he just a regular detective captain?" Charlotte was so angry she couldn't bear it.

"Oh, he wasn't a nobody like that at all. He personally took Stephanie's will, sent it to the analysis center in the Capital, and found Dustin, an industry authority, to do the analysis. Karl's father, Chester, was the chief justice, and his mother was the heir to the nation's third largest construction company." Ricky started the car and sped away.

Charlotte froze, she didn't expect it at all. Someone with such a status could stay in the second precinct.

Joyce was so lucky that she always had someone to help her. Was it possible that Karl had a crush on Joyce and was helping her out?

"Yeah, why not, where do you want to eat? It's on me." Joyce showed a smile.

"It's not a good time for you to show up elsewhere. If you want to have a dinner together, we can just go to the clubhouse owned by Felix's family." Luther answered as he drove.

Juanita on the other end of the phone heard it, and she laughed a bit. She lowered her voice and said to Joyce, "Seemed like you have got a control freak for husband, and you look like you are grounded somehow."

Joyce laughed out loud, "Not at all."

She looked to Luther and asked, "What's the name of the clubhouse?"

Luther said back, "DeNox."

Joyce froze.

DeNox, wasn't that a nightclub? Even she had heard of it. Although it is a famous light music bar in Khebury, it was said that there were pop bands from all over the world in the bar every day. But in the end, it was still a nightclub. What surprised her was that the clubhouse should belong to Felix's family. It seemed that the power and wealth of the Saunders family were quite beyond her imagination.

Luther explained, "Felix runs a private clubhouse on the top floor of DeNox, and the nightclub is downstairs. I will make arrangements with Felix in advance, and no one else can disturb us."

Joyce said to Juanita on DeNox.

The wind rose this evening and it was getting cooler.

The autumn breeze rolled with the remnants of the leaves flying around the sky, the dim street lights shining, adding to it a touch of sorrowfulness.

The entire DeNox bar, decorated in pure blue tones, gave the illusion of tranquility, unlike other noisy nightclubs.

In the lobby on the first floor, several foreign bands were playing music.

The beautiful violin and the mourning cello sounded like they were having a concert. However, the men and women inside were just like those in any other bars, and it was all about drunkenness and indulgence. They just looked a little more elegant.

Joyce was wearing a black trench coat and a mask in order not to get into trouble.

She followed the route Luther had told her and entered through the side door of DeNox, taking a special elevator to the top floor.

After saying that, the man was going to go up and take Joyce's hand.

"Pop!"

Joyce gave the man a slap, and the man who came forward fell on the sofa. She had practiced shooting for several years, and her strength was still okay even today. These fat, drunken men, instead, were not very capable.

The man stared incredulously at Joyce. He had been knocked down so easily that it was nothing short of a shame for him.

"Damn it, bitch, how dare you to hit me? So you really want to play it the hard way."

He was about to stand up.

Coldly, Joyce splashed a glass of red wine on his face and warned in a stern voice, "You indecent fouts dare to touch me, I will call the police immediately." In fact, she had called Felix before coming in and believed that Felix would arrive soon.

"Compensation? Jokes. I set the rules here, and no one is allowed to force a girl, otherwise you deserve what just happened." Vicki gallantly stepped on the coffee table with her long legs, her arms in front of her chest.

Felix sized up Vicki at this point.

The compelling aura emitting from the long narrow eyes seemed enticing. The high nose, plump lips, wheat color skin together gave a unique wild beauty that he could not forget. It was completely different from the girls he had seen in the past.

"So you're the new manager at DeNox?" Felix asked curiously. He had always been unconcerned about HR recruitment, but he had also heard that the industry's top headhunter had recently introduced a legendary figure to manage DeNox. The previous manager had managed DeNox poorly, and left him many problems and a declining reputation, which had not failed to give him headaches.

"That's right. Who are you?" Vicki raised her long eyes and looked askance at Felix.

The tenfold momentum made Felix suddenly speechless.

"I, I'm the owner... of DeNox." He replied squirmingly, not really knowing how to introduce himself. Why on earth would he just feel inferior in front of Vicki.

"How was I supposed to know that DeNox could have a gray area like this." Joyce glared at Felix.

"You guys are okay? Since you just went to the wrong place, hurry up and leave. Don't interfere with my work." Vicki unceremoniously gave the eviction order.

Felix inevitably felt awkward, he was the owner here, but he was chased away by an employee.

However, he also found Vicki interesting, and he couldn't help but steal another glance at her.

Her almond eyes were shining and burning like those of a leopard, all emitting wild beauty, and he could not even take his eyes away from her.

"What are you looking at? Look again and I'll gouge your eyes out." Vicki was nonchalant and thought nothing better of Felix.

Felix had never met a woman with this kind of manners and was immediately interested.

"You guys go up to the top floor first, Vicki and I would like to have a few words alone." Joyce smiled at Juanita.

"Good." Karl nodded.

Joyce stopped in her tracks, and her beautiful face was half surprised and half stoned.

The wound on her back had not yet healed, and the memory of the pain seemed like yesterday.

Georgia was missing? What did that mean? That the people who wanted her dead had struck again? Destroying evidence and making things untraceable?

Vicki blew on her finger and sneered, "What a way to go, Joyce, who the hell did you offend? A registered prison guard in a management position just disappeared like that. The forces behind it should not be underestimated."

"I don't know. I don't usually socialize too much. I don't think I've offended anyone." Joyce shook her head. She didn't think Jacqueline and Shelly would be able to do something like buying a murder.

There must be someone else behind the scene.

"You two are friends?" Joyce looked at Vicki, and then at Christian. She had always felt that it was not a coincidence that Vicki came to work at Felix's DeNox bar right after she was released from prison, and she must have a purpose.

And Christian just did not appear when Felix showed up, so he did not want to fight directly with Felix.
