Wrong marriage and sweet love (Joyce and Luther)

Chapter 401

She laughed, "I don't think so! You are so lively and energetic. You will be a perfect match! Karl's so dull and he would need you!"

"Hmm. I think so. Ha-ha." Juanita laughed heartlessly, "Don't worry, I'll chase him down!"

"You will, right?!" Joyce patted Juanita, "I'll go back to work first, I have to catch up with the design in the next two days."

"Hmm. You get busy, I'll get you coffee, cappuccino or mocha?"

"It's all good. Thanks." Joyce smiled back.

Karl was sitting in front of his desk, looking through the documents, when his phone suddenly gave a "ding."

He opened his phone, and it was a message from Juanita.

"Why don't you treat me to dinner tonight, the seafood pot last time was delicious and I am missing it already."

Karl pointed his finger at the screen, "Stop, rewind here."

Sergeant Allen hurriedly followed the order.

"Yes, this is it. Pause, zoom in." Karl pointed to a man in the crowd, wearing a black jacket, jeans and a black baseball cap, "Look closely at the side face, is it Thomas."

He flipped out his phone, and compared the man with Thomas' photo.

"Yes, yes, yes! That's him, except for the hair, which is a bit longer, the side face looks just the same. Especially the scar here on the cheek, the features are remarkable, that's him!" Sergeant Allen said excitedly, after such a long time that even his eyes were blurred. Finally, they found him!

Karl continued to track the surveillance from earlier and found Thomas walking into a hotel next.

He immediately located the hotel in the picture, "No surprise, he's staying at this Skyview Residence right now. you call Skyview Residence right now and have them send you a list of all the people staying there, right now."

"So, someone needs to be found to take Thomas away and privately force out what we want to know, right?" Luther immediately understood the meaning of Karl's words. This was not difficult. Felix had a lot of connections from both worlds, and he could just leave it to him.

"That's right. I will send someone to keep an eye on the hotel where Thomas is currently staying. How about we don't alert him yet, and when the time is right, you will make your move?"

"No problem, I'll make the arrangements now." Luther obliged, "Have you informed Joyce? Now that Thomas is back, will he be targeting Joyce this time?"

"Not sure, don't rule it out." Karl paused for a moment, "Don't tell Joyce yet, lest she worry blindly."

"What if Joyce is in danger? I'll send someone to protect her." Luther's voice was clearly anxious.

"The first thing you need to do is to make sure that you have a good idea of what you are doing. We have been secretly sending people to observe around Joyce, I believe the other side must also be watching Joyce. Once we have any rash movements, the other side can immediately guess our intentions. We might get easily exposed and lose all the work." Karl said cautiously.

"So do we just sit back and wait for death?" Luther's voice dropped cold.

Thomas saw a man in black climbing up the rainwater pipe outside the hotel wall. The man was agile and masked, and seemed to be deliberately avoiding surveillance.

He intuited that the man in black was coming for himself, and hastily grabbed his belongings and dodged out of the room at the first opportunity to hide in the fire room in the corner of the walkway.

Sure enough, it didn't take long for a subtle rattling to come from his original room.

Immediately after, the door to his room was opened from the inside. The man in black he saw just now quietly probed out and looked around.

Thomas cautiously hid well from the man in black so that the man would not find him.

Soon, the man in black closed the door and returned to the room, and never moved after that.

Thomas was patient, he waited in the equipment room, for nearly two hours before climbing out of it. He judged that the man in black must have left.

Charlotte panicked, she didn't know what Ricky had done and what Thomas had actually seen.

But, since Ricky didn't call her, things must not be serious.

She could not afford to get confused and be led by Thomas.

She took a deep breath and feigned anger, "You are really useless, no wonder you can't do anything right. No judgment at all. What am I now? The daughter of the Heath family! The man I sent is, of course, professional and well-trained. He was indeed originally special forces!"

"Are you telling the truth?" Thomas began to falter again.

After all, he still wanted the money and did not want to leave empty handed.

And yes, Charlotte was now surrounded by all soldiers.

It was not surprising that she sent a special forces.

"Why would he climb up from outside the wall and avoid the surveillance?" Thomas still had questions.

Charlotte called Ricky's number immediately after Thomas hung up the phone.

As it was about to go through, there was a knock on the door outside the room.

Cecelia heard a commotion in Charlotte's room, got up and came over to check, asking with concern, "Charlotte, was that you talking just now? Was that you calling me? Is something wrong at this late hour?"

Just at that moment, the phone picked up and Ricky's low voice came through.

Charlotte's hand shook with fear and the phone fell on the bed, she hurriedly covered the speaker with the quilt.

"Mom, I'm fine, I had some trouble sleeping and I just talked to Shelly on the phone." Charlotte's heart thumped hard, and her whole body broke out in a thin sweat as she lied.

She suddenly felt that even if she married Luther as she wished, she would have to maintain a long-term relationship with Ricky as an underground lover, because she needed him around her so much. And she would definitely not treat Ricky poorly. Now he was a captain, and in a few months, he would be promoted to a major. Finally, he would be trained to become a general and take over the military and political affairs of the Heath family.

In this way, money and power were all just in her grip.

She imagined a bright future, lying under a soft mulberry silk quilt, slowly closing her eyes.

Soon she was asleep, thinking maybe when she woke up tomorrow morning, things were all solved.

Second Precinct.

Sergeant Allen was instructed to stay in front of the several computers. The computers were connected to all the surveillance in the vicinity of Skyview Residence.

Since Karl took it very seriously, he didn't dare to slack off. Although he was very sleepy and his eyes were about to close, he still braced himself and insisted on watching.

Suddenly, he found something behind Skyview Residence. Although no one was seen, he still noticed a shadow moving on the ground.

He immediately sat up straight and opened his eyes wide to look closely.

Joyce was alone in the office working late.

She got a desktop, a laptop, and an electronic drawing tablet in front of her at the same time. She skillfully switched back and forth between the three devices, drawing and comparing references. Today she found an important bug and successfully fixed it. It would mark an important progress to the whole design.

She was tired, leaned back in her chair, stretched her limbs, and rubbed her sore neck.

She felt a little hungry.

Recently, she had been working overtime quite a lot and was physically exhausted. Now that she was pregnant, she needed much more food than before.

She stood up and walked to the workroom to make a bowl of instant noodles to deal with her hunger.

She searched through the cupboards in the workroom. Juanita usually kept snacks and instant noodles there, but today she couldn't find any. With great difficulty, she found a bowl of pork bone ramen in the corner, took it out, unwrapped it, and was about to open the lid.

Suddenly, a pair of large warm palms came down from above and covered her wrists, stopping her from moving.

"Eat slowly. Look how hungry you are, you must not have eaten a proper dinner." Luther looked at her dotingly.

The way she ate was very real, very beautiful, and he was happy enough even just watching her eat.

He looked at her stunningly beautiful and exquisite side face, his eyes flowing with soft light, and he just could not take them off from her. He tried so hard to resist the urge to have her. He had to wait a little longer. Many things were fishy, and he must wait after he dealt with the things around him, and he would give her an explanation.

No matter whose child she was carrying, he would not mind and would never let go.

Suddenly, his cell phone rang.

He glanced out of the corner of his eyes and it was Karl.

Instantly, his eyes were awe-inspiring and his expression serious.

"Joyce, take your time eating, I have to go first."

"Oh." Joyce grunted back with her mouth stuffed full.

Luther arrived at Second Precinct and strode into Karl's office.

Karl was monitoring and tracking Thomas in real time in front of the computer, waiting for Thomas to arrive at his destination.

Jan Reid and Rory Ross usually took care of the underworld business, both skillful and reliable, and they were absolutely loyal to Felix.

"Why not just cut him off halfway?" Luther asked, pointing at Thomas on the screen, who was on his way to the abandoned factory on foot.

"I want to catch a bigger fish." Karl was half leaning on the stool, his long fingers twirling the pen over and over.

"You suspect he's hiding from someone else?" Luther got right to the heart of it.

"Right." Karl nodded, "We weren't exposed and we didn't alarm him. The reason why he left Skyview Residence quietly late at night must have something to do with the real murderer behind the scene. Otherwise there's no reason for him to do so."

"Hmm. The person who threatened him is probably the same person who is behind all the things. Perhaps he knew Thomas was returning to Khebury and wanted to get rid of him." Luther analyzed.
