Wrong marriage and sweet love (Joyce and Luther)

Chapter 451

She tried to break free a few more times, but could never get rid of him. Indignantly, she retorted.

"The baby you're carrying, is it really Justin's?" His harsh gaze swept to her belly; today she was wearing a looser dress and didn't really look like she was pregnant.

"No matter whose child it is, it has nothing to do with you." She didn't acknowledge it and said coldly, "We're just faking our marriage and we're getting a divorce license next month. You don't need to know."

Luther was instantly agitated. He used a little more force, pulling her closer to himself.

She emitted a fragrance. It was the smell of her body, instead of any perfume.

The feeling and the smell were so familiar and he could not control himself and dragged her right into his embrace.

The softness of her body and the familiar smell... With her in his arms now, the emptiness he felt just now instantly disappeared and he felt like his heart was full again. He tightened his arms subconsciously and locked her tightly and didn't want to let her go.

His behavior stunned Joyce as well.

Not far from the lobby of the R&S Group headquarters, Joyce unexpectedly saw a familiar figure on the side of the road.

At first Joyce was not quite sure of it. She did look quite similar from behind, but because she wore a mask, she would have to get closer to be sure.

And it was indeed Lauren, and she just got out of jail.

She was wearing a black t-shirt, black trousers, and a black mask. It was like she did not want to be seen by others, she deliberately hid half of her body behind a large tree until she saw Joyce, and then she came out from behind the tree.

Joyce guessed in her mind that Lauren should be looking for her.

Lauren finished in one breath, her eyes burning with anger and her body trembling all over.

Joyce frowned, not surprised at all. She had already thought of it before. However, hearing Lauren's account in person, she couldn't help but feel a flutter in her heart. How could anyone believe the fragile and mild Charlotte would do something like this.

"Also, I've heard that Charlotte is getting engaged to Luther." Lauren suddenly stepped forward to hold Joyce's hands tightly, "I don't know exactly what entanglement there is between you and the boss, but since they are now engaged, you should just stay far away from them. Charlotte is about to get married into the Warner family, and that would make the two families a powerful union. Their power and what they can do are not something you and I can imagine. She can kill us as easily as killing an ant, and we are weak and have no place to complain."

"I know, thanks for the heads up." Joyce patted Lauren's arm again, "You are going to Riverport, and no matter what happens in Khebury, just don't get yourself involved again. Protect yourself, and I will take care of myself."

"Well, definitely. By the way, have you heard about Martha?" Lauren suddenly asked, "Although I just got out of custody, in the headquarters, after all, I have worked there for many years and have many contacts. I heard about a lot of things."

Joyce returned to Eden Apartment in a daze.

When she got out of the cab, she saw Justin waiting for her downstairs. He was wearing light gray casual clothes and white sneakers today, and he looked youthful and refreshing today. She froze, in a trance, as if she had traveled back to the day when she just met him.

When he saw her coming, his handsome face showed a shiny smile and he hurriedly walked towards her.

It was just getting dark, and her arrival was like the brightest light in his eyes, shooting straight into his heart.

"Joyce, you're finally willing to see me." Justin stepped forward and gently held her shoulders with both hands. When he saw that she did not avoid his hands, only then did he dare to hold her arms, afraid that she would just disappear.

Joyce nodded, "Sorry, I was busy with work the other day and really didn't have time."

As he tried to speak, the waiter just happened to bring up the piping hot porridge and set it in front of them.

He paused and did not continue.

After the waiter left, Joyce used a spoon to pick off the green onion sprinkled on the congee, picked up another bowl, served Justin a bowl of fish fillet congee and handed it to him, "Careful it's hot, but it's quite delicious. I've been here twice, it's all fresh sea fish, it should be to your liking."

Justin was instantly touched, his heart tumbling, his warm eyes slightly moist, she not only remembered his preferences, but also remembered that he could like the taste of green onions, but did not like to eat chopped green onions. He remembered the old days when she always cooked for him, and remembered how she sprinkled green onions for the taste, and then picked them out one by one, and finally gave him dishes that had the taste of green onions but no green onions.

He picked up a napkin and gently wiped the corners of his eyes, "Sorry, the heat smokes my eyes a little."

Joyce didn't care about his actions and served herself a bowl of porridge as well. She stirred the porridge with a spoon to dissipate the heat and asked, "Just now, what did you have to say?"

He threw all his worries to the winds. Sooner or later she was going to know the truth.

Why not just tell her everything today?

Joyce heard what he said, and her beautiful eyes were now flooded with ripples. It was something that she had never expected.

"An internal fight within the Henderson family?" She asked suspiciously, "How is that possible?"

There was a trance in front of his eyes, and his mind seemed to flash back to the years...

Three years ago, when the World Shooting Championships were held in Riverport, the best players from all over the world came to participate in the event.

She and Justin met during a training session before the World Shooting Championships. He knew that she had won the National 10m Air Pistol Competition Junior Cup and came to the training venue to take a picture with her.

She readily agreed, and the two became acquainted.

The night before the final.

Justin asked her out.

She thought to herself that she couldn't avoid it, and that she should make it clear to him that she didn't have love for him, but only saw him as a friend. It was something that was not going to change. He should go back and inherit the Henderson Group instead of wasting his time on her.

However, none of them expected it.

It was this one meeting that changed everything that followed.

The venue of the Riverport World Championship was built somewhere halfway up a hill far away from the center of the city. It had a large open area behind the venue, attached to a cliff halfway up the hill, because it was also used for multi-directional flying disc competitions. Apparently, it was quite Justin reached out again, and unlike before, this time he held her hand firmly, as if he was afraid she would disappear, and refused to let go.

He took a deep breath and his voice was heavy, "I learned about the truth only recently. It wasn't the Mufron shooter who wanted to hurt you back then, he was also framed. In fact, the real killer behind the scenes is my brother, Derrick."

At the words, Joyce was shocked, his words completely overturned her perception.

What she thought was true for a long time was not the case at all.

"Yes. My brother Derrick, who was born out of wedlock... His mother did not marry my father... My mother came from a famous family, and after I was born, my father naturally made me the heir. For my brother Derrick, although he did not have to worry about food and clothing, and they also got him a job in the Henderson Group, my father never mentioned that he should inherit the family business. My brother, who had a strong personality since childhood, could not tolerate my father's bigotry and eventually took the plunge and tried to kill me."

Justin finished, his thin lips pursed, pulling Joyce's hand towards himself.

"Joyce, I actually owe you a lot. I'm the one who made you suffer. I want to make up for all of this. Believe me, now I have changed a lot. I will take care of everything and will never let you suffer half again." His sincere eyes, earnestly looking at Joyce, expected to get even just a hint of response from her eyes.

Joyce recalled at this time, not long ago she saw the news on TV.

"It is reported that the Henderson family bank recently underwent a major personnel restructuring, the former head of the Henderson family Derrick retired from his position, and the second son of the Henderson family would take his place as the CEO."

"How did you get away?" Joyce wondered how Justin was able to escape from Derrick when he was in a wheelchair and unable to walk.

"Because the man Derrick sent to spy on me was once in debt to me. When his mother was seriously ill, I helped them and his mother finally survived. He couldn't stand Derrick's insane competition for power and sent me away secretly and falsely claimed to Derrick that he had placed me under house arrest. After I escaped, I realized there was more to it than that and had to get my act together to find out the truth about what happened. I contacted an old friend and asked him to secretly help me get to Mufron for surgery. The surgery went smoothly, and while I was recovering, I worked on my daily rehab, trying to get back to my feet, and using my contacts to investigate Derrick. Now I had all the evidence for the two years. I was in Mufron, quietly waiting for the right time. Finally, with all the evidence in hand, I appeared in front of Derrick and my father at the board meeting for the change of the heir, and exposed all his schemes on the spot. I dealt him the ultimate blow. In the aftermath, Derrick had to quit the Henderson family bank, but of course I wouldn't let him go to jail because he is my brother and I have to protect the honor of the Henderson family."

Justin finished; his bright eyes full of apologies.

"After I returned home, I've been following your news, I know everything you've suffered, but I don't have the face to see you. I missed you too much, and I've been looking for the right time to appear in front of you again."

Joyce listened and took a deep breath.

She felt a sense of relief when she was clear about the past, and even the air around her felt extra fresh.

She tried to pull her hand back from Justin's grasp, but Justin held on to her firmly.

"Joyce, I have set up my own financial and venture capital company and have separated myself from the Henderson family bank. From now on, I will not be subject to anyone, much less to the Henderson family, so rest assured that the pain you once suffered will never happen again." He said solemnly.

Joyce sighed lightly, "Justin, in fact, the night before the World Shooting Championships, I agreed to meet with you, and I actually wanted to talk to you clearly. I hope you can understand that my feelings for you have never been love. It's just that at that time I was being chased and you had an accident. I have not been able to say these words again."

Justin's eyes dimmed, and he couldn't have known better.

He knew it too well that she did not love him and the reason why she agreed to meet him was to make everything clear. And it was precisely for this reason that he became so desperate that he gave himself up when he fell off the cliff and woke up to find himself unable to move his legs.
