Chapter 581

After Shelly left the military hospital, she went straight back to the city to go shopping.

Charlotte had sent her the list of things to be bought to her phone.

Although it was not really too much work, it was enough to keep her busy for a while in recent days.

The R&S Group was located in the heart of the city, and the most famous luxury street of the city was not far from the group's headquarters.

She wandered around the streets, looking for the right brooch for Charlotte.

When she passed a magnificent facade, she couldn't help but stop and look up when the sign of the Henderson family bank came into view.

She froze. When did the Henderson family bank take over the store and open a branch office here?

No, it was not a branch, but a high-end jewelry auction house.

She looked at the name of the company at the bottom and couldn't help but marvel.

Banking and auction were originally the same business, but she didn't expect Justin to get involved in the jewelry industry so soon.

Shelly spoke up instantly, "I'll give you a deposit later."

She would just pay whatever it would take to support Justin's business.

Besides, sooner or later, it would all still be hers.

"Yes, Miss. Here's your coffee."

The staff was overjoyed to receive the big order and became more attentive.

Shelly's eyes were drawn to another superb treasure.

It was located in the deepest part of the exhibition hall.

A separate display with special bulletproof glass on all four sides.

Illuminated by countless shining spotlights, a chic ring was presented in a black velvet box.

A clear, bright, radiant blue, clearer than the clearest stream, bluer than a sunny sky, and more brilliant than a vast sea of stars.

The light shone brightly, as if there was magic, and those

Justin's face turned gloomy and he turned to the staff and reprimanded, "This is my personal item. Did I allow you to bring it out for display? If I remember correctly, this cabinet should be displaying yellow diamonds."

The staff's voice trembled nervously, "Sorry, Mr. Henderson, we went to the bank vault this morning to pick up the goods, the list said blue ... blue diamonds. I'm sorry, Mr. Henderson, there must be a mistake somewhere."

It really wasn't her responsibility. They took the list to the Henderson family bank's private vault to withdraw the goods and the numbers were all correct.

Unless the number given to them was wrong to begin with.

Otherwise they could not even get the goods.

"Got it, I'll track it down. Such serious mistakes must not be allowed to be made again." Justin was not angry.

"I'm sorry, Mr. Henderson. I'll have the security company return the blue diamonds to the vault right away." The staff wiped the sweat on her forehead and returned with fear and trepidation.

The fine jewelry auction house had not yet officially opened and they had made such a major mistake.

What's even worse, they got caught by Mr. Henderson himself, so there was definitely no way they could get away from it.

Justin felt so upset, clenching his fists tightly, and the veins on the back of his hands were all popping up.

However, he did not want Shelly to notice, so he said with great calmness, "I saw it. So what?"

"You don't mind?" Shelly could not believe her ears, her beautiful eyes rounded and her expression nearly twisted.

"Living in the same room doesn't mean anything. Moreover, they are still married. It's all just reasonable. I have no reason to interfere."

Justin grimaced, "These media is making a fuss here."

He said, took out his cell phone and dialed the number of the station manager in charge of the media center.

Soon, a respectful voice came on the other end of the line, "Mr. Henderson, what can I do for you?"

"In the morning, the news about Joyce and Luther, and the photos, whatever you do and however much it costs, take them all down for me. This matter affects the Henderson family's reputation and I hope you will handle it properly."

After Joyce and Karl discussed the matter, Karl left first for something in the police station.

She finished her lunch and took the subway back to the R&S Group headquarters alone.

When she arrived at the headquarters and withstood the strange stares in the hall downstairs, she went to the automotive project team on the twelfth floor of the group, opened her computer and started working.

Yesterday afternoon they were all suddenly brought to the seaside town, and she had not returned until now. She was now quite behind her schedule already.

With Charlotte and Luther's engagement just days away, she had to finish her work on the new design at hand before they got engaged.

After that, she intended to leave R&S Group, but about what to do after that, she had not yet thought about it, so she would just take a step at a time.

Juanita made Joyce a mocha coffee and quietly came over to her, asking in a whisper.

"Joyce, why don't you say something?" Juanita nudged her gently, her expression more serious than usual, "Are you really going to marry Justin?"

"I won't." Joyce answered very seriously.

"Good. Let's have a nice chat tonight about your plans." Juanita said.

At that moment, Joyce's cell phone suddenly rang, and the screen lit up. It was Justin.

Juanita happened to catch a glimpse of it and gave Joyce a worried look.

Joyce didn't hesitate but just answer the phone in front of her, "Justin, is something wrong? I'm sorry about what happened this morning, and it wasn't like what was reported. Did it get you in trouble?"

"How come? That's not why I called you."

From the other end of the phone came Justin's gentle and clear voice.

It was as refreshing as the spring breeze in March.

"Last night, I called you and I wanted to talk to you. Since you had something to do last night, tonight is fine, Joyce, I want to meet you and we'll have dinner together, okay?"

Joyce got out of the cab and the restaurant Justin talked about was right in front of her.

She had heard of this restaurant and read about it in the promotional pages in food magazines. While it was right in the middle of the city, the surrounding had been surprisingly quiet. The layout and design of this restaurant used a pure European style, and the entire restaurant was surrounded by water features. It was nighttime, and the lights were lit up everywhere. The curtain-like waterfall surrounded the entire restaurant, and now illuminated by all the lights around it, it looked like a neon rainbow under the starry night.

In the middle of the water, the path leading to the restaurant was flanked by flowers, lilies and roses, red and white.

Every step was just romantic.

As Joyce walked, she felt that the atmosphere was a bit strange, and the restaurant was too grandly decorated. Now it's dinner time, there should be other people, but there was actually no one in the room.

By the time she entered the restaurant, it was indeed just what she thought it would be.

Justin booked the entire restaurant and there was no one inside.

Joyce instinctively retracted her hand.

No, she could not do that.

No matter how cruel this might sound, she could only say, "I'm sorry, Justin, thank you for your kindness. But I really can't accept it."

She reached out, put the ring back in its place, gently closed the box. She pulled him up off the floor, an apologetic smile on her lips, "I don't deserve it, you deserve better. Justin, you will find the girl who will love you with all her heart and treat you well. She's a better fit for this ring than I am."

A shimmer of sadness and despair suddenly came into Justin's eyes, and when he saw her trying to retract her hand, he hastily held her arm.

"Am I being too abrupt? I'm sorry, I was in a bit of a hurry. I can wait a little longer." It was not that he didn't hear her rejection, but he just didn't want to give up his last hope.

"There will be no other girl. I will never get married without you. The owner of this ring, can only be you." There was an unmistakable determination in his expression, "You know, I'll do what I say."

Shelly followed Joyce all the way to the restaurant and came to the front door, where she was stopped by the security guard.

"Sorry, Miss. The restaurant is holding an exclusive event today, please come back tomorrow." The security guard said.

"An exclusive event? A restaurant of this size?" Shelly was at first shocked and then angry. Justin threw a lot of money away, but it was for that bitch Joyce.

The restaurant doors were closed.

She poked her head in and looked hard.

When she saw the pathway into the restaurant flanked by lilies and roses, she certainly understood what Justin was about to do with Joyce tonight.

Just in the morning, Justin took away the blue diamond ring in front of her and she wondered if he was going to propose to Joyce, so she rushed to the R&S Group headquarters to keep an eye on Joyce. Just as she expected, Joyce took a taxi to the restaurant after work, and was definitely there to see Justin.

"Miss, you can't do that." The security guard stepped forward to block her sight. This woman was dressed quite fashionably, but she was poking around all the time, and he had no idea what she wanted to do.

"Jesus. How dare you look at me like that! I'll buy this place tomorrow. Do you believe it?!" Shelly glared hard at the security guard with dissatisfaction. Originally, she had been upset enough in her heart.

Sure enough, as she was about to walk off the overpass.

Suddenly, the black shadow that had been hiding in the crowd suddenly emerged and gave her a hard push on the back.

The intention of the shadow was very clear. It was just trying to push her down the stairs of the overpass.

Joyce was well prepared this time. She firmly held the handrail with one hand, and flipped over entirely with her back firmly against the railing. Although she stumbled a bit, she was not pushed down by the shadow.

That was close anyway!

The shadow, now that it had failed, hurried around and tried to hide in the crowd to cover its tracks.

Joyce's quick eye caught a glimpse of a discarded battery on the ground.

She quickly bent down to pick it up, and with a toss, the battery in her hand shot out like lightning.
