At that moment, the door of the room was vigorously pushed open.

The visitor was none other than Ralph.

Ralph, who was already in a very bad mood, was even more impatient when he heard the cries from the outside.

He just walked into the room and saw the bowl of finished porridge on the bed.

When he saw Charlotte lean in Cecelia's arms and cry almost her heart out, Ralph was even more angry.

"What are you crying for! Is it even time to eat?! You might as well starve to death!" Ralph roared.

Charlotte was shocked and cowered in Cecelia's arms.

Cecelia glared back at Ralph, "Can you talk properly? Charlotte was in a coma for ten days before she woke up."

"I never want to hear the word 'death' in this family again!"

"That's enough, cut the crap."

Cecelia was also angry, "Charlotte has been away from the family for twenty years."

"What have we ever done for our duty as her father and mother? Charlotte is too young to deal with an opponent as scheming as Ricky."

She jerked to her feet, "What's done can't be undone."

"Gossip, with time, will pass one day."

"Charlotte, Mom is taking you back to the Capital."

She turned and took Charlotte's hand, "Let's go back to the Capital. As for everything that happened here, we should just let it all go, and don't think about it anymore."

"Back ... back to the Capital?" Charlotte said, her lips trembling gently.

"Yes, back to the Capital."

In an ICU at Mufron.

Vicki, wearing a long elegant purple dress, stood in front of the glass window of the ICU, and inside was someone lying on the sickbed, connected with multiple tubes all over with a ventilator, and a heart rate monitor, which were beating steadily and orderly.

"Do you think she'll wake up?" Vicki folded her arms and raised her long eyebrows in a slight gaze.

"Definitely."

"Her willpower is exceptionally strong."

"Surviving after falling from such a high cliff."

"It's already a miracle."

Christian gazed at the sleeping person inside the glass room, "The child in her womb is even more tenacious. The mother is in a coma so far, yet the fetus is unharmed."

"Yeah. Fortunately we had been keeping a close eye on Ricky's movements."

"Christian, your intuition is accurate. When we found Ricky rushing to the cliff, we got the speedboat ready over there already."

"How did you know that someone would fall off the cliff?" Vicki asked with a slight roll of her eyes, curious.

"Damn Luther, you put Athena through that and never reflected on it after all these years, and now you've actually put even Joyce in a coma because of you."

"Damn it, damn it! In this life, I will never let you go!" He gritted his teeth and slammed a few more punches towards the wall in quick succession.

The walls in the hospital were made of diatomaceous earth, pitted and full of granules.

Instantly his knuckles bled, staining the wall red. He didn't even realize it yet, just lashing out in a rage.

"Stop it."

Vicki suddenly stepped forward and held Christian's wrist to stop him from hurting himself.

"I know you've had a deep love for Athena since she was a child, but six years have passed, and for good reason, you should move on from the pain of the past."

"Otherwise, you don't look like the Christian I know."

She took his hand, her long eyebrows furrowed, "You're bleeding. Just go bandage it up."

President's office at R&S Group headquarters.

Casey handed the information in his hand to Luther.

"President, here is the information about JK Intelligence from Mufron."

"This technology company has suddenly sprung up in Mufron in the last two years, and although the company is not large, it is gaining momentum. It is said that the executive president is also their chief designer."

"You mean, Miss Zora?" asked Luther, his eyes narrowing slightly.

"Yes, it's Miss Zora."

Casey hastily nodded, "Miss Zora suddenly became famous three years ago. It is said that the new sports car she designed, called 'Fallen Angel', won the highest international design awards."

Luther's eyes narrowed again.

"Is there a picture of this Zora? Any other personal information about her?"

"No."

Casey shook his head, "It was strange. It seems as if someone is protecting her."

"And we can't even have a photo of the famous Miss Zora."

"Even for those design awards, she only submitted her work and did not show up in person."

"I only heard that she is a very good-looking woman."

A woman that was both very good looking and passionate about car design.

It was quite rare for a woman to like car design.

Casey's heart thumped a bit. Indeed, Zora sounded just like Joyce, and no wonder the president was suddenly so interested in her.

Capital Airport.

After Luther and Casey arrived at the Capital, they found that this Miss Zora's flight would arrive at the Capital Airport at three, and Luther decided to pick her up himself.

He couldn't wait to see her.

Nor did he want to wait a single minute.

The flight arrived just as the car got to the airport.

Joyce walked out from the exit with her suitcase. She was wearing a black suit, and her beautiful black hair was permed into big wavy curls. Her stunning features, sexy and well-proportioned body, and wild but intellectual temperament immediately attracted everyone's attention.

She was followed by a young boy, who was wearing blue baseball clothes with a baseball cap sideways. His straight eyebrows and almond eyes then added augustness to his youthful cuteness.

He lazily followed Joyce, with a lollipop in his mouth, and although he was small, he had a swagger that could not be ignored.

"Anderson Knowles, keep your hat on straight, keep your eyes in front of you, don't look at the sky, put away your arrogance and walk properly."

Joyce turned back and glared at Anderson.

Joyce felt her forehead. This child was indeed smart and knew way too much than he should.

She felt overwhelmed and had a hard time dealing with him.

"Don't talk nonsense."

"Remember what I just said! Mom is now calling Uncle Kane to see if he's arrived at the airport yet."

The plane arrived much earlier today and her assistant, Kane Roberts, had not yet arrived at the airport.

She took out her cell phone, ready to call.

Not far away, a sneaky man saw Joyce crouching and talking to Anderson, with suitcases and handbags behind him.

He suddenly lunged forward, grabbed Joyce's wrist bag, and ran.

"A thief!" Someone around shouted out loud.

Joyce was startled and instinctively stood up and turned around to chase the man who had taken her bag.

She had an important hard drive in her bag. Although she had backups in the cloud, it would be troublesome if the originals were leaked out.

Anderson, on the other hand, stood calmly in place.

At this moment, Casey, who was standing aside, was almost stunned. The president took the initiative to go forward to hold a strange woman? Since Joyce disappeared four years ago, the president had never touched any woman. He didn't just have not touched any woman, but he had not stayed close to any woman.

It was even less likely that he would take the initiative to come forward and hold a woman.

However, Luther quickly came back to his senses, his brow furrowed, and his face instantly gloomy. He held her body upright and took a step back, his voice cold, "Be careful."

After Joyce could stand firmly.

She took a deep breath and tried to calm her heart down.

"Thanks."

She smiled faintly in appreciation.

Of course he couldn't recognize her, now that she was wearing a mask, and she did not even look like what she used to be.

Joyce had fallen into the sea and died! She was rescued by Christian, and slept in the hospital for five whole months before she woke up. It was the heart-wrenching pain in the abdomen when she was giving birth to Anderson that had waken her up.

When falling off the cliff, her first reaction was to firmly protect her belly, and fortunately, Anderson was hurt because of the cliff fall in her belly. With the nutrients from the IV fluids, he grew to be pretty strong. Although he was born one month before schedule, it did not affect his health in any way.

Earlier, she heard Kane say that R&S was interested in having a cooperation with them.

She wondered what kind of expression he would have when he found out that she was the CEO of JK Intelligence.

Luther kept walking. He was inexplicably angry, and he didn't know exactly what he was angry about.

When he saw the familiar back, he was only decisively out to help her.

Obviously, she was not Joyce, but why did it feel so familiar? Especially her eyes. Her eyes were harsh, cold, and prohibitive, just like those of Joyce's.

Just now, when she looked at him, there was clearly a wave of emotion in her eyes, but why? Did she know him before?

He thought and suddenly stopped in his tracks.

Behind him, Casey nearly ran into him.

At this point, Luther suddenly let out a low cry. It hurt quite a bit but the pain was not really severe. His arm seemed to be hit by something.

"President, what's wrong?" Casey asked anxiously.

Luther was silent, his stern gaze sweeping back and forth across the airport.
