

My Sweetheart

Chapter 11 I am Afraid My boyfriend will be Jealous

• • •

"Are you?" She didn't remember that she knew the rich man in this place.

"Billy. We had a blind date a few days ago." Billy squinted.

Kathy frowned and came to think of it.

"Oh, sorry, I remember now." Kathy smiled awkwardly.

"Why are you here?" Asked Billy.

Kathy didn't say anything, but Billy could see she must have some reasons not to tell, so he stopped continue.

"Going out? Let me take you." Billy got off the car and opened the passenger seat gentlemanly.

"No, no, no, I can walk." Kathy waved her hand.

"Are you afraid of your boyfriend will be jealous?" Billy squinted.

Kathy was a little embarrassed. Of course not. She just didn't want to have anything to do with Billy.

"Come on, I am also very busy, and I will only take you out of our residential area."

"There's a bus stop. I'll get off here." Once they were out of the residential area, Kathy pointed the opposite street.

"Thanks." Kathy thanked him again before she got off the car.

Billy leaned back in his chair and stared at Kathy's back. The scene of his blind date with Kathy a few days ago came to his mind.

If he didn't remember wrong, her boyfriend was Joseph?

The reason why she was here was because she was at Joseph's home. In that thought, there were some disheartened feelings in his eyes.

Nearby, the black Cayenne stopped at the corner of the residential area. The man in the driver's seat frowned as Kathy got out of the car.

He called, "Find out the owner of the car Z4599."

Kathy got on the bus and Joseph just followed slowly until the hospital called him back.

Kathy didn't see Joseph for the next week, and she was also busy interviewing for a new job. If the marriage certificate were not true, she would thought it was a dream that she had married to Joseph.

At this time, the phone rang. It was Kathy's bosom friend, Alexia. She had a headache for a period, so she wanted Kathy to accompany her to check in hospital.

Kathy was worried and immediately went to pick her up at Alexia's house. They lived near each other, just two streets' distance from Kathy's residential area.

Kathy hadn't told Alexia about the wedding, wondering how she could tell her this unexpected story later.

"Kathy, I have a bad headache. I don't know what's wrong." Getting into the cab, Alexia leaned over Kathy's shoulder.

"It will be fine, perhaps because that you were too busy on work recently and didn't rest enough."

Alexia was a pharmaceutical salesperson, and she often had business trip, so work overtime was inevitable. Gradually something went wrong with the body.

At the hospital, the nurse advised Alexia to go to the department of neurology according to her symptoms. Suddenly Alexia was in an excitement, "can I get check by Dr. Joseph?"

The nurse frowned. "If you want to check by Dr. Joseph, you must start registration one month ago. There is no any appointment now. "

Kathy was looking down at her phone and she looked up when heard that. She doubted that Alexia even also knew Joseph?

"I see." Alexia couldn't hide the disappointment on her face.

At this moment, someone behind Alexia tugged at her, who was holding Joseph's registration paper.

"Want to check by Dr. Joseph?" 'Whispered the woman.

Alexia nodded expectantly.

"A thousand dollars."

Kathy frowned, "She must be a scalper. One thousand? Want to rob us?"

But Alexia had happily accepted this deal without any hesitation.

Kathy looked confused and stopped Alexia. "Don't you think the scalper was lying to you?"

"Of course not. A thousand dollars is nothing if I can see Joseph!"

Kathy was devastated, but then she realized that if Alexia went to the doctor, she would also see him.

It's been a week. Why didn't he contact her?

"Kathy, what are you doing?" Alexia pulled her out of the elevator.

□□□□□□□□□□□□□□

• • •