Chapter 151 Will He Rescue You?

"Ah!" Herbert screamed as pain made her face paler.

Kingston walked in from the end and saw his daughter being kidnapped. He glared indignantly at Peter, "Peter, you let go of Herbert!"

Peter's face turned dark and dull as he found himself surrounded by bodyguards in black, and the only doorway out was also blocked.

The balcony at the back was not that high off the ground. If he didn't want to get caught, he could only leave from the balcony.

Seeing the bodyguards coming forward one by one, Peter raised the knife in his hand, "Don't come over! Otherwise, I would be stabbing your precious daughter in the face with this knife."

Herbert had already panicked so much that she couldn't even stand still, and looked at Peter with disappointment.

She was forced to break off her engagement with him, and still had some guilt, but it was all gone now.

"Peter, with so many people around, you can't escape," Herbert said calmly.

Peter held her back step by step, the bodyguards also moved forward step by step. Kingston looked at his daughter anxiously, worrying that Herbert will be abducted. He didn't dare to give an order.

Kathy was suddenly nervous. Billy definitely wouldn't come to save her.

The one he wanted to marry was Herbert...

"Peter." Once connected, Billy's voice was heard.

Kathy's face went pale, Billy, don't come over...

Looking at Kathy's pale face, Peter said in a low voice, "It's me, guess who I'm with now?"

"If you have something to say, say it!" Billy has little patience.

Peter laughed out softly, "If I capture both your fiancée and Kathy, who would you save?"

"Stop? It's impossible." The strength of Peter's hands tightened, and Kathy couldn't even make a sound.

Billy slightly tightened his fist, still looking at Peter calmly.

"Conditions? Who are you to make a deal with me?"

"You don't like her? And what if I kill her!" The viciousness in Billy's eyes surfaced.

Kathy tightly bit her lip. She was now weak as if she was about to lose her footing.

"What do you want me to do?" Billy asked coldly.

"I know that your Hilton family has been in politics for a long time, HY Group is now being asked to completely move to Africa. If you can speak to people from the top and revoke this decision, I'll let Kathy go."

Billy narrowed his eyes. Peter really investigated the Hilton family thoroughly.

Although the Hilton family was apparently in business now, they actually had more power in the political world behind the scenes.

Kathy tried to open her eyes and shook her head towards Billy, he absolutely couldn't agree to this, he couldn't let Peter have his way...

But now, Billy seemed to be shaken. Looking at Kathy's pale face, he pursed his thin lips and said sternly, "I can help you."

Peter was obviously surprised. He didn't think he would actually succeed. He repeatedly confirmed, "You're not lying to me, are you?"

"You let go of Kathy first, I'll call right away." Peter frowned suspiciously, the intensity slowly loosened up a bit.

Kathy coughed violently, almost about to fall, she glared angrily at Peter, "You're a scumbag, you know nothing but using women!"

Thinking about how she had been kidnapped repeatedly by Peter, Kathy was now full of anger.

When he was unaware, she stepped on Peter's foot mercilessly and pushed him away. When she ran outside, Billy hugged her in his arms.

The fear in Peter's eyes flickered, wanting to grab Kathy again, but it was obviously impossible. Billy kicked him away and shielded Kathy behind him.

Billy went to the same room as before, kicked open the door, and saw that Peter was tied to a chair, guards on both sides.

"Tz, tz, Peter, tell me how you ended up like this huh, threatening women to save yourself, it really makes people look down on you." Billy sat on the sofa opposite, in laziness and danger.

"If it weren't for Joseph and Kathy to frame me, I wouldn't have fallen to this point!" Peter gritted his teeth.

"If you don't mess with them, they won't retaliate against you, Peter, you are asking for trouble."

Peter pursed his lips, the look on his face was very unwilling.

"Since you don't help me, what are you holding me for now!" Peter said, dissatisfied.

"You hurt my fiance, do you think I'll just let you go?" Billy approached him and grabbed Peter's collar fiercely.

"You don't like Herbert at all, you like Kathy! I didn't expect a person that I don't want, would have so many people like her..."

Before he finished speaking, Billy kicked Peter fiercely, anger rising in his eyes.

"Peter, you really deserve to die!" Billy's tone was extremely angry.

"I only have one life now. You and I have no grievances, but I know that you have a deep hatred with Joseph."

Billy observantly squinted his eyes and kicked down on him again, "That is none of your business!"

"As long as you help me, I can help you too." Peter said solemnly.

Billy frowned and took a puff of his cigarette irritably. The smoke almost covered the sullen expression on his face.

He looked at Peter, the corner of his thin lips slightly raised.

"I don't dare to delay Master Fletcher, after all, you've been so concerned over me, I can't keep squeezing you, right?" Joseph raised his eyebrow and smiled.

"Hmph, if you don't let me stay, I'll go to Hilton Group." Lincoln said intentionally.

Joseph and he knew each other for a long time and didn't take it seriously. Initially, Lincoln was willing to come to the Joseph Group firstly because of Joseph, and another reason was that they had a common enemy.

"The Hilton Group acquired the Herbert Group and can be considered a merger. Kingston was a powerful figure in N City for the past few years. Billy's move was very conservative." When they started to talk about work, Joseph chillingly frowned.

In his estimation, Peter won't be bankrupt so easily.

"Even if they join forces with the Herbert Group, they are no match for our prowess. Joseph, after all these years, I can't endure it anymore." Lincoln coolly squinted his eyes.

The two of them chatted about work in the office. Lincoln just came back to N city and they called a few friends to join them at the bar that night.

"Joseph, do you want to call your wife along? I'm very curious about her." Lincoln held onto the wine glass and squinted his eyes.

After all, all this while Joseph isn't interested in womanizing and suddenly he was married. He was curious about how it happened.

"She's working at NCHV Medical Company. If you want to see her, come for a meeting tomorrow." At this moment, Johnson also came.

"So, who is she?" Seeing that Joseph was tightlipped, Lincoln turned and asked Johnson.

Johnson had a look at Joseph, raised his eyebrow, and said, "She's not in our circle of friends."

"So your grandfather agreed?" Lincoln asked.

"Grandfather accepted and he was very satisfied," Joseph said.

"Johnson, then I'll come for the meeting tomorrow." Lincoln looked at him and raised his glass.

Joseph frowned silently and checked on his phone, it was past midnight.

She should already be asleep.

At this moment, John walked in and leaned forward next to Joseph and said, "Billy mentioned to the higher-ups about the rejection, now HY Group temporary doesn't need to relocate to Africa."

Chapter 156 Public display of affection

The next day, the sun shone into the room lazily, Kathy turned around and realized that nobody was lying down next to her.

Joseph was drunk when he got home last night and he treated her roughly, but she couldn't reject him.

She freshened up and walked out with a resentful expression on her face, but then she saw a man in a suit making food in the kitchen, her anger quickly dissipated.

It was a bit chilly in the morning, Joseph turned his head as Kathy sneezed multiple times in a row behind him, he looked a bit concerned.

Kathy was only wearing a thin pyjama, she wanted to eat breakfast before getting dressed.

Joseph made a light soup noodle dish, the broth was nicely seasoned, the chicken oil he used made it very fragrant.

This man wasn't only super good-looking, he could cook very well too.

"Who did you drink together with last night?" Kathy had this question in her head for a while now.

She knew that it had to be some business partners, but they had a fight last night and Joseph didn't tell her anything.

Joseph sat down next to her, he mixed the garnish on the noodle well before giving Kathy the food.

He pondered briefly, he then went into the bedroom to grab a jacket and put it on her shoulders.

"Thanks," she muttered.

"The executives of the Joseph's Group, they are my friends," Joseph replied.

"I thought it was for business, so you had a gathering with your friends then?" Kathy looked at him calmly.

She felt like she tried to keep track of his matters more and more recently, she would get a bit sensitive at times.

She knew that she shouldn't, but she couldn't help it.

"Yeah, I'll bring you along to the next gathering if you're interested in coming," said Joseph affectionately.

Kathy raised her head, she was a bit surprised.

Before this, Joseph was always so busy with his work at the hospital that she couldn't even meet him for more than a second, not to mention social gatherings. She had never met any of his friends except for Johnson.

After he heard this Joseph raised his eyes, at this moment his expression that was usually calm was now rather apathetic.

"Are you looking for a fight?" Joseph leaned back in his chair, pinched his eyebrows together and relaxed his expression slightly.

"If you don't mind then I'll take you up on that offer." Lincoln said rather faithfully, and as he saw Edith enter he then said, "Edith if there is something you need then just say it."

Edith frowned, she had heard that Joseph was not in a good mood today so she came to check up on him, however with Lincoln also here, she decided not to ask too many questions.

"I'm new here, Sir, is there any work you want me to do?" Edith asked instead.

Joseph raised his head and instructed John to come in and take Edith out to find some tasks to do.

Lincoln narrowed his eyes as he saw Edith leave and then looked at Joseph and asked.

"I saw your pretty girl, but honestly speaking she is unsuitable for you." Lincoln pointed out sharply.

Johnson also said the same thing before. They both had grown up together with Joseph and therefore understood the Joseph family very well. The future woman of the house in the Joseph family must be beautiful, smart and absolutely a one in a million woman.

"If you have just come here to give me advice then you can please leave." Joseph said in the most polite way possible.

Lincoln touched his chin and noticed that Joseph had an unusually irritable mood today so he couldn't help but ask, "Did you argue with her today?"

"It's none of your business." Joseph frowned.

"Joseph, I noticed that Kathy seems both kind and gentle, and you like this type..." Lincoln recalled Kathy's calm appearance; however he felt that this girl also had thorns on her body.

It just was not certain when these thorns would prick Joseph.

“Mr. Fletcher, since you seem to be so unoccupied recently, there is a new project in South Africa, I want you to go oversee...”

“No, no! I will go help you do whatever you need me to do now. I can’t leave, I can’t leave City N!” Lincoln said angrily.

As he saw Lincoln leave, Joseph lowered his eyes and put his hands together.

After a while he called John inside and said, “Next week there will be a press conference and grandpa will also be attending, so please make any necessary arrangements.”

Seeing Joseph come out, she greeted, "Mr Joseph, it's raining heavily outside. Do you want to wait for the rain to stop before you leave? I just ordered supper for you."

The voice trailed off as the receptionist had already brought in the takeaway box.

Joseph stopped walking, his eyes stared at his watch and shook his head, "No, I'm going home, you should go home early too."

The disappointment in Edith's eyes flickered away. A while later, she spoke again in a low voice, "I don't have an umbrella today, and I'm not driving. I'm afraid it's not good to go back."

"I'll send you back first," Joseph said in a deep voice.

Edith quickly followed, only to be rejected by Joseph as she subconsciously got into the passenger seat.

"This is Mrs Joseph's seat."

"Joseph, you're really getting making things awkward for me now." Edith couldn't help but sound angry.

She had also known Joseph for many years. Although she hadn't been very close to Joseph before, she wouldn't be as distant as she was now.

"Edith, you're my classmate and someone I admire, but that's all." Joseph's voice was dull.

Edith looked out the window, the fog in her eyes grew deeper and deeper. A while later, she saw NCHV Medical Company approaching.

Kathy had just come out and was planning to take a taxi back, but there were few cars on this rainy day. She hadn't been able to get into a car even after she was drenched from standing at the side of the road.

A black Maybach slowly stopped beside her. Kathy was stunned and soon saw that it was Joseph's car.

How did he come over?

She thought that he had already gone home.

Kathy stood at the side of the road, she backed up a few steps but just didn't get into the car.

Through the car window, Joseph's eyes froze as he honked the horn.

Soon he left and closed the door too hard.
Kathy realized that there was only herself in the house with full of loneliness.
She would not live here anymore if getting divorced from Joseph.
Kathy burst into tears when she thought that Joseph would be here with another woman in future.
She felt so cold that curling up on the couch.
Her dress was drying. Now she felt too hot. Then she kept turning over in a coma.
Still in the community, Joseph stayed in his car where there were cigarettes in the storage box from Lincoln.
He never smoked but at this moment only nicotine can calm him down.
He recalled himself of some old memories when he was six years old.
That time he met Kathy for the first time; she was a three-year old girl in a white floral dress with two cute plaits.
The head of the orphanage was annoyed at him and said, "Don't be silly. You are a big boy. Be open please. Some family will take you."

“You have stayed here for so long time. Many kids coming after you already left.”

Joseph frowned. He was going to turn around and get out. But Kathy subconsciously grabbed his wrist and held it to her chest.

The desire he had had such a hard time controlling seemed to burn again all at once. He became expressionless, and then he pulled his hand out and walked out of the room.

The following day, Kathy slept until almost noon time. She looked at the clock and realized she hadn't taken the day off!

She took off the fever reducer and called Alexia immediately. But she was told that she had taken the day off.

"It was Dr. Joseph who called me. He said you have a fever. Kathy, you should get some rest," Alexia said.

Kathy frowned. She didn't want that man meddling in her affairs.

"I'm divorcing him." Thinking of what happened last night, Kathy said quietly.

"What? Kathy, it's not April Fool's Day. Don't be ridiculous." It was obvious Alexia just didn't believe her.

Kathy rolled her eyes. Forget it. She'd had the same attitude when she'd wanted Alexia to believe she was married. Anyway, she'd find out late.

After hanging up the phone, she didn't have to go to the office. She was a little hungry, so she planned to cook something to eat.

The maids came up to the kitchen every day to put away the ingredients. Kathy simply cooked the noodles. When she sat down, she saw a contract on the table.

Her heart trembled and she flipped through the pages.

On it was a detailed record of her financial troubles with Joseph over the past six months. The largest amount was for the renovation of Kathy's family, which amounted to millions.

She froze. Yes. That house was all smashed up and now it's brand new in less than a month. The cost of renovation plus furniture must have been a lot. She just didn't expect the materials used to be the best, so of course the cost was high.

She plopped down on the couch. If she were to divorce Joseph, she'd almost have to pay him back two million...

Didn't they get divorced?
