My Sweetheart

Chapter 161 Habit of Denying

Now, Kathy was lying on her bed reading today's news of the Joseph's Group, it was almost contented with the photos of Joseph and Edith Wesley walking together. Even the media suspected that Edith was Joseph's wife, otherwise, why did they attend the significant event together.

Out of the blue, someone opened the door and attracted Kathy's attention. She looked up, seeing Joseph's tall physique walked in.

She got down her bed instantaneously, staring at him vigilantly.

Angela walked out from the back, "Daughter, it's quite late now, I think Dr. Joseph is tired too, both of you just sleep here today."

"Cannot!" Kathy instantly rejected; she did not want to stay with Joseph in the same room even for one second.

However, Joseph gave Kathy an intimate hug on her head, making her unable to move, "Listen to your mom, I don't want to go in and out so many times."

Kathy was speechless.

Angela smiled subconsciously, "Joseph, please don't loathe our house, it's small but warm, I go out then, don't want to disturb you."

"Goodnight, mom," Joseph said politely.

Kathy was still having her face motionless, wanted to push Joseph aside, but Joseph pushed her to the wall strongly. He looked at her from top, squinting his black eyes.

Not knowing when did he take away her phone, he moved his lips banteringly, "What do you want to know about? Ask me straight away."

Kathy turned away her head, biting her lips and not saying a word.

She wanted to get her phone back, Joseph raised his hand high, she could not reach it.

"I don't want to know anything," Kathy said in cool tone.

"When can Mrs. Joseph change her habit of denying, hum?" he raised her chin with calm and steady sight.

Kathy was angry and bit her lips, "When can you change your habit of bullying me frequently!"

"How do I bully you?" Joseph said with innocent face.

"How did you... on my bed..." Kathy pointed at him angrily.

Joseph grinned, "Close the door first."

Only then did Kathy react, immediately locking the door and handing the clothes to Joseph.

After doing these actions, she turned around. Her heartbeat was unable to calm down for a long time.

"Mrs Joseph, it's not like you haven't seen it before. What are you ashamed of? Hmm?" Joseph stared at her face with a gentle smile on his lips.

The sunlight from the window peeked in, making his features even more profound and captivating.

Kathy stayed and watched as Joseph put on his shirt but stopped at the first button. He said to Kathy, "Button it up for me."

Kathy frowned, looking at Joseph's well-built body up close, she wanted to squeeze them so much...

Every inch of his body was full of temptation, and Kathy's eyes rested on his body until Joseph reminded her that she had buttoned the wrong button!

How could such a stupid thing happen to her!

Kathy was irritated and simply let go of her hand, "No more buttoning."

Joseph grabbed her small hand, "Be good, no quitting halfway."

Now whatever Joseph said was incomparably provocative to Kathy's ears.

However, she couldn't compromise, so Kathy turned her head, no longer looking at him.

Behind her, Joseph's low laughter sounded, "Does it look good?"

Kathy pretended not to understand what he was asking.

"Kathy, you are legally married, so who cares if you are a real or fake couple. If he makes up his mind to divorce, he has to divide his property anyway!"

"Alexia, both of us are supposed to get what we want, I just want to end this relationship, nothing more."

"But don't you owe him two million dollars now!"

"I'll find a way to pay him back."

Alexia had a hopeless expression on her face, and after a pause, she spoke, "If you really want to divorce and end this relationship, I can lend you the money first. But Kathy, Dr Joseph is a dragon among men, you don't want to give him up to another woman for nothing."

Kathy sipped her juice. Her mind couldn't help but imagine that after divorcing Joseph, if he married another woman, it would be so hard to even think about it.

"No!" Kathy suddenly shook her head, she couldn't take it.

"Kathy, as a friend I'll do my best to help you, but I hope you can think it through."

Across the door, Johnson elegantly cut the western food on his plate, but the tip of his lips couldn't help but curl up.

He dialled Joseph's phone number.

"I seem to know something interesting."

"Say it." Joseph's tone was indifferent.

"Your wife is suspicious of your sexual orientation and wants to divorce you. Joseph, how did you mess up like this..." before he could finish speaking, Johnson couldn't help but burst out in laughter.

Over there, Joseph put down the phone with a "pop".

His dark eyes gradually narrowed, remembering that Kathy was acting weirdly in the past two days. She repeatedly mentioned to divorce, is it because of this?

Hell, if he was gay, she'd be begging for more every day!

With no mood at work, Joseph left the office in a hurry. Lincoln greeted, looking at Joseph's dull face, he could not help but catch up with him.

The fact that Joseph, who seldom displayed many expressions on his face, was angry? And it was a lot of anger!

"Dude, who messed with you? Let's see if I can relieve you of your worries." Lincoln also followed into the elevator.

"You... of course you're not normal. You don't like it, but you kissed me, and you even..." Kathy was unable to utter the next words.

She felt that her relationship with Joseph was simply monstrous!

She had to break it off!

If she hadn't been so close to him, she would have been able to play the role of his wife, but now she wanted to face her own heart.

"Even what? Don't you like that, Mrs Joseph?" His voice was low and deadly, like a violin playing her heartstrings.

Kathy's heart trembled, what did Joseph mean?

She liked... none of this!

Who said she liked it?

"Don't like it? Then usually your voice was so..." his words fell on her ears, causing Kathy's face to explode in redness.

Raising her hand to immediately cover his mouth, what did he even say!

Kathy couldn't help but glare at him, "That's my normal reaction!"

"No, Mrs Joseph, that's called emotion." Joseph looked like he was giving a lecture.

Kathy, however, was so unhappy that she gritted her teeth, not wanting to hear him speak. She simply covered her ears.

But Joseph refused to let her go, tugging down her hand and bending down, his handsome face leaning extremely close as if he was about to kiss her again.

But he didn't, he just said word by word in a low voice, "Just don't want to admit that you like me, eh?"

Kathy only felt a bang in her brain, and Joseph's eyes were able to explain everything.

So, he knew everything.

She lowered her head, pushed him away and ran away. But before she ran out of the bedroom, he caught her in his arms. He narrowed his eyes, "First, tell me why did you suspect my sexual orientation."

Kathy scratched her head, apprehensive about Joseph's deep gaze, "You refused to divorce, so I assumed that you wanted to relieve family pressure, but perhaps the deeper reason was that you didn't want to expose your abnormal sexual orientation."

As soon as the words trailed off, Joseph helplessly rubbed her head, and the tightness eased considerably.

Chapter 165 Would You Take Me Upstairs

Nighttime had settled, life in this vibrant city had just begun.

Kathy hastily walked into the clubhouse, she found out which private room Alexia was in by asking one of the workers there.

The smell of alcohol and tobacco blown in her face the moment she opened the door. She slightly coughed and proceeded to sit next to Alexia. The other person in the private room was the executive of LS Group, he was a middle-aged man, probably somewhere around 40 years old.

"Kathy is a colleague of mine working at the sales department, Mr. Lowe, here is the contract," Alexia passed him the document.

Alexia obviously had some drinks as she was looking flushed, Kathy was a bit worried about her.

Kathy stopped Alexia as she was going to down another glass of alcohol, "I'll drink it for you."

Alexia snatched the glass over and said, "Don't be silly, you get drunk over a glass. I don't want to have to carry you home."

Kathy frowned, she watched Alexia as she gulped the drinks. She knew that Alexia can hold her liquor, but drinking this much was a bit dangerous.

"I'll be needing a bit more time to look over the contract, Miss Alexia, how about we go for a second round?" The man squinted his eyes, he told his assistant to leave first and he walked towards Alexia.

Alexia was smiling brightly, "Then, how about the lounge?"

The man grimaced, "Let's go to the hotel I'm staying at, there's no crowd and we could talk comfortably."

He looked at Kathy after he said that, his smile was disgusting, "Miss Kathy, do come with us."

"Kathy is busy, Mr. Lowe, I'll go with you," Alexia winked at Kathy, telling her to head back first.

But Kathy couldn't bring herself to leave, this man was obviously scheming something, Alexia would be in trouble if Kathy were to leave.

Alexia's face turned sour, she worriedly glanced at Kathy who was following her. The man suddenly yanked Alexia to her side as they were about to walk out of the clubhouse, "Miss Kathy can come along if she wants to."

"Mr. Lowe, let's not waste her time, she is not a part of this project anyways."

"Let's see what Miss Kathy says," The man looked straight into Kathy's eyes.

Kathy felt uncomfortable, she wanted to leave so badly but she needed Alexia to leave with her as well.

Joseph's face darkened, he made a signal and two bodyguards quickly came over, "I can't do that, don't worry, they will protect you."

Joseph turned around and walked away briskly.

Edith stared at his cold figure and clenched her fist, there was a hint of dissatisfaction in her eyes.

Kathy was going through a rollercoaster ride of emotions, her agitation only dissipated when Joseph left after pushing Edith's hand away.

She smiled but unconsciously thought, "Miss Edith still relies on Joseph a lot."

Otherwise, she wouldn't be holding on him for so long just now.

But then she felt a bit upset.

Edith and Joseph met up late at night, it couldn't be to discuss some business matter.

She then walked towards the entrance and tried to hail a cab. Suddenly, she noticed Joseph standing right next to his black Maybach, his hands in his pockets, his eyes squinted staring straight at her.

He looked like he was waiting for someone...

Was he waiting for her?

Kathy grimaced as Joseph walked towards her.

"Why did you wait for me?" Kathy was still mad, she stepped away from him.

But Joseph managed to scoop her into his embrace with his long arms.

He pressed his head on her forehead, his voice deep and sultry, "You can see the whole lobby with that window over there."

Joseph pointed at a French window on the west side of the hotel.

Kathy looked at where he was pointing and realized that it was true, but that would mean that he knew that she was hiding behind the pillar from the start.

She hung her head low out of embarrassment, she didn't hide on purpose.

She then raised her head, she justly and forcefully questioned him, "So you went out in the middle of the night to comfort Edith?"

Joseph frowned, he placed his palms on her slightly cold cheeks, "Edith was pestered by her uncle, I wasn't comforting her, I was just sending her home."

Chapter 167 Hand in Hand with a Coquettish Woman

Edith was surprised, but she quickly regained her composure, "Yes Mr. Joseph, I'll go get ready immediately."

Lincoln got closer after Edith left, "What are you doing? Edith is not just another woman."

"And?" Joseph answered lazily while he laid his back on the chair, his tone frigid.

"You should bring Kathy along instead! The media will definitely cause gossip and rumours if you make Edith accompany you tonight!" Lincoln reminded him.

The reporters had written articles about Joseph and Edith being an item after they attended the Joseph's Group conference together last time, having Edith with him tonight would only make the rumours spread even more.

Though, what happened would sit well with Edith.

"They can write whatever they want," Joseph didn't care.

Lincoln was boiling with anger, he thought Joseph and Kathy were madly in love but that didn't seem to be the case.

Kathy was still working in the evening as she received a call from Alexia.

"Kathy, why aren't you at the Joseph's Group banquet?"

Alexia attended the banquet with Johnson, she found out that Kathy was absent and made a call nervously.

"I have to work overtime tonight," Kathy frowned.

"It's not the time for overtime! Right now, Joseph is hand in hand with a coquettish woman..."

Kathy frowned harder, a coquettish woman?

She immediately thought of Edith.

"Well, I rejected Joseph because we have a business trip tomorrow, I'm still preparing the documents."

"Kathy, I'm going to yank you here right now! I can't stand it anymore, the woman is acting as if she is the host of the banquet...."

Alexia's phone was suddenly taken away by Johnson.

She glared at him furiously, he then said, "It's none of your business, don't be nosy."

"Tsk tsk, you are far from the Mrs. Joseph I had imagined." Lincoln looked away.

"Oh? Then how do you think that Mrs. Joseph should be?" Kathy asked.

She also wanted to know how Joseph's friends think of her.

Lincoln rubbed his chin and pointed to the bar counter outside the full-length window. Over there, Joseph was in discussion with a senior manager and Edith was pouring wine for the two of them and said something occasionally. She was gentle and well-behaved.

She stood beside Joseph. They looked like a heaven-made match.

Kathy laughed, "In terms of beauty or capability, Edith is far better than me."

"It's good that you are aware of your limitations, but I think of it this way. Joseph is naturally talented and intelligent. He was admitted to Harvard at sixteen, at twenty he received the Master's degree for Neurosurgery and completed numerous complex surgeries. In our eyes, he is unmatched. Perhaps he needs to find a balance."

Kathy frowned and didn't quite understand.

“You are the type that he seldom interacts with and that’s why he is interested in you. In his twenty eight years, the women in Joseph’s life were all beautiful and intelligent. He may be tired of those.”

Kathy was speechless.

Was he trying to insult her?

Although Billy looked like a playboy and a sloth, he held the authority of the Hilton Group and his words are profound while not leaking details but yet understood the market deeply and was full of confidence.

He was so profound that she couldn't fully understand him. Kathy felt that she should keep a distance from this kind of man.

"Frustrated and feeling bored?" Billy saw that she was uncomfortable but he was feeling great and smirked.

Kathy glared at him and took a step back, "Since you are talking about work with me by your side, aren't you afraid that I'll hear your secrets?"

Billy looked down and laughed, "If you can understand, then I will spend whatever it takes to pull you over to the Hilton Group."

Kathy rolled her eyes and didn't bother with Billy. He was quickly surrounded by others and didn't follow her.

She looked around and didn't see Joseph and Edith. Matthew was talking enthusiastically to several shareholders of the Joseph group. She didn't intend to come tonight and also it didn't concern her, so she decided to leave.

Leaving by the entrance was too obvious so she went to a side door.

Edith saw Kathy from the second floor and squinted in anger and she almost crushed the wine glass in her hands.

She called the waiter over, "The side door has a safety staircase. Lock up the internal and external doors to it.

“Yes, Miss Wesley.”

With her eyebrows raised, she turns and sees Joseph talking to the guests not far away. She smiled warmly and walked over.

Kathy saw the exit and the staircase was lighted so it wasn't frightening. She goes down the staircase in her flats quietly and could hear the door behind her being locked.

She quickens her steps and practically ran down to the door but it was also locked as she reached it.

At this moment, the light overhead became dim and then the staircase plunged into darkness.

Conor toasted to her and said, "We are destined to meet each other. So today shall we talk about the old times?"

Edith did not answer and from her pallid face, she seemed indifferent to his words.

Joseph pushed her slightly and said, "Edith, since your parents have already arranged this for you, just accept it."

This was a warning as well as a threat.

Edith burst into tears; although she knew how cruel the man was, she still expected him to be nice to her.

However, she never imagined he was so mean to let her marry the other man.

Edith took a deep breath and kept calm. She turned to look at the man beside her and asked, "You would like me to do this?"

Joseph had some wine and answered grimly, "Edith, I am married."

What he said made Edith almost furious, but she did not leave yet.

Zain heard Joseph's reply to Edith and was also annoyed to say, "Joseph, how can you determine Edith's marriage for her?"

Joseph looked up and watched Zain, "Edith lived in my family since she was a child. You, as her uncle, did nothing for her and never visited her except asking for money. So, you are her guardian?"

Then, everyone looked at Zain in irony and anger.
