Chapter 241 She Couldn't Help but Suspect Him

Kathy wanted to escape. Joseph pressed down and stopped her.

"Mrs. Joseph, I have the final say in this marriage," Joseph said coldly.

"Joseph, we're equal!"

"Yes, I agree. I respect you, do I?"

"You helped those who hurt me. Did you show your respect by that?" Kathy sneered.

Joseph squinted his eyes coldly and said, "I didn't help Herbert."

"Who did that?" Kathy looked at him.

"I will take revenge on those who hurt you!" Joseph's voice softened.

However, Kathy didn't believe him. Herbert slandered NCHV Medical Company for producing fake medicines. Although they had the evidence, Joseph didn't sue Herbert.

Herbert was involved in the bribery case, but she was able to mitigate her punishment. Kathy saw that Herbert was in Joseph's car.

Kathy couldn't help but suspect him.

She didn't want to suspect him.

"Joseph, I don't need your help. We can't interfere with each other," Kathy said indifferently.

"Can you do it?" Joseph was unhappy. He observed her expressions.

He noticed that she hesitated.

How could she do that?

She wanted to control herself, but she fell in love with Joseph.

"I can," Kathy said angrily.

Even if she couldn't, she had to control herself.

If she couldn't get a divorce, at least she had to stay away from him. She must control herself.

"If you didn't go back to the Joseph Bay, I would stay here." Joseph stepped back. His voice became gentler.

"It's none of my business." She was indifferent. She wanted to leave.

Joseph grabbed his wrist and said, "Let's eat before leaving."

"I have no appetite!"

It was still raining. She tossed and turned. She couldn't fall asleep.

She heard the thunder and opened her eyes.

Unexpectedly, Joseph was beside her.

He held her slender waist. They were intimate.

Wasn't he in the living room?

Kathy tried to push him away, but she failed.

He said in a hoarse voice, "Let me accompany you."

Kathy bit her lips and wanted to refuse, but she nodded honestly.

She was scared. She wanted to stay by his side.

However, she didn't want to continue like this.

"I won't lie on the bed. I'll hug you like this." Knowing that Kathy resisted, Joseph sat beside the bed.

Kathy turned her back to him, but she was sober.

The rain stopped. It was quiet in the room. The sound of breathing could be heard.

Kathy turned around and noticed that Joseph was looking at her.

"I'm going to sleep. Have a good night."

“Good night, Mrs. Joseph.” He closed the door when he went out.

Kathy stopped him.

“Leave the door open.”

Joseph nodded and lay on the sofa. He didn’t tuck himself in and closed his eyes.

She could see his back vaguely through the corridor.

The next day, it was sunny. The bedroom was bright.

Kathy had her schedule. She got up at eight o’clock on time.

Joseph had left.

He made the sweet pumpkin porridge. Kathy liked it.

There was a note next to it, “Mrs. Joseph, have breakfast and study hard.”

Joseph encouraged her.

She took a deep breath, threw the note away and left.

Joseph opened her bag. Kathy wanted to take it back.

“Don’t move. I’ll help you check if you’ve brought everything,” Joseph said seriously.

Joseph was like her parents.

“The pencil is broken.”

He opened her pencil case and held the pencil.

Kathy looked at the pencil. It was broken. She didn’t notice it.

She only had this one.

“Buy it near the school where I take the exam,” Kathy said.

Joseph took out a row of pencils from the locker and placed them in her pencil case.

Kathy was surprised. When did Joseph buy so many pencils?

“You...”

“I’m afraid you’ll forget,” Joseph said.

Kathy was touched. However, the man in front of her was Joseph. She calmed down.

“Thank you.”

“Alright, everything is ready.” Joseph handed her the bag.

Kathy wanted to call him “Mom”...

She looked down and smiled.

She was still happy when she was in the exam classroom. When she answered the questions, she recalled how Joseph checked the stationery for her.

She couldn’t help but laugh.

The invigilator frowned and came over to reprimand her, “Answer the questions seriously.”

Kathy was embarrassed. She concentrated on the exam.

Time flew. Joseph was waiting for her outside.

He leaned against the car door. His handsome face attracted the attention of many students.

A bold student ran over and said, “Dr. Joseph, is it you?”

Joseph had gotten used to it, but he was worried about Kathy. He was gloomy.

Jennifer was waiting in the dining room. When she saw them, she smiled kindly.

"Hi, Kathy."

Kathy smiled and sat down beside Jennifer.

"Mrs. Hilton," she greeted politely.

Jennifer felt uneasy, but she kept silent.

"Do you like the dishes?" Jennifer looked at Kathy expectantly.

Kathy wasn't familiar with her. Kathy said flatly, "I like them."

The dishes were normal and delicious, but they weren't the taste of home for Kathy.

The atmosphere was harmonious. Billy livened their conversation up. He was considerate towards Kathy.

On the other hand, his attitude towards Jennifer was cold.

Kathy ate quietly and answered every question, but she wasn't enthusiastic.

After dinner, she and Jennifer had a walk in the garden.

The peaceful atmosphere was temporary.

"Kathy, I owe you an apology," Jennifer said heavily.

Kathy pursed her lips and looked at Jennifer. Perhaps because Kathy hadn't lived with Jennifer since childhood, Kathy was indifferent towards Jennifer.

"Mrs. Hilton, it's all over. You have your reasons. You handed me over to Angela, but you didn't abandon me," Kathy smiled.

At least, Jennifer asked Angela to take care of Kathy.

Jennifer didn't abandon her.

"Kathy, I want you to come back to my side. Do you agree?" Jennifer was sad.

Jennifer wanted to make it up to her.

Kathy paused and said, "I live a good life."

Jennifer's eyes were filled with tears. She trembled. She was delicate in front of Kathy.

Jennifer sniffed, "I see, but I'm worried about you. I'm worried that the Josephs will hurt you."

Jennifer had the same thoughts to the Josephs as Billy.

Kathy frowned, "Mrs. Hilton, don't worry. No one hurt me."

"I think too much. You have a good relationship with Joseph," Jennifer smiled bitterly.

Kathy smiled, the answer she got was the answer she expected.

But hearing it directly made her terribly uncomfortable.

"Then don't treat me so nicely, alright?" Kathy asked in a soft voice.

Didn't he know that she would step right into his trap like that?

She wasn't like him.

Joseph squinted his eyes, there was an obscure look in his eyes.

"I'll allow you to fall in love with me."

He said in a deep voice after staying silent for a while.

Kathy looked up, her eyes were red.

How about him?

Well, the truth could already be found in his answer.

"I don't like you," answered Kathy coldly as she took a deep breath.

"Mrs. Joseph, you are the only person that I'll be nice to. This is my promise to you." Joseph then kissed Kathy on the lips.

He was so gentle, yet so lethal.

Kathy pushed him away coldly.

She was back in Joseph bay again, everything was still as familiar and nothing had changed.

But this time her state of mind had been turned upside down.

Kathy felt relief the next day as Joseph had to go on a business trip.

Sue was looking into some matters for Kathy in City N, but there was no outcome.

The fact that the Fletcher family couldn't find dirt on the incident could only mean that the person behind Herbert, was somebody even more powerful and mysterious than the Fletchers.

"Let's go shopping nearby, it's not good for you to stay home all day and not leave the house," said Sue to Kathy as she came by.

Kathy accepted the suggestion happily, she would love to go out and shop. It was just that she was preparing for the exam for so long, her studious mood was still there, and she was used to be reading all the time.

Sue was a pretty woman and she had very refined makeup on. She turned many heads at the shopping district.

But it seemed like she was used to attracting attention.

"Well, even I couldn't do anything about Joseph. The Joseph family is a family of mystery."

"Can you tell me what you know about the Joseph family?" asked Kathy.

She wanted to know more about the man she married.

"I don't know much, I got all my information from Lincoln. They started out in country C and practically monopolized the resources of that country. But they were very quiet about it and nobody knew about it. Lincoln told me that Joseph was fighting someone when he first saw Joseph."

"He was in a fight?"

Kathy was taken aback, she couldn't imagine the gentle and elegant Joseph would've experienced something like that.

Sue nodded, "Joseph was only 12 back then, the person he was fighting in the hotel was his biological father. Lincoln was in the hotel at that time and that was how they got to know each other. In our impression, Joseph was always cold and merciless. I only realized how much he had changed when I came back here and saw him again."

Kathy grimaced, she didn't dare to imagine the scene that Sue had just described to her. Why did Joseph do that?

Maybe because he was disappointed.

"I don't know much, maybe I'll go talk gossip with Lincoln again when I'm free. But maybe I don't have the chance anymore." Sue let out a long sigh.

She had a very charming expression on her face whenever she mentioned Lincoln.

But at the same time, she looked very dejected.

"Sue, I will accept everything if he tells me the truth. Only if he is willing to tell me the truth," said Kathy in a soft voice.

Just when would he finally open up to her?

Suddenly, a group of more than ten men rushed into the shopping centre from outside, they looked like bodyguards. Sue looked down from the top floor, she was obviously flustered.

Those men were people working under her grandfather, what business would they possibly have here?

"Kathy, let's go that way." Sue pulled Kathy and started running away.

Kathy looked behind and the men were chasing after them, she was shocked.

She followed Sue and ran through the top floor, there was another shopping centre on the opposite of the building.

But they couldn't make it in time.

The bodyguards were swift, Sue and Kathy were surrounded on the attic in no time.

"Miss, the master orders you to return immediately."

Sue bit down hard on her lips, she was still looking for a way to escape.

But the only thing she could do right now was to jump off the building.

And she didn't have the guts.

“Sue, who are these people?” asked Kathy worriedly.

Chapter 247

When Joseph came back three days later, Kathy was sitting on a recliner in the balcony to have a nap, the book in her hand off on the ground.

Joseph opened the door to see Kathy sleeping peacefully.

She had too white skin which looked more radiant under the sunshine.

She wore her long hair down; the hairstyle made her face appear amazing and he was obsessed with it.

Joseph looked at Kathy quietly.

He bent over and raised his finger.

The moment he was touching Kathy, she opened her eyes.

In fact, she knew he was here as soon as he came in.

She only tried to avoid him.

When Joseph got closer, Kathy was some of nervous as well as at a loss about what to do.

She said, "You..."

Before she talked more, Joseph stopped her with one finger on her lips.

He started to say, "Kathy, I am home."

Then he gave her a soft kiss on the forehead.

Kathy felt so relieved to close her eyes.

Right now, Joseph moved his finger on her lips and put his own lips there instead.

He kissed her for a while and finished.

Kathy became too much blush for his kiss.

Her fingers were against his chest. She told him, "The maid will not be here tonight."

Kathy had always been to market and cooking by herself these days; she enjoyed the easy life.

So, Joseph asked her, "Are you going to the super market with me?" He was still in a suit and looked tired with dark circles under his eyes.

Kathy should raise her hands, but got them back all of sudden.

"Sure." she answered simply with no special look.

It was a weekday when there were not many customers in the super market.

Kathy was aware how attractive Joseph was among the folk and she also became the central one of all to be with him.

They were around the fresh food. Joseph asked her, "What would you like to eat today?"

In the house of Fletcher's family in Country C, Joseph's private airplane landed on the rooftop of the house where Joseph could walk to the manor for the event tonight.

The slim Kathy was in a pure white dress. She did not tie up her long hair and the beautiful clavicle was there.

She followed Joseph to walk, with her hands being held by him.

The Fletcher's family was a top wealthy family in Country C. Their attending guests were super rich and very important in many businesses.

To Kathy, she also knew someone of them.

Many celebrities were decked out to be here.

To her surprise, Kathy saw Johnson.

He held a woman whom Kathy did not know.

But Kathy did not care about that, just to know how Sue was going. She whispered to Joseph, "I have to go to the restroom."

Joseph headed down to say, "Let me know any of your problem."

He was always the focus of an event. Everyone would like to have a chat with him, soon he was surrounded by the other guests after Kathy leaving.

It was certain that a lot of invited ladies tried to chat with him; to make them unhappy, Joseph's eyes always tried to catch Kathy.

It did not take much time for Kathy to find Sue in the main house with a map.

Sue was excited to meet Kathy as well see Kathy in the brilliant dress from her. She said, "Hey girl, you look so nice!"

Kathy was perfectly slim in the dress.

She smiled to Sue. In fact, she did not have some other formal dresses at home and had to put on the pure white one with spaghetti strap for the dress code of the event tonight.

She kept in mind that how much Joseph looked at her on the way here.

It was just like a tiger kept looking at a rabbit.

Sue and Kathy went to the balcony of the third floor where everything of the manor would be in their sight.

Sue pointed to a man in royal blue suit, also surrounded by several women. She said, "I am arranged to date with him." That was Bertie Marshall.

Kathy had a look at the handsome man over there.

Nevertheless, Sue would not fall in love with him.

She said to Kathy, "Kathy, I need your help. Please go to talk with him for some minutes and I will leave here. You have to ensure he will not notice I am out."

“My dear fiancée.”

There was still a little distance left from the gate of the manor when Bertie walked over.

Kathy frowned and looked at him warily, “Sir, I told you I am not Sue.”

Bertie paid no attention to her words, instead he said, “My mother is here, Miss Sue. Would you not like to accompany me to meet her?”

Kathy looked up at him angrily, “Please stop harassing me. I don’t know you.”

“If you don’t cooperate with me in acting, you won’t be able to leave tonight.” Bertie approached her again and wrapped his long arms around her slender waist.

She was wrapped in his embrace.

Kathy was trembling from head to toe as she tried to push him away with all her power.

Bertie didn’t let go until the end.

“Bertie, let me go!” Kathy was furious.

Bertie’s thin lips curled into a smile as Kathy’s scent made him even more reluctant to let go.

“Since you even know my name, why are you still saying you are not my fiancée?” Bertie narrowed his eyes.

Kathy pursed her lips. She really couldn’t understand why Bertie continuously thought of her as his fiancée.

“It’s impossible that you don’t know. In any case, we are going to get married. This fact cannot be changed.” Bertie said solemnly.

Kathy kept her face calm. The only thing she knew was that Fletcher family did not approve of Lincoln and Sue being together.

So, in order to separate the two, they arranged a marriage partner for Sue.

“Since we both can’t refuse, why not work together?” Bertie proposed.

Besides them, John stood a little anxious. If his wife was involved with Bertie in some way, boss was going to be very angry.

“Sir... I don’t know what are you talking about!” Kathy pushed him away.

Bertie had always been a proud man and the women who wanted to get close to him were countless. He was accustomed to throwing himself at women again and again but this was the first time he was rejected.

It was clearly written on her face that she was not interested in him.

He frowned; his mood was ruined.

He just wanted her to obey him.

“I don’t want to disappoint my mother, Sue. Besides, if you had the power to say no to this marriage, you won’t be here, right?” Bertie said hitting his mark.

“Kathy, try to trust me again.” His eyes glittered and said in a deep authoritative voice.

Kathy couldn't get rid of him.

It was not that she didn't believe in Joseph, but that she didn't even know how to continue their relationship.

She wanted to get away, but was trapped by him.

“But on one condition,” she looked at him.

“What?”

“Don't poke into my private affairs.”

When dealing with her own personal affairs, she hoped to have enough private space and freedom.

Joseph narrowed his eyes, “No way.”

He would never leave her alone.

“Then don't ask me to believe you.” Kathy pushed him away.

However, Joseph's strength was great, and her strength was not enough to escape his embrace.

“Kathy, don't keep kicking against me. I'm doing this for your own good.” His voice was a bit deep.

“I don't need you to do so. Joseph, don't you know how our relationship is?” Kathy asked indifferently.

Joseph looked down, and wrapped his arm around her tiny waist, tighter and tighter.

He clasped her tightly and at that moment, it was like he wanted to fuse her into his bone marrow.

She sensed his emotions.

He cared about her, didn't he?

She looked up at Joseph, grabbed his collar and said affirmatively, “Joseph, you love me.”

Obviously, he loved her.

Upon hearing her words, Joseph's sparkling eyes suddenly became dull. He put his palm on her face, and his dark eyes quickly turned deep again.

He didn't say a word.

His silence seemed to Kathy that he admitted.

Nevertheless, she couldn't forget what Joseph had said before - he would never love her.

"Why don't you admit it? Do you know that I always feel very ambivalent about you? I'm resisting our relationship more and more. I don't want to be close to you, but I always can't resist your attraction to me."

"Joseph, I love you."

Kathy looked up at him with a kind of glitter in her eyes.
