Chapter 301 As You Wish

On hearing, Joseph's eyes suddenly turned cold, grabbed the back of Kathy's head, and kissed her passionately.

Kathy was stunned with her eyes wide open and immediately pushed him away but she was too slow.

She couldn't escape from his overbearing actions.

She practically became the prey in his arms and could only submit.

"Mmph!"

The next moment, Joseph backed away as the pain on his tongue radiated. She actually bit him!

Kathy wiped her lips vigorously and looked furiously at Joseph, "Don't you touch me, Joseph, don't forget that we've divorced."

She reminded him again that they had divorced.

Fine, excellent!

The man's ruthlessness reared its head, and when Kathy was about to leave, he forcibly grabbed her wrist and threw her violently onto the bed.

Kathy stared with her eyes wide open and saw Joseph getting nearer as her heartbeat pound even faster.

She was too familiar with this expression of his.

"Joseph, you agreed to divorce. What's the meaning of your actions!" Kathy glared at him and said furiously.

What did he take her for?

He had not contacted her since their divorce, so why was he doing this now?

She didn't understand.

On listening, the man's expression changed and he started to grin. He said with a deep voice, "Wasn't the divorce according to your wishes?"

Kathy was stunned for a moment before she understood what Joseph meant.

"Yes, it was my wish." She said but she didn't mean it.

"Okay, Ms. Kathy, congratulations." Joseph backed off coldly.

Joseph didn't stay and left quickly.

She was the only one remaining in the huge house.

"Alexia, why don't you decorate your place properly?"

"This is the minimalist style. Isn't it the fashion now?" Alexia wasn't concerned.

"This isn't the minimalist style, it's even more simple than a rental apartment."

"It's okay as long as I'm fine with it." Alexia interrupted her as her eyes flashed a hint of disappointment.

"I already found out which hospital your grandfather is in. Do you need me to go with you?" Alexia gave her the address.

Kathy frowned, "I'll go on my own."

Kathy went to the hospital in the early hours of the morning and the hospital corridor was very quiet.

She thought that there wouldn't be anyone with Zack but unexpectedly, Bertie was at the door.

He was surprised to see Kathy and thought that she would not come.

He walked over to her, "Grandfather is asleep."

"Okay, what did the doctor say?" Kathy frowned.

"The illness has gotten more severe and we've been informed of the risks."

Kathy's face turned pale.

"Come again tomorrow if you wish to speak to grandfather, you should go back to rest," Bertie said out of concern.

But Kathy didn't leave and sat on the chair along the corridor.

Bertie frowned deeply, "Do you intend to wait here?"

"I will leave later."

She didn't seem to have anything to say to her grandfather.

"Do not bear a grudge against your family member."

"Does that mean that he can act recklessly and hurt anyone without a care?" She said.

Grandfather used his health to force her to divorce. She can't accept his cruel tactics.

Bertie was sullen and said after a while, "Are you and Joseph still in contact?"

"No."

"For this, half of it was forced by grandfather and the other half was Joseph giving up," Bertie said.

Kathy was sullen.

Kathy woke up at night. Alexia was talking on the phone in the room, but not with Dolman.
Kathy froze. She knew who Alexia was talking to.

Johnson.

Alexia saw Kathy already woke up and hung up soon.

Alexia talked to Johnson in an intimate manner just now, acting like a spoiled child.

She also didn't want to conceal Kathy.

"It is Johnson."

"What is the relationship between you and him now?" Kathy asked with concern.

"Well, we are friends." Alexia lay down.

"Don't you know his intention?" Kathy frowned.

Johnson was engaged and it was impossible for him to break off the engagement.

"He... Kathy, only a few lucky people could stay with the person they like." Alexia said depressingly.

"What about Dolman?"

"I always remember he is my husband."

"Does he love you?" Kathy asked.

If he loved Alexia, Why did he spend nearly all his time in working instead of accompanying Alexia?

If he didn't love Alexia, then their marriage was existed in name only.

Alexia said nothing. After a while, she said in a low voice, "The reason why we get married is that our two family companies will become stronger and get the best interest. It doesn't matter whether we love each other."

"I see. You told me before maybe you will fall in love with him after living together."

"No. never" Alexia shook her head.

She had fallen in love with others and she would not love Dolman.

Kathy and Alexia chatted all night. Kathy was awake but Alexia drunk a lot and fell asleep soon.

Alexia's phone kept ringing and it was Dolman.

Kathy could not wake Alexia up and she didn't answer the phone.

The sun rose the next day.

Someone was knocking on the door and Kathy suddenly had a bad vibe. 'Was the person outside the door sent by the Booth family to find her?'

She looked through the peephole and it turned out to be Dolman.

The bodyguard caught up with Kathy soon and detained her again.

"This is Mrs Booth's order. Please don't embarrass us."

Kathy bit her lips. She suddenly remembered that the Booth family was the most powerful family in Country B.

She sarcastically smiled.

When they arrived at the hospital, Kathy was taken to the ward and she was calm.

These bodyguards stood behind her and it was impossible for her to escape.

At the ward door, Bertie quietly leaned against the wall. He had a cigarette in his hand but he didn't smoke it.

A low cry could be heard from the ward.

"Kathy, Grandpa is..."

After hearing his words, Kathy's expression changed.

She looked up and asked, "What do you say just now?"

"Grandpa died just now. He wants to see you but he couldn't wait until you come back."

Kathy bit her lips tightly and she felt a little sad.

"Well, when do I could go back?" Kathy took a deep breath.

She didn't want to have any connection with the Booth family.

"Could you please at least stay until grandpa's funeral is over?" Bertie said with begging.

"Kathy, Could you stay here?"

At this time, Jennifer came out from the ward. She cried for a long time and looked gaunt.

She was used to be elegant and graceful but she looked much older now.

Kathy stood at the door of the ward and looked at grandpa's face. It seemed he was regretful.

"I would attend the funeral."

Kathy turned around to leave.

But the bodyguard blocked her again.

Chapter 305 Greed

Kathy felt the blood freeze in her veins. She saw some liquid gradually overflowing from the lower body of the pregnant woman, as if the amniotic fluid had broken.

"The baby seems to be coming out... Ah..." The pregnant woman was sweating and moaning in pain.

Kathy frowned and looked outside. At present, the best arrangement was to land at the nearest airport and then took the pregnant woman to the hospital. However, judging from the bad weather, it was almost impossible.

So...

Kathy took a deep breath, looked down at the pregnant woman's lower body, and then habitually opened the first aid kit brought by the steward, but was stopped. The purser looked at Kathy suspiciously, "Miss, are you a doctor?"

She paused, not answering.

She used to be an intern and didn't become a regular doctor.

The purser looked at the woman in front of her. She was wearing a simple black knee-length dress, with a beautiful collarbone. Her shoulder-length hair was a bit messy because she was sleeping just now. Her fair face was delicate, and her complexion was bright and white without any makeup. She looked like a star, not a doctor.

"I am a medical student and can deal with emergencies." Kathy replied a moment later.

"She is about to give birth. Give me the first aid kit..."

Looking at each other, the stewards were caught completely unprepared. They had received training on giving birth on an airplane, but they were still a little flustered without practical experience in this emergency.

The situation of the pregnant women was getting worse. And it could no longer be delayed. The purser thought about it calmly, and she could only choose to believe in Kathy as she saw that Kathy was quite skilled. She squatted down to help, while instructing the steward behind her, "Go out and ask if there is any doctor on the plane who can help. The pregnant woman is about to give birth."

The cabin was seething at once. Everyone whispered, complaining and worrying, but no one stood out.

"Can you hold out any longer?"

Kathy raised her head and asked the pregnant woman whose face was full of pain. If the pregnant woman could persist until the plane landed, she would not take the risk.

The pregnant woman was only seven months pregnant. Premature birth was inherently dangerous, and the existing environmental equipment was insufficient. Even if she was sure, she couldn't guarantee one hundred percent safety.

The pregnant woman turned her head, endured the pain, raised her body and said, "No, I think the baby is coming out..."

With her face in anguish, she held her fingers tightly, looking at the stewards who were busy, and looking at Kathy. Suddenly, she remembered that Kathy had been sitting next to her, a passenger like her, and then she panicked at once.

Kathy patted Jennifer's shoulder comfortingly, "Mrs. Hilton, I'm sorry for your loss."

"You still can't forgive your grandfather, forgive me?" Jennifer trembled when she heard what Kathy called her.

Kathy frowned and said quietly, "I don't hate you."

"Then you won't come back, and won't call me mom."

Kathy looked down and did not answer.

She is very resistant to the people of the Booth family.

Kathy was in somber mood when she came out of the funeral.

Not far away, Billy Hilton was outside and walked towards her when he saw her.

"I haven't seen you for a long time."

Kathy frowned and nodded lightly.

"Grandpa passed away. I heard that he only misses you, his granddaughter. I'm not in his heart." Billy sighed.

He even got the news after Zack passed away.

"His inheritance is all given to you. If it weren't for you, I would really like to grab it." Billy joked.

"I won't want the Booth family's property." Kathy frowned.

"That's the entire Booth Group. Do you know how much it is worth? You can probably buy ten countries."

At first he thought he could get the inheritance, but he knew that Zack didn't care about him at all.

How could he be reconciled, he even went to investigate his own life experience, wondering why the Booth family didn't value him.

Later, he finally understood.

"I'm not interested." Kathy's face was still serene.

She wouldn't want anything she couldn't accept.

"Is it because you just want to study medicine now? Well, running business still needs talented people, such as me." Billy boasted.

"You inherited the Booth Group, and then give it to me, how about that?"

Kathy frowned and looked at Billy.

Chapter 307 Want Her to be Willing

Outside, only when Kathy left the main building and saw the sky had already grown dark, did she realize she'd not yet had anything to eat. But she didn't want to stay here.

Suddenly, with a squeal of brakes, a light blue car came to a stop before her. Bertie got out, opened the passenger door, and said, “It's hard to hail a car here. I'll take you to the airport. I'd worry if you want on your own.”

Kathy furrowed her brow, but got in. But this time, Bertie did not take her to the airport. Instead he drove toward the city center, farther and farther from the airport. Looking at him, she asked, “Where are you taking me?”

“My home.”

"I want to go back to City N," she told him seriously.

"You've not begun school yet. If you go back now, you'll be all alone. Better to stay with me, it will foster sentiment."

"Nobody wants to foster sentiment with you," she snapped. She wanted to get out, but Bertie had locked the doors.

"Now Joseph's not with you, I want to take the opportunity to get nearer you," he said without a scrap of shame.

"Bertie, let me out of the car!" she demanded, glaring at him. When he did not, she got out her phone and threatened, "Otherwise I'll call the police."

But he was unimpressed. Laughing lowly, he said, "I took your SIM card out back at the Booth home. Your phone's got no signal."

She turned it on to discover that he was right. "You bastard," she raged.

But the angrier she grew, the happier he became. He found her fury adorable. Arriving at a neighborhood, he got out and opened her door for her, saying, "Please, miss."

Kathy got out and prepared to run, but Bertie had anticipated as much. He caught her easily, wrapped her up in his arms. "Bertie Marshall!" she shouted.

"Don't force my hand. I just want you with me. I won't hurt you, and here, I won't interfere with your freedom."

"You're interfering with me freedom now," she glared.

Julian was so angry he pushed open the door to the president's office and demanded, "Why did you cut my program?"

Joseph furrowed his brow, lifted his gaze, and said sharply, "I said as much in the meeting. The budget is not enough."

"The budget isn't enough, or you just don't want to let me to take charge of this project?"

"You think I need to do that?"

"If the budget isn't enough, I can transfer funds from overseas investment."

Evenly Joseph replied, "Only Grandfather can do that. You'd need his permission."

"I'll make him agree!"

Joseph smiled coldly.

After Julian left, John came in. Lately the boss had him keeping track of Kathy's comings and goings, but after leaving the Booth home, there'd been no trace of her. "Sir," he reported, "we're unable to ascertain Miss Kathy's whereabouts."

Joseph furrowed his brow, took out his phone, and dialed that familiar number, only to hear, "The number you have dialed is not in service."

Joseph gripped his phone tightly, his face equally tight. The people Kathy had come into contact with in B Country weren't so many. "Check out Bertie Marshall and Billy Hilton."

John did as instructed, returning later to report, "Sir, Billy returned to City N yesterday, and has been at home ever since. Whereas Bertie is at his family home, and there's not yet any sign of this missus."

Chapter 309 Give Me Your Hand

At that moment, in the entrance of TC Mountain, a black Porsche rolled to a halt abruptly.

Joseph stared at the entrance which was now closed off, and his face gradually darkened.

One hour ago, John had confirmed that this was where Bertie currently was.

He made a conjecture that Kathy must be by his side.

Whenever he tried to call Kathy, he would fail to get through to her.

While ignoring the staff's objection, Joseph entered the place directly by taking the stairs.

This was the only path if someone wanted to come down from this hill.

Halfway to the top of TC Mountain, there was minor landslide that occurred in the middle of the path, which blocked the way to go further.

Kathy stopped in her tracks and her face had darkened.

If she couldn't go past this point, then the only option left was to descend the hill.

However, it just rained earlier on, so the path down the hill was not a decent and safe path.

"Let's go back to where we came from. We should wait for the construction team to remedy this area before we proceed further." Bertie suggested all of a sudden.

"Let's take the hill path." Kathy said while turning around.

She didn't want to stay at this place any longer than she already had.

"It's dangerous to take that path." Bertie tried to stop her.

"It's more dangerous to be near you." Kathy snickered coldly.

After saying that, she proceeded to descend the hill anyway.

"If we get off the hill, I will send you back to City N." Bertie followed her from behind.

He finally compromised.

Kathy was the type who wouldn't budge or comply if someone were to force something on her. Her personality had made him feel very dejected.

She was the only one he didn't want to hurt at all.

He wanted to protect her using his own methods, but her reluctance was a major obstacle for him.

When she heard him making that promise, she paused in her tracks slightly but very soon continued to walk forward.

She was very hesitant to believe Bertie's words.

"Ah!"

All of a sudden, Kathy somehow slipped as she stared wide-eyed at the ground where she was stepping just a moment ago. It had given away because the soil was loosening up and she was now stepping on nothing. The next second, she started to roll down the hill frantically.

Bertie's expression changed drastically as he fumbled around to grab Kathy, but she was plummeting too fast.

Kathy silently watched his massive back and her eyes started to become reddened.

He wouldn't let anything happen to her...

However, he was no longer by her side. How could he still protect her?

They were two people who were separated forever. She didn't want to rely on him anymore considering the circumstances.

"I will wait here until the day breaks." Kathy stubbornly said while turning around to face away from him.

An intense anger caught on Joseph's face, "There is going to be a thunderstorm later on. Do you realize how dangerous it will be if you continue to stay here?"

"Who do you think you are? Why do you think that your opinion matters to me?" Kathy was suddenly infuriated as well. She stared at him without blinking.

After hearing that, Joseph narrowed his eyes before suddenly dashing forward without warning and trapping Kathy's fragile frame in his embrace.

He held the back of her head and started to kiss her furiously.

Kathy was rooted to the spot while her heart was in a mess. Joseph continued to hug her hard, and all she could smell was a familiar scent from long ago.

It was Joseph's unique scent.

Her lips had long gotten used to his kissing, so they responded to his kiss without any problems.

Despite that, she wanted to reject him entirely.

She didn't want this relationship to continue as they were now.

She finally came to her sense as she bit hard on his tongue.

Joseph let out muffled grimace and his face took on a hideous and terrifying expression.

She was so bold to the point that she would even bite him!

"Joseph, you've gone too far!"

"What if... I want to go this far?" He replied hastily and immediately pressed his lips onto hers again while ignoring the pain in his tongue.

Kathy was conscious about the wound in his mouth, and she couldn't bring herself to bite him anymore...

This man really knew her well and could capture her weakness...

Her breath was completely taken away as Kathy couldn't even stand properly at that moment. She could only lean against Joseph's body.

"Kathy, always remember that I'm your man." His cold voice sounded next to her ears.

Kathy smiled faintly and doled out a reply, "Joseph, are you trying to bully me?"

"Yes." He didn't shy away from admitting his intentions, and his mischievous hands were even starting to grope her body below her waist.
