My Sweetheart

Chapter 371 Reject This Man

“Why did you come?” Joseph was good at hiding his own emotion. He was looking at Kathy right now, as calm as usual.

“John said that you had been keeping yourself inside here all the time,” Kathy mumbled.

“Since you’re fine, I’m going back.” Kathy felt uneasy, she turned to leave.

However, Joseph grabbed her wrist even faster. Kathy fell into his arm without any preparation.

In front of Kathy’s eyes, was Joseph’s enlarged handsome face, which was charming.

Her heartbeat was rapid...

“Are you worrying about me?” Joseph spoke confidently.

Kathy was not good at hiding her own emotion, her emotion had been exposed by her face.

“Do you think that I will be in trouble?” Joseph looked at her.

Kathy shook her head without hesitation.

She knew that Joseph was powerful and strong enough.

She did not even see his weakness before.

She never believed that he had any weak points.

“That’s it. I will never make myself in trouble, just for you.”

Joseph’s words hit Kathy’s heart firmly.

She took back her words suddenly.

“Am I important?” she looked at him.

“Very important.” Joseph pushed her to the door and kissed her.

But this time, Kathy stopped him.

“Don’t simply kiss me,” she spoke with her cold tone.

Having heard what was said, Joseph’s anger almost split out.

He increased his strength on his hand.

Kathy could not push him off at all, but she resisted.

She disliked having an interaction like this with Joseph above this fuzzy relationship.

Didn’t he know that... she will be indulged in this?

“You are my woman.” Joseph stared at Kathy with his deep and burning eyes, while he was pinching Kathy’s chin with his slender fingers.

But Kathy remained clear-headed.

She was clear that she must reject him.

"Why Mr. Julian is here?" Billy Hilton asked with squinted eyes.
Julian smiled, sitting on the sofa besides.

"I am worried now, the sales volume of the new drugs from the Joseph's Group increases again," Julian said.

"Currently there is no the same type of drugs being marketed by other medical companies, it is just around the corner that the Joseph's Group would be soon to have a monopoly on the drug's market," answered by Billy Hilton with a calm sound.

"It can be a big strike for the Hilton's Group."

"Exactly. But, what do you want, Julian?"

Julian sneered sarcastically while passing a piece of information to Billy.

"Currently the drugs from the Joseph's Group are the bestseller, however, the price is higher than the market price. It could be an idea that we create another type of drug with a lower price to replace it."

Billy frowned. It sounded a good idea but it was surprising as the product could only be done quickly by the Hilton's Group.

"Don't worry. If there is something wrong with the Joseph's Group, I will make you occupying the leading position."

"Currently I am just a shareholder. I have to resign from the Joseph's Group as the old master want to transfer me to Africa."

"Don't worry, you will be back soon."

The open court session for the case of intentional injury made by Veronica was just around the corner. The image of the Joseph's Group was affected after the news was being reported. Oppositely, the stock price of the Hilton's Group started to rebound.

Outside the Joseph's Group company, there were a lot of reporters who surrounded Joseph upon seeing him.

"Mr. Joseph, what is your opinion on Miss Veronica being charged for the case of intentional injury?"

"Is that because of personal matters that lead Miss Veronica towards conducting an intentional injury to others?"

“Is anyone here?” Joseph pulled the chair beside Kathy directly.

Hearing that, the two students on the opposite side were dumbfounded. Seeing Joseph coming over, they suddenly became a little nervous, but they admired and respected him more.

“Mr Joseph, no one is sitting here.” One of the classmates had already spoken.

Perceiving Joseph's breath, Kathy bit her lip, a little nervous.

But she didn't look up.

The two classmates had already talked with Joseph, and occasionally asked Kathy, she could only participate in the conversation.

Until Joseph's meal was served.

It was exactly the same as the shredded chicken noodles Kathy ordered.

No chili, added more soy sauce.

This wasn't Joseph's favorite taste...

Kathy frowned, trying to ignore it.

But the classmate on the opposite side discovered it and said in surprise, “Joseph has the same taste as Kathy!”

Joseph curled his thin lips faintly. “It tastes delicious.”

Kathy was speechless.

She didn't know that Joseph liked this kind of taste. He always preferred light food, and soy sauce was almost not seen on the table.

But now...

Kathy didn't think much. And she just wanted to finish eating quickly and go up first.

The two classmates had been asking about Joseph's professional knowledge, and Kathy planned to leave first after eating.

But Joseph stopped her and said.

“Kathy, come to my office later.”

“Joseph, is there anything wrong?” Kathy had frozen for a couple of seconds.

“Official business.” Joseph said concisely, without saying much at the moment.

The two classmates finally found something strange. They looked at Kathy and Joseph back and forth, but they dared not say anything at the moment.

In the Joseph's Group.

It was evening when Kathy left the lab, and all the colleagues around her were off work. She packed her bags and left.

She picked up the phone and found that there were several missed calls, which were all from Jennifer.

She called back.

"Kathy, don't contact with Billy recently, remember." Jennifer said worriedly.

"I have never had any contact with him, don't worry." Kathy comforted her.

"That's good. The situation in the Hilton Group is very bad recently. Billy wants to cope with the Joseph's Group, I'm afraid he will make use of you." Jennifer said seriously.

It was the last scene she wanted to see.

And she knew that Billy did what he said.

"I will arrange some bodyguards to protect you recently."

"Mom, I'm usually at school. I'll be fine." Kathy didn't like this.

It was uncomfortable to be monitored overtly and secretly.

Jennifer frowned. She noticed the resistance in Kathy's words, and her face became more gloomy.

"I'm really worried."

"If something happens, I will contact you immediately."

After hanging up the phone, Kathy frowned. Why would Billy use her to deal with the Joseph's Group?

She was no longer Mrs. Joseph, and she was meaningless to the Joseph's Group and Joseph.

Kathy went back to school without thinking too much.

But on the way back to school, she obviously felt someone following her.

When she turned around, she found nothing.

Suddenly, she was horrified.

Holding the phone, she stood still, but she looked through the address book and finally stayed on the name Joseph.

She did not delete his phone number, but changed the note from "husband" to "Joseph".

After hesitating, her fingertips lightly touched the number, and the phone was connected before Kathy realized it.

An hour later, at the hospital, Billy stood outside the emergency room, his fingers clutching a cigarette and his gaze full of good humor. Jennifer came over not too much later, but was flustered compared to his calm. "How could she get in an accident," she murmured to herself, her gaze finally falling on Billy.

His expression revealed his helplessness. "Mom, don't look at me like that, if it were really me, do you think I could still stand here?" he asked.

But she didn't believe him. Standing before him, with eyes full of disappointment, she said, "If I find out this has something to do with you, Billy, don't blame me when I get harsh."

He smiled coldly. "You've always been harsh. So you admit you think it's my fault Kathy got in the car accident, is that it?" With that, he tossed away the cigarette.

In that cold, empty hallway, Jennifer kept her back straight, her gaze never leaving the blinking red light. The next morning, when Kathy was finally wheeled out of the emergency room, she rushed to the doctor to ask, "How... How is my daughter?"

"The patient suffered a traumatic head injury, we just performed surgery, but she's not out of danger yet," the doctor replied gravely. Kathy's situation was not optimistic. Hearing this, Jennifer could barely stand. Tears slipped down her face.

At that moment, at Joseph Bay, the guard had already been there quite a while. When Joseph exited, he hurried over. "Sir, Miss Kathy was in a car accident."

Hearing this, Joseph's face froze. Grabbing the guard by the shirt, he demanded, "How could that possibly happen!"

"I... the culprit's already been apprehended, it was an accident."

Joseph smiled coldly, obviously unbelieving. The guard didn't dare speak—Joseph's expression was frightening.

Thirty minutes later, Joseph personally drove himself to the hospital. Kathy was in the critical care unit, her mother standing over her. Seeing Joseph, Jennifer sniffed hard, unable to keep from crying.

Kathy couldn't convince her otherwise, but her friend's concern made her feel better. After replying to her messages, she moved, and realized she felt quite tired. All she could do was lie there. Half an hour later, she didn't see Zofia, but instead got a call from her. "Kathy, I can't get in!"

"What?" Kathy didn't understand.

"The hospital says it won't receive me..."

Kathy was flummoxed. Could it be that private? "Why don't you head back then, I'm really fine," she said. She couldn't go out and get Zofia.

"No. Is this hospital the Booth Group's? I'll have my brother think of something." That said, she gave Bertie a call.

Bertie, hearing the name of the hospital, paled. The hospital rarely opened to outsiders. In fact, ordinary people could not get in. "That's the Joseph Group's private hospital."

Stubbornly Zofia said, "Then I'll go find Joseph!"

Bertie looked at the building. He'd just checked where Kathy had been admitted, and it wasn't here. Joseph must have had her transferred. And no one was allowed in... what did he mean to do...

Zofia still wanted a way in. "Kathy said she was in an accident... she got surgery, it must be really serious, I'm so worried..."

"If you really want in, you'll have to wait till evening and see if the guards relax a little."

"What? We have to sneak in? I'll go find Joseph right now," she insisted.

"Joseph is inside, how will you get to him?" asked Bertie coldly.

Zofia was stunned.

"Joseph, you've no right to control everything about me." Kathy's tone was slightly cold.

"Get them out of here," Joseph ordered the bodyguard, as if he didn't hear Kathy's reply.

As Kathy watched Zofia being taken out, she was worried.

"Brother..." Zofia asked Bertie for help.

But he was no match for these bodyguards, and there must be a reason for Joseph to do this.

He was relieved that he had made sure Kathy was safe, for now at least.

"Let's go back first," Bertie said.

Bertie was always good at judging situations, and they wouldn't have the upper hand if they made trouble on Joseph's turf.

"Kathy, I'll visit you again."

The ward soon quieted down, and Kathy's eyes became frosty as she stared at Joseph.

She couldn't see through him at all.

"Kathy, I have to do this for your safety."

After adjusting his mood, Joseph approached her, bent down and said in a deep voice.

Kathy, however, turned a deaf ear to his words and said indifferently, "Are you imprisoning me?"

Zofia couldn't visit her; the Booths were kept in the dark about it and only he, the man who had divorced her, was with her.

Kathy just felt crept out being with him.

"I'm doing this for your safety," Joseph stressed repeatedly.

"I don't think I'll be safe with you." Kathy stared at him.

Sure enough, Joseph's face took on a ghastly expression.

He was even angrier than he was a moment ago.

But Kathy was not afraid to make direct eye contact with him.

"You've no choice."

"I want to be transferred," Kathy said in a deep voice.

She didn't want to stay here, where Joseph was.

His control just made her want nothing more than to run away from him.

"Don't even think about it!"

Kathy ignored him and took out her phone. She could only contact Jennifer to pick her up.

But in the next second, her phone was taken away from her by Joseph, who even turned off the light in the ward.

Chapter 378 I'd Rather She Hates Me

At night, Kathy didn't expect that Joseph allowed Zofia to come over. Zofia even brought several textbooks for her. Zofia was surprised to receive Joseph's call an hour ago and immediately came over.

“What did you say? Joseph took your phone... no wonder, I kept sending you messages on Wechat and you didn't reply.” Zofia suddenly realized.

“But Joseph must have his reasons for doing this. He isn't that deviant.” This was what Zofia thought about last night.

Deviant. When she heard of this word, Kathy agreed.

“He is,” Kathy said coldly.

“The purpose of him calling me just now must be for me to come over to keep you company he even reminded me to bring you some books to read.” Even if Zofia said that, Kathy still wasn't able to understand Joseph.

“I just want to be discharged from the hospital as soon as possible,” Kathy said.

“I think you will need some more time to recuperate. You just had an operation and need to have daily checkups.” Zofia browsed Kathy's medical records.

“I want to transfer to another hospital. This is Joseph's place. I don't want to be under his control.”

Zofia looked at Kathy with concern. Although she can't understand what Joseph has done, but this was the best hospital in City N. Kathy can have the best treatment over there. Furthermore, Zofia was more relieved because Joseph was a doctor and he can take care of Kathy.

“Do you really feel that way?” Zofia frowned.

“Yes, but I don't have a cell phone and can't contact my mother.” Jennifer was the only one that could get her out of there.

“I can contact her for you but according to my brother, Joseph must have his reasons for doing this. He must be protecting you.”

“He is imprisoning me.” Kathy was sullen. She was very upset and can't listen to any reasoning.

From how Joseph forced her to transfer hospital to taking away her cell phone, she didn't know how to convince herself to believe him.

“Don't be so pessimistic, it's not good for your recovery. Shucks, I don't know what I should do...” Zofia was out of her wits and looked desperate.

He received a call from Mathew as soon as he returned to the Joseph's Group.

"You have not had a meal with me for quite a while. I know that you aren't very busy recently." Mathew said grudgingly.

"I'll go back tonight, grandfather," Joseph said.

“Okay. Julian’s confirmation has been approved but he kept delaying his trip to Country N. What is he doing?” Recently Julian’s movement has been very strange and he also couldn’t find out.

“Him?” Joseph frowned, “He had been very close to Billy recently.”

“Scoundrel, is he rebelling? Does he have no regard for the Joseph family?” Mathew was very angry.

“Grandfather, I will sort him out. It wouldn’t take long.” Joseph’s tone was cold.

“He is one of the Joseph family after all,” Matthew said with concern.

How did this devolve to this extent?

“Grandfather, I will not forget that he personally killed my mother.”

Joseph ended the call as soon as he finished saying. Pain and despair erupted on his face at that very moment. After a while, John came in to report.

“Mr. Joseph, something has happened at the BV City company.” Joseph looked sternly at the email that he had just received.

“Arrange for the private jet Immediately.”

Night fell and N City was bathed in bright and glittering lights. A white colored car stopped at the entrance of N City Hospital. As Kathy turned off the lights, unfamiliar footsteps approached from afar and she immediately tensed up. She turned on the lights again and she stared at the tightly shut door. She was strangely nervous when the door was pushed open and only when she saw that it was Jade did she sigh in relief.

But she kept having a bad feeling about it.

“Ms. Kathy, there is another bottle of IV drip for today.”

"I'm going to sleep, or are you going to sleep next to me and watch me too?" Kathy got on the bed by herself and looked at Billy indifferently.

Billy was a meter away from her, his gaze was cold.

"What if it is?" Billy approached gradually.

Kathy didn't panic that much and laid down. She didn't look at Billy anymore and closed her eyes.

After a while, the sound of footsteps finally sounded in her ears, and Billy left.

Only then did Kathy's tense mood relax. When she opened her eyes, the room was pitch black.

She couldn't help but tremble all over, and she was getting teary.

She walked out to the balcony and looked at the garden downstairs, where the bodyguards had been patrolling.

Kathy quirked her eyebrows while looking at the dark night. It was a sleepless night.

At downstairs, Billy sat on the sofa. The assistant beside him was always cautious, not daring to make a sound.

Soon after, Billy's phone rang. It was Julian's call.

"Do you have the person?"

"Yeah."

"Did you notify Joseph about it?"

"He's on the plane now," Billy said.

"Well done. You'll have to watch over that woman."

"Of course."

After hanging up the phone, Billy looked at the sky outside until the sky was a little brighter.

At BV City, Joseph went over to the branch office as soon as he got off the plane. Just one day ago, confidential information of the branch office was stolen, and a lot of information was exposed. This incident had seriously affected the regular operation of the whole company.

The technical department had been trying its best to solve the problem. It was just a big deal to Joseph.

Joseph urgently held a meeting. However, John apprehensively brought in his cell phone as soon as the meeting had just started.

Joseph looked at him with a cold eye, and John sweated wildly. It involved the safety of Kathy, so John had to report it no matter what, "Mr Joseph, the hospital called. Miss Kathy is missing."

"What?" Joseph's already cold and stern face was even more serious, and his eyebrows were knitted tightly together.
