Chapter 381 No One Can Stop Me

Jennifer had already sent someone to follow Billy, so she knew exactly what happened when he took Kathy away.

After setting up everything, she came over.

The villa was actually not Billy's property, but one of Jennifer's former home, but she hadn't lived here for many years.

"It seems I really underestimated you, Mom." Billy lazily came down from the second floor.

Billy didn't expect that it was Jennifer who would find her first.

"Billy, what do you want?" Jennifer's face was sullen, but underneath her eyes was a worry that she couldn't hide.

"Mom, just stay out of it." Billy sat down on the sofa and elegantly lifted the coffee in front of him.

He wasn't worried about Jennifer's arrival.

The second floor was heavily guarded, and he knew that Jennifer had come alone, and there was no way she could take Kathy away.

"Kathy is my daughter, you are my son, and now my son has kidnapped my daughter, and you are telling me, as a mother, to stay out of it?" Jennifer was furious.

She had been happy to know Kathy's whereabouts, but soon after, Billy took her away.

"Mom, you know I'm your son, don't you understand me? I won't hurt Kathy."

"You've become more and more distant, I won't trust you." Jennifer's tone was full of disappointment.

Upon hearing that, Billy sneered, "It's not me who has become more and more unfamiliar."

"If there's nothing more, I'll have someone send you back. I still have things to do." Billy's tone was cold.

"I want to take Kathy with me." Jennifer was determined.

"Don't even think about it."

With that said, he directly asked the bodyguard to come over, "Take Mrs. Booth away."

Soon, the bodyguard stepped forward and grabbed Jennifer's shoulders, and she was unable to move at all.

Jennifer was disappointed. She pursed her lips and didn't resist.

Chapter 382 Do You Feel Wronged to Marry Me?

Kathy bit her lower lip, her face gradually getting paler.

Her hand was still pressing hard against his chest.

But she was no match for Billy's strength.

His breath made her sick.

"Kathy, whatever attracts you to Joseph, I can do that too!"

"You are not him, nothing you do will ever attract me!" Kathy blurted out in retort.

"Tsk ts, your feelings for him are so deep but he hasn't still responded to me. Looks like he doesn't care about you anymore." He provoked her.

Kathy didn't care about his remark at all. She hoped for Joseph to not to be manipulated by Billy.

They had nothing between them since a long time ago, no relationship at all, Joseph didn't need to do anything for her.

In this case, she was just going to be cruel and let him go for real.

"I was never his anything. It's you who are overestimating my status." Kathy said lightly.

Billy held her chin gently. He knew it was still too early for him to be able to convince her.

"Do You Feel Wronged to Marry Me?" He asked suddenly.

Ever since knowing him, Kathy never had any feelings for him.

Around him, there were so many women who took the initiative to show interest in him, he was used to the feeling of being chased after.

But since meeting Kathy, he hadn't been able to stop thinking about her.

"Yes! I feel extremely wronged!" Kathy said sternly.

"Do you think you can remarry Joseph? It's impossible! I know you don't want to take over the Booth Group. Marry me and I will take care of the Booth family for you."

Kathy sneered, "Billy, all you want is Booth family's property. But even if you marry me, none of that will ever belong to you because you are just an outsider."

Outsider.

This word angered him.

Even though he was clearly Jennifer's son and Zack was his grandfather, the Booth family never saw him as family. They always treated him as an outsider.

His grip on Kathy's chin became harder in anger. Kathy's chin hurt so much that she couldn't help but whimper in pain.

"You are right! I am an outsider, so by all means, I must get what belongs to me."

"What did you say?" Julian's face turned red with anger, his eyes flashing dangerously.
Kathy pursed her lips, not saying anything.
She didn't want to make him angry.
At least here, she had to ensure her safety first.
At this moment, a servant knocked on the door and came in.
There was a fragrance diffuser in Kathy's room. The servant changed it and then left.
Julian's eyes narrowed.
Kathy was not particularly vigilant about it as this was something the servant did every day.

“This face of yours... how does it make my brother lose his mind?” Julian approached her slowly, his eyes filling with dangerous darkness.

Kathy retreated subconsciously.

However, her back hit the side of the sofa. She had no room to retreat to.

Julian scooted towards her, his tall body almost touching her.

Kathy’s face turned pale and she immediately stood up.

However, Julian caught her by her wrist and pulled.

She fell into his arms.

She immediately tried to push him away, struggling desperately.

Her reaction made Julian aroused.

“Kathy, what would Joseph say if he sees me having sex with you?” He said in a cold whisper.

His voice fell right into her ear, making her shudder with fright.

Her eyes widened as she struggled even more furiously.

However, her strength was depleting quickly and there was a fire gradually spreading in her chest.

Too hot.

"Do you think it's possible?" Joseph narrowed his eyes. When he left the villa, he already gave an order out so no one dared to stop him in the way.

After getting into the car, Joseph gradually calmed down and became less angry. He held Kathy's hand, which was so hot that made Joseph feel burned.

He hugged her in his arms tightly and said deeply, "Sorry, Mrs. Joseph, I'm late."

He didn't dare to think about the consequences if he arrived there a little later.

Thinking of that, he suddenly felt so cold and emotional. He held Kathy so tight that made Kathy even hard to breathe.

He kissed her lips deeply as if he could only calm himself down in this way.

But still, Joseph couldn't calm down. So he kissed her deeper. Kathy was trying to control herself at the beginning, but once she felt his kiss, she couldn't anymore. Her body and her mind were out of her control.

She held the back of his head, kissing back deeper and deeper.

Everything became out of control...

But Kathy came back her sense suddenly. She kept telling herself that the man she was kissing was Joseph.

They were already divorced.

They were not together anymore.

They shouldn't sleep together again.

His kiss went down to her neck, her body...Kathy finally pushed him away with all her force. She was panting heavily. She said, "Joseph, send me back to the Booth Mansion."

Kathy knew that it was not suitable for her to go back to school in this situation.

Hearing this, Joseph's expression immediately got cold.

He could feel Kathy's coldness and resistance towards him.

His fingertips pinched her chin, and he said coldly, "Kathy, are you sure you can do it?"

"I am sure," Kathy said stubbornly.

But Joseph didn't give her any chance to refuse him. He kissed her domineeringly again that even pressed her back on the sofa...

At this time, Kathy couldn't refuse any intimate gesture, especially when it was from Joseph.

He was the one she loved.

Joseph stood at the door. He only left after he saw Kathy fall asleep.

And he became sullen in an instant.

John had already arrived and had been waiting in the study.

"Mr. Joseph, Julian has now been taken to the hospital."

Joseph's men had been monitoring at the villa all the time.

"Ok."

"Send him directly to Country N." Joseph said tonelessly.

John agreed.

Kathy didn't wake up until noon the next day.

Everything about Joseph Bay made her feel comfortable and dependent.

However, she still had to leave here.

The faint scent from the kitchen made her stop involuntarily after she walked out to the living room.

All she could see when she looked up was Joseph was busy in the kitchen. He turned his head, washed his hands and came out immediately after hearing the footsteps.

There were already many exquisite dishes on the table.

They were all made by Joseph.

He had always known her taste, so he cooked all what she liked.

"Eat first." He said mildly.

Kathy sat down and watched Joseph bring out the last dish, and then served her a bowl of soup.

"Thank you," she said politely.

"You don't have to do this." Kathy said after Joseph sat down across from her.

He shouldn't do all this.

"Kathy, do you know? I've been waiting for a long time for this day."

Finally, they could eat together again in the home that belonged to them at Joseph Bay.

Kathy choked slightly. She did not want to explore the true meaning of Joseph's words.

She lowered her head and ate slowly. She was hoping that time could pass a little bit more slowly.

In the afternoon, they went to the hospital.

Kathy hugged her mother gently and tried to comfort her. She asked concerningly, "Mom, are you hurt?"

“Billy still doesn’t dare to hurt me, but you...” Jennifer shook her head.

“I’m fine.”

Kathy was going to go back to the university, but Jennifer’s emotion wasn’t very stable right now. She decided to accompany Jennifer back to Booth’s old castle first.

Bertie was also accompanying them the whole time.

“The Hilton group is now hanging by a thread and mom can’t control Billy anymore. You should avoid meeting him for the time being,” said Jennifer.

Jennifer knew that Bertie had already sent some people to protect Kathy and hence she felt more assured.

Kathy nodded, “I know.”

“I will also send some people to track Billy’s whereabouts, Mrs. Booth. I won’t let him hurt Kathy,” said Bertie with his deep voice.

“Thank you, Bertie.”

At Joseph’s group.

John handed Kathy’s medical report to Joseph.

“Mr. Joseph, I swapped the medical report beforehand.”

“Okay.”

Joseph answered indifferently and took the report from John’s hand.

Kathy did a brain CT scan during the checkup. He took out the CT image and took a good look at it. The expression on his face turned darker and darker.

“Who was the surgeon that did the surgery on the day of the accident?”

“I’ll go check.”

“No need, I’ll go to the hospital right now.”

He took long strides and quickly left after finishing his sentence.

On the way, John had found the list of the doctors that did Kathy’s surgery on the day of the accident. Joseph went up directly to the office when he got to the hospital.

Even though he wasn’t a doctor anymore, but in the medical field, his skills were top-notch, and no one could surpass him.

John waited worriedly outside. Finally, after an hour, Joseph walked out with the doctor who oversaw the surgery that day.

Bertie was standing by the door and heard what the doctor said. His frowned deeply.

He ran after the doctor when the doctor left the wardroom, only to see Joseph waiting for the doctor in his office already.

"Mr. Joseph, are you sure you want to hide it from Miss Kathy, the fact that her brain tumour is spreading?"

"You should know that the success rate for the surgery for brain tumour doesn't even exceed 5%."

Bertie froze up listening to their conversation from outside the room. He heard everything clearly and his body started to tremble violently.

Kathy was...

He abruptly rushed into the room, the two of them were surprised to see him.

Bertie grabbed Joseph by the collar furiously, "Joseph, you were lying to her this whole time!"

Joseph was wearing a heavy expression and there was a glint of anguish in his eyes.

He just didn't know how to tell her.

It was a fact so cruel that even he couldn't accept it.

Let alone Kathy.

She just fulfilled her dream and had just started her postgraduate. He didn't want the illness to take away everything from her.

"What will happen if she doesn't undergo surgery?" asked Bertie bleakly.

The doctor shook his head and answered, "Best-case scenario, she'll have three more years to live."

Bertie let go of his hand frustratedly after hearing what the doctor said and punched the wall as hard as he could.

Kathy was standing outside of the door. She was initially here to get her medical record from the doctor and the news came like a bolt from the blue.

She laughed bitterly, that was the reason why.

No wonder her head would hurt so badly for no reason and her health was steadily deteriorating, and that she would pass out every so often.

Three years...

And three years was the best-case scenario.

Kathy didn't know how she walked back to the ward. She lied down on the bed and closed her eyes, she felt very sorrowful, but she couldn't seem to cry.

She covered the blanket over her shoulder as if the sadness would go away being embraced by the blanket like this.

She only came back to her senses when she heard footsteps coming in from outside.

"Kathy, if you still like Joseph, don't give up on being with him. Although I feel sorry for my brother, I want you to be happy." Zofia said sincerely.

When she first met Kathy, she didn't have a good impression of her. But after getting to know her, she found Kathy to be friendly and gentle. Zofia was quite fond of her as a friend.

Kathy was silent, but what she did not understand was Joseph's heart.

In the evening, Kathy came to Joseph's office on time.

He was usually at Ocean University on Fridays and did not leave.

At the door, John was waiting apprehensively outside.

Kathy looked at him in confusion.

John was greatly relieved to see Kathy.

"Miss Kathy, you're here at last. I made a reservation for Mr. Joseph. You can take it in with you."

"Okay." Kathy took it.

Pushing through the door, she saw that Joseph was sitting behind his desk with a number of papers in front of him, all about the Joseph's Group.

"John asked me to bring it to you." Kathy put the lunch box in front of him.

"Well, sit down."

Joseph frowned when he saw Kathy was a little nervous.

Instead of sitting down in the empty seat next to him, Kathy sat on the other side of the desk. Since Joseph was going to eat, she read first herself.

Only, Joseph came over without eating.

"I'll finish your class early so you can go back to bed early."

"You eat first. I'm in no hurry."

"I'm not hungry."

"You can't be. You have to eat on time!" Kathy was furious. It was past dinner time.

He did it all the time. Whenever he got busy, he didn't even eat.

Joseph's tense face finally changed and he smiled as he watched Kathy's annoyed face.

"What did you eat tonight?" He asked her as if he were a familiar friend.

Kathy said it one dish at a time. As she watched Joseph eat gracefully in front of her, she found the sight of him really pleasing to the eye.

Joseph's deep brow wrinkled slightly. But in an instant, the corners of her mouth gradually curled up.
Getting into his car, he went to the hospital instead of going back to Joseph Bay.
Looking at all of Kathy's reports and X-rays, he spent almost every night thinking about surgical options.
But each of these options was highly dangerous.
In the latter part of the night, only nicotine could make him feel less afraid.

The next morning, Kathy was about to go to the Joseph's Group when she was informed. As the end of the semester approached, all Ocean University students were suspended from drug development.

The disappointment on Kathy's face was obvious.

She wouldn't see Joseph again.

Tapping on her phone, she saw his message: Remember to eat breakfast.

Five simple words, but it was heartwarming, and a smile spread across her face.

Zofia looked at her in confusion.

"Kathy, you're creeping me out with that smile."

The truth was that she hadn't seen Kathy smile in all the time she had known her.

"Yeah, well, I'm not smiling." Kathy grimaced deliberately.

Zofia came over to her bed. Naturally, she saw Kathy's phone screen right away.

"What man sent this to you?"

"Joseph."

"What's going on with you two? I remember that last night he gave you a tutorial. Did something happen between you?" Zofia said deliberately and ambiguously.

Kathy was embarrassed. The image of her kissing Joseph involuntarily came to her mind. Her cheeks were getting redder and redder ...

"How there is any things..."

"That must something happen!"

"No."

"Are you guys together?"

"Maybe..." Kathy frowned.

She couldn't really guess at Joseph's attitude last night.

"What do you mean? Isn't that kind of thing clear?"

My Sweetheart

Chapter 390 Marry Me When You're Willing

The morning passed; Mathew just finished his physical examination, and the report would not be ready until a few days after.

Kathy did not have classes today, so Mathew asked her to have lunch over at the old house.

"Grandpa, I'm heading back to school." Kathy subconsciously looked at Joseph.

"I'll send you back tonight." He said as he brought Kathy to the car, so that she could not refuse.

Mathew covered his smile with his hand; he was relieved to see his grandson and Kathy getting along intimately.

In Joseph's residence.

With Kathy's presence, the old house became quite lively.

The servants already finished preparing dinner, including many of Kathy's favorite dishes.

"Kathy, sit next to Grandpa; and Joseph, you guy sit there." Mathew seemed quite friendly whenever Kathy was around.

Seeing them behave like this made Veronica feel jealous.

"Grandpa, can I sit here?"

"Of course you can."

"She's no longer your granddaughter-in-law." Veronica reminded.

"Who says? There's still a chance." Mathew found recently, Joseph and Kathy were quite close!

Something good was bound to happen!

Veronica stuck out her tongue and did not take the matter seriously.

At the dinner table, Joseph and Mathew would inevitable talk about family matters.

Kathy learnt that Julian was in Country N, and Diego and Nell were at Country C, but Mathew still told Joseph to keep an eye on Julian and Diego.

After the meal, Mathew called Kathy to the study, and left Joseph out.

"Grandpa, do you want to tell me something?" Kathy looked at Grandpa confusedly.

"Kathy, I know that you were forced to divorce Joseph; I'm very sorry about that. I hope you can give that kid another chance." Mathew said sincerely.

He could tell that, only with Kathy by his side was Joseph a better man with feelings.

For so many years, Mathew looked on as Joseph always seemed to be wearing a mask, hiding away his true self, which made him feel very distressed!

But Kathy was the only one who can change Joseph.
