

Sweetheart 421

Chapter 421

Two hours later, City N Hospital.

This was a private hospital invested by the Joseph's Group. To isolate outsiders from coming in, Bertie Marshall could only send Kathy here.

Dylan had already been blocked by him outside. Recently, Jennifer Booth went on a business trip, news on Kathy went into a coma couldn't be spread.

Joseph soon received the news and rushed to the hospital right away.

At first, the hospital did not accept other patients without application, but Kathy was an exception.

Joseph came over to the ward but was blocked by Bertie.

Bertie ruthlessly grabbed his collar and asked in a deep voice, "Can you cure her?"

Bertie just saw Kathy fainted in the restroom; he truly was frightened.

Although he was acting calmly in front of Kathy these days, just the more so, the more he was distressed.

He didn't want to hide it from her, but if Kathy knew about her condition, it would be too cruel for her.

"Can."

Bertie didn't expect Joseph to say that soberly.

Bertie looked at him unexpectedly. At least from what Bertie knew, Kathy was in huge danger no matter what treatment she chose currently.

"Are you sure?" Bertie narrowed his eyes.

"I will heal her." Joseph said once more.

After the words, He pushed away Bertie and brought a team of experts into the ward.

The tumor in Kathy's brain was already spreading and must currently be treated with medication. Although the probability of successful surgery was not high, perhaps, it must also be attempted.

Joseph wrote down all the diagnoses on the medical record. As soon as Kathy woke up, she should see them.

Only, he took out the record in a while.

Outside, Bertie went up worriedly, "When will she wake up?"

"In three hours."

As for when exactly, it depended on Kathy's health condition.

"What are you going to do?" Bertie asked in a deep voice.

According to medical aspects, Bertie trusted Joseph.

He was an authority in neurology. Kathy's operation only had a chance of success if he and top brain surgeons operate the surgery.

Kathy eventually agreed to undergo the surgery.

For Joseph, she had always believed in him from the bottom of her heart.

Jennifer soon found out about it, but Joseph didn't block her out of the hospital this time.

However, the hospital was still heavily guarded.

Plus, with the recent incident at the Hilton Group, he had to watch out for Billy.

"Kathy, how come I'm the only one who's kept in the dark about such a big deal!" Jennifer was in a fit of anger.

Kathy forced a smile on her pale face, "Mom, I... I just don't want to worry you."

After all, it was something that even she couldn't accept.

She was only twenty-six years old, but her days were numbered...

"How can I not worry about you?! Even if I would be worried, I've the right to know! You're my daughter!" Jennifer said helplessly.

By now, she had no intention of blaming Kathy.

It was just that her heart went out to her daughter.

Jennifer and Kathy embraced each other, and Kathy could clearly feel Jennifer's worry and fear.

She appeased Jennifer, although she didn't accept this matter either.

"Mrs. Booth, this is all my fault. I was the one who hid it from Kathy first." Bertie took the initiative to admit his mistake.

Jennifer looked at the two of them, and although she was very angry a moment ago, her anger had now subsided.

"Where's the doctor? I have to go to him to make sure about the surgery."

"Mrs. Booth, the surgeon is Joseph," Bertie answered.

As soon as this name came to her ears, Jennifer froze.

A hint of displeasure flashed across her eyes.

However, she knew that Joseph was a much honored statesman in the medical profession and no one dared to question the surgery he performed.

It was just that...

"Joseph..."

"Bertie, please take mom back, it's late," Kathy said as she checked the time.

She was also tired as she had been doing medical tests and injections since she woke up, she was very sleepy now.

Jennifer saw Kathy's tired look, and she didn't bother her anymore.

"Kathy, I like you, so that's why I let you stay by my side. When I married you at first, I did only want a conjugal relationship. It's just that there are some things that you and I can't control, aren't there?"
Joseph looked at her.

Kathy completely understood the meaning of his words.

After the marriage, she had fallen in love with him.

And now, she was sure that he also had the same feelings for her.

All of that was enough.

She hugged Joseph tightly and listened to his heartbeat. That moment of tranquillity was especially precious to her.

"Remarriage is something I've been very serious about."

He held her small hand.

"At least, wait until I undergo surgery before considering it." Kathy looked at him.

She knew that the success rate of the surgery was not high.

If she could get through this, she was willing to go back to be with Joseph again.

In a lifetime, it was too hard to meet someone who truly loved each other.

She just wanted to cherish it.

"I will always wait for you."

This night, the two of them slept together, and Kathy surprisingly woke up only the next afternoon.

Joseph was still by her side, and to see him when she opened her eyes was a great luxury for her in the past.

She smiled, and her hand reached over and wrapped around his arm, leaning into the crook of his arm.

This didn't last long, the nurse knocked on the door and came in.

Kathy immediately let go of Joseph.

Joseph's face was full of joy, which the nurse had never seen before.

Even though Joseph was usually gentle with people, he had an aura of being unapproachable.

"Doctor Joseph, isn't it time for the patient to be examined." The nurse reminded.

Joseph nodded his head and helped Kathy up.

There was a cold lunch sitting next to him, so Joseph ordered John to buy another one.

The nurse was waiting outside, and Kathy looked at the porridge in front of her and frowned.

"Ten years ago, he pushed our mother off the eightieth floor with his own hands," Joseph spat word by word, as murder slowly spread through his eyes.

Kathy was completely thunderstruck this time. Even as she thought about that scene, she felt horrible.

That was his birth mother, how could Julian do that!

How could he be so cruel!

"I saw it with my own eyes but I couldn't stop him," Joseph voice was tainted with pain.

Kathy heart ached and she hugged Joseph on her own accord, she should not have brought this up.

This was Joseph's nightmare.

He did not want to remember it for all his life, yet he must remember.

Only then could he avenge his mother!

"It's over now Joseph, Julian will be punished," Kathy mumbled.

She felt horrible too, thinking that twenty years ago, Joseph was merely a child.

Yet he saw a scene like this with his own eyes, his mother was murdered before him...

If she had faced this, it would have been the pain that she could not handle in her life.

She could not help but cry silently, as her heart ached.

"Yes," Joseph's emotions calmed down fast.

Before meeting Kathy, these scenes appeared in his dreams every night.

But then she came to be by his side.

He finally could have her.

Lifting her chin, he kissed away her tears lightly, carefully. She was the person he loved the most.

She was the apple of his eye.

He could not bear to see her cry.

"Don't cry, alright?" His scratchy voice resonated in her ear.

Kathy nodded, she would not cry.

Her moist eyes looked at Joseph as she held onto his face, "Joseph, I'll always be by your side when you're feeling down afterwards."

Joseph replied her with a deep kiss.

He held onto her tightly, his force was as if trying to mould her into his bones.

Jennifer returned to the Booth Mansion to rest after she had her wound dressed, and Bertie accompanied her back. When Kathy returned to the ward, she finally remembered that it was a long while since she had seen Joseph.

She missed him.

But he must have been busy with a lot of work affairs. At this thought, Kathy rested in her ward after she had her dinner.

Time passed in minutes and seconds. The nurse came in for a few times, yet she still did not see Joseph's appearance.

On instinct, she called to the nurse on her way out, "Is Dr Joseph in the hospital?"

"He is, are you looking for him?"

"No, I'm just asking," Kathy lowered her head.

The nurse returned to the office. Joseph was handling the Joseph Group's affairs, but actually he was not really that busy.

After a pause, she spoke, "Dr Joseph, Miss Kathy seems to be looking for you."

Hearing this, Joseph lifted his gaze but his expression was still dark.

His mood have not been lifted for the entire afternoon.

John who was by the side saw it clearly.

It must have been because of Kathy again.

Further, his boss had not been in the office these few days and was in Kathy's ward. Today was indeed strange, as he was actually handling affairs in the office.

"How's her condition?" asked Joseph.

"She's fine, everything's normal."

"Alright."

Then Joseph continued working.

The nurse and John were surprised...

Until midnight, Kathy had waited for Joseph but he did not come. Perhaps tonight he was not coming over...

At this thought, overwhelming disappointment overtook her.

Kathy sat on the bed feeling frustrated. After a while she sat up, took out her phone and called Joseph!

In the silent office, Joseph looked at the vibrating phone and did not take heed of it.

Just that his phone kept ringing, Kathy did not give up at all.

After a while, only that Joseph picked up the phone and stepped out of the office.

When she saw Joseph coming, only that Kathy finally put her phone down.

She was very sure now, that Joseph had missed her call on purpose!

She was a little angry, but when she saw him, her anger subsided a lot immediately.

Her eyes gradually turned red, and she couldn't control her emotions. Kathy took a deep breath and just turned around, but slammed into a familiar embrace.

Joseph... when did he come?

She looked at the man in front of her and hugged him.

Joseph raised his slender fingertips and gently wiped her tears.

He knew her fear, and he could only comfort her silently at this moment.

"Everything will be fine." He said in a low voice after a while.

Kathy didn't speak, rubbing against Joseph's chest, she raised her head.

Looking at Joseph's handsome face, she just wanted to remember him forever.

If... she really couldn't make it through.

"Joseph, if I die..."

"You won't." Joseph interrupted her quickly.

"I mean, if." Kathy murmured.

"There will be no such thing."

"You listen to me!" Kathy stood on tiptoe and covered his mouth.

Looking at him with her gleaming eyes, Kathy slowly said, "If I die, you should not..."

Before she finished speaking, Joseph had already clasped her wrist and pushed her hard against the wall, and then kissed her passionately, blocking all her words.

Joseph was very patient to kiss the tears off her face.

But her eyes were like an opened faucet, and her tears kept running.

It was too embarrassed.

She turned back, but Joseph pulled her into his arms.

Why did she lose control in front of him?

"If anything happens to you, my life will never be easy." With a hoarse voice, he seemed to roar.

Kathy stared at him without blinking, and met Joseph's red eyes. He....

The doctor's office at this time.

John hurriedly knocked on the door and came in. "Joseph, the brain doctor who was also involved in the operation had a car accident on the road."

Hearing that, Joseph's face became more gloomy.

"How do matters stand?"

"The brain doctor is now rushing to the hospital for emergency treatment. He must not be able to come over for surgery."

This time, the doctor who performed the surgery with Joseph was the top brain doctor in City N. This operation had high risk, and it must be performed by a top doctor. But now that the brain doctor had such an accident, it was difficult to find another doctor, and the operation must be postponed.

Joseph leaned against the wall, looking malicious and insidious.

There were too few top brain doctors.

And even fewer were willing to take this risk to operate on Kathy.

But this accident happened at the moment before the operation, and it must have been done on purpose by someone.

The nurse had urged outside, but Joseph stayed in the office and did not go out.

It was not until an hour later that Joseph left the office.

Bertie had come to look for him long ago. Seeing Joseph's face gloomy, he couldn't help asking, "What's the matter?"

According to the plan, the operation should have started now.

"An accident has happened to the other doctor." Joseph said concisely.

After speaking, he went to Kathy's ward.

She was standing on the balcony, letting the sun shine, making her skin glow white.

Hearing the footsteps, she turned around and met Joseph's worried look, and her face gradually became gloomy.

The operation didn't go on time, she guessed that something should have happened.

"Kathy, the operation is postponed by one day." Joseph's tone has lost his usual calmness.

"One day, is it all right?" she murmured.

"Trust me, huh?" He pressed her head fondly and kissed the top of her hair.

Very gently.

Kathy listened to his fast-paced heartbeat, closed her eyes and nodded slowly.

“Sorry, I was very busy today.” Joseph sat down on the side of the bed. Although he looked tired, his gaze was still gentle when he looked at Kathy.

“What were you busy with?”

“The neuro surgeon who will be operating with me tomorrow is Aaron Fisher, I was discussing the surgery plan with him.”

Kathy was surprised, “Wasn't Dr Hussain going to do that?”

“He has something to deal with and can't come back in time.” Joseph lied.

He didn't want to affect Kathy's mood.

Kathy didn't think much of it. She was just a little worried because it was Aaron... Joseph and Aaron had always been at odds. How did he agree to do the surgery this time?

Moreover, ever since she had joined medical school, Aaron had been targeting her.

She asked suspiciously, “He really agreed to operate on me?”

“Yeah, he is the best professor in Neurology department.”

She knew about his capability and she wasn't doubting it.

“Did you guys reconcile?” She asked nervously.

“No, we haven't. It's a doctor's responsibility to treat patients, he can't just ignore someone due to personal reasons.”

Kathy didn't say anything.

What she was worried about had always been Joseph.

“It's late. Go sleep, I'm going to sleep too.” Although she knew she was not going to be able to fall asleep easily, she didn't want to disturb Joseph when he should be resting.

“Good night, Mrs. Joseph.” Joseph kissed her affectionately.

Kathy smiled and hugged him for a long time before letting go.

When Kathy woke up the next day, the nurse was already there to take her to the operation theater.

At this moment, Kathy was very anxious and nervous.

Her gaze fell on the tall figure standing some distance away, the person she cared about the most in life.

For him, she must pass through this hard time too, for him she must be strong.

She squeezed her palms and felt the effect of the anesthetic become stronger. She closed her eyes nervously.

Joseph's face was printed clearly on the inside of her eyelids. With him in her mind, she went under anesthesia.

"What are you talking about! It's your evil deeds!" Julian retorted huffily.

"Julian, don't be fooled." Joseph reminded him "kindly".

But Julian obviously couldn't listen to him, he had easily gotten the evidence of Joseph's wrongdoing, and he wanted him to go to jail!

"Joseph, just wait."

Ignoring Julian, Joseph got into the car and faintly ordered John, "Find out who gave the evidence to Julian."

"Yes."

It was already evening when they returned to the hospital, and Joseph went straight to the ward.

Kathy was still in a coma. Jennifer and Zofia had gone back first, only Bertie was on guard.

"What's the situation with the surgery, and why is Kathy still not awake," Bertie asked worriedly.

Joseph frowned intensely, "The surgery was successful, you don't need to worry. Kathy will wake up."

"When."

Joseph was silent. He didn't have an answer either.

Joseph closed his eyes and told himself that he had to control his emotions.

After checking Kathy's condition, Joseph went over to the office. Aaron Fisher saw him and came over, "I'm sorry about the incident."

Joseph did not blame anyone. Accidents were not something that anyone could control.

"Aaron, no matter what, I still have to thank you for this time."

Aaron looked at the man in front of him. He did not expect Joseph to not pursue the mistake he made during the surgery.

Aaron didn't speak for a moment.

If it wasn't for his negligence, Kathy might have woken up by now.

It wouldn't be such an unknown situation as it was now.

"I'll go back first. Let me know if there's anything."

Joseph nodded his head. He sat on the sofa in the large office room and flipped open his wallet. There was a photo of Kathy in it.

Looking at the familiar man, Kathy's eyes became red.

She felt very thirsty since she woke up just now. She had recalled all her memories until now. She could... finally see him again.

Her surgery was a success!

She showed an excited face and subconsciously wanted to get out of the bed. Joseph had walked towards her quickly and hugged her tightly.

"Mrs. Joseph." His deep voice sounded like he missed her a lot.

Kathy's tears finally fell down.

Her surgery was really a success.

She pressed herself against Joseph's chest as she hugged him tightly, smelling the familiar scent from his body.

"Did I sleep for a long time?" She asked.

She felt that it had been days.

"Ten days."

Kathy was shocked, "Why would I..."

"You fell into a deep coma and you were infected during the surgery, that's why you couldn't wake up," Joseph said with a deep voice.

"Don't worry. It shows that the surgery was successful since you have woken up."

Kathy nodded. When she saw Joseph turning around and heading to the door, she pulled his arm subconsciously, "Don't go."

"I will change the drop for you," Joseph said lovely.

"Okay." Kathy released her hand embarrassingly.

Although there were nurses, Joseph still gave her an injection by himself. She was scared and she hid her hands subconsciously.

"Be obedient, you can only eat after you finish this drop."

Kathy finally realized that she was really hungry.

However, Joseph was giving him the injection... she felt weird about it...

"Let the nurse do it."

"The nurses are off."

Kathy doubted him. Joseph had already held her hand as she was absent-minded, "Relax."

She was very tense.
