Chapter 611 He Wouldn't Mind It

"I'm not." Kathy involuntarily retorted as she glanced at Joseph in the corner of her eyes.

However, she didn't see any change of his expression, as he was always calm without any ups and downs.

Yes, he wouldn't mind it.

"Not now, but soon." Jaydon put on a meaningful smile, his gaze falling on Kathy.

Joseph also stared at Kathy. Today, she wore a thick sweater with a long knitted skirt, a pair of snow boots, and her long hair was tied casually. Even though her dressing up today seemed contradictory, but it gave off her unique fresh temperament.

He looked away and said indifferently, "Mr Young is the newly appointed Deputy Director of Brain Department of Boston Hospital Country F Branch. He is also the new Vice President of Medicine International Institute."

"Perhaps, you will see more of each other at work." Joseph said meaningfully.

"Yes, the branch is close to People's Hospital."

"Ok." Kathy replied softly, as if she was just beginning to get to know Jaydon.

Not long after graduation, he had been able to be recognized by Joseph, and had been the deputy director of the hospital. From this, she knew that Jaydon must be very excellent, as Joseph was quite strict with work.

"Dr Young, it's almost time." The assistant reminded Jaydon. He whispered to Kathy, "I'll see you at noon."

Kathy involuntarily took a step back. In the corner of her eyes, she found that Joseph stood not far away was talking to the people beside him. He tilted his head slightly, without a smile on his lips.

She wasn't sure ... whether he had seen this or not.

At noon, he didn't expect Jaydon would come to her.

He took his jacket in his hands, with rolled up sleeves and greeted Kathy with a smile, "Here!"

There were two bicycles at the door. He politely invited, "I only have two hours."

Kathy, with red eyes, bit her lips and glared at Joseph.

She was about to raise her hand to slap his cold face, but Joseph had already grabbed her wrist.

"Let me go." Kathy was extremely resistant. Anything Joseph did now seem to be dangerous and fatal to her.

She knew it clearly what he wanted to do. He was pressing against her with his boiling heat body, extremely aggressive.

"Take it off yourself? Or should I help you?" However, Joseph completely ignored her resistance. His cold fingers stuck into the hem of her clothes and caressed her flat and warm belly.

Kathy was trembling from head to toe, looking at Joseph in front of her. He was as strange as that she had never known him before.

He wouldn't force her like this, never.

Kathy burst into tears unconsciously. She wanted to avoid this man, to stay far away from him.

She could not accept that Joseph touched her, after he had been with Zofia.

He was too despicable. He went too far!

"Scram, Joseph! Scram!" Kathy was screaming hysterically, as she knew that she could not accept it.

However, Joseph was still calm. He watched as she struggled and howled, but there was nothing he could do.

He looked at her with a deep gaze. His actions became more and more presumptuous. When he saw Kathy showed familiar and missed expression in his arms, his expression changed slightly.

Kathy was struggling. She bit Joseph's shoulder suddenly. Blood flowed out. She must have used a lot of strength.

Joseph cried out in pain. Kathy immediately pushed him away and quickly ran towards the door.

Soon the meeting was over. Young employees came out and walked toward the cafeteria in twos and threes.

Joseph was about to leave when he saw Jaydon. He asked, "You going to dinner?"

"No. I'm not hungry." Jaydon rolled up his sleeves, kind of half-listened. "You wanna see Kathy?"

"Yes." Jaydon didn't try to hide it.

"She took the first flight to Country F. Maybe she has boarded now." Joseph said slowly.

Jaydon sighed, "Alright."

After a while, he asked casually, "Are you very familiar with Kathy?"

He remembered that his mother had told him something about Kathy. She studied in City N and came to F Country three years ago.

And Joseph had been in City N.

"Yes." Joseph said.

Jaydon replied. Then Joseph flicked the ashes and said softly, "Are you gonna get engaged?"

"Yes. If Kathy agrees. And perhaps we will get married." The smile spread wider as he said this.

Joseph noticed it.

It was early spring when the long journey finally came to an end and Kathy came back to Country F. The weather was warm and willow had emerged from soil.

Kathy narrowed her eyes and looked out of the window.

"Ms Kathy, how is Europe?" The driver was in the passenger seat. He was responsible for picking Kathy up when she didn't drive.

"Great."

"A return ticket must be difficult to book. I heard that the airport over there was crowded."

"A thief? Are you alright? Money isn't everything. Safety is paramount." Vivian said with concern.

"I'm fine. But I met a friend."

"Friend? So you did meet a hot guy, didn't you?" Vivian smiled.

"It's Jaydon." Kathy sighed.

"Interesting."

"It's nothing." Kathy stabbed at Vivian's forehead and shook her head resolutely.

"Could it be that you said no because he was younger than you? Or you have a thing for Reece? Well, it seems that he hasn't been here for a long time." Vivian thought of Reece.

Reece used to often come to the hospital, but Vivian hadn't seen him for months.

"He's been transferred. You won't see him in City N in a year or so."

For Kathy, Karl's decision was unexpected. But Karl and Reece didn't get along well, and Kathy could see it during the three-year stay with them.

Kathy went to the First Hospital to visit Jennifer after work at evening. Jennifer could be discharged in a week. And Karl had more time to work as Kathy was here.

"Mom, how are you feeling?" Every day, the servants would bring Jennifer's meals over and Kathy opened the lunch box for her.

"Great. I can eat well and sleep well. I want to leave the hospital early."

"I'll consult the doctor."

Jennifer looked better these days. She was energetic. But it was better for her to stay in the hospital for observation.

After consulting the doctor about Jennifer's discharge time, Kathy returned to the ward. But soon a call came, saying that Kathy needed to attend a medical exchange meeting in F country tomorrow on behalf of the neurology department of the hospital she worked in.

"Just go back if it's about work." Jennifer warned.

"I have a meeting to attend tomorrow. Take care of yourself, mother."

Returning to the Bridges House, Kathy turned on her computer to receive the email. She glanced over the schedule of the meeting and a speech at 10:00 attracted her attention.

"Today is my celebration party. Are you going to be absent too?" Zofia couldn't hide her disappointment.

"You should know that being able to come here already shows my greatest patience."

After saying that, he turned around without any hesitation.

At the entrance of the hotel, Joseph saw a skinny girl squatting under the street lamp without moving.

He looked deeply into her. After a long time, he slowly walked up to her.

Kathy squatted on the ground, vomiting acutely with cold sweat covered her body.

She wanted to call the driver, but her fingertips were trembling slightly, so she couldn't even hold her phone.

Joseph stood quietly behind her, but she didn't even have the strength to look back.

He bent down and picked her up without a word.

A faint masculine aura mixed with a red wine flavor--one that once haunted her so much.

Now that she was suddenly lying in his familiar arms, she couldn't help but shrink back. She was afraid of him instinctively.

Joseph moved a little stiffly. He carried her to the side of the car with strides and pulled out the back seat door. He directly threw her in, then sat down in the driver's seat and started the car.

After driving for a few minutes, the car stopped. He got out of the car and left Kathy lying alone in the back seat.

As the car stopped abruptly, Kathy felt even more uncomfortable in her stomach.

She forced herself to sit up and pulled open the car door. She could not help but vomit before she could open the car door.

A drop of vomit splashed onto Joseph's dark brown leather shoes. Kathy looked up in panic and saw his cold face.

He placed a bottle of water and a box of medicine beside her and said in a deep voice, "Don't drink if you can't."

Kathy bit her lips tightly. She did not have the strength to unscrew the bottle.

However, Joseph only watched her indifferently and did not intend to help at all.

Chapter 616 Thank You for Your Gift

After returning to the Bridges House, Kathy had told the servants to prepare dinner. Karl was not here tonight, but the table has been set for three.

"Jaydon, you can stay and eat with us." Jennifer said kindly.

Jaydon smiled and looked at Kathy calmly. She never looked at him.

"I'm more than willing to accept your invitation."

Kathy twitched her mouth when she sat on the sofa, and she was a little absent-minded.

Jaydon sat down beside her and asked, "You don't want to see me?"

"I did not mean that."

"Don't you want me to stay for dinner?"

"Mr Young, we are not that close." Kathy kept her voice low.

"I thought we wouldn't feel so distant from each other after I came back from Europe." Jaydon sighed in disappointment.

His was born in a wealthy family, and he was handsome. He graduated from Harvard at an early age. All he saw was admiration and love from girls.

But in Kathy's case, he could only feel her coldness, except the time when they were traveling in Europe, which was one of the few times he had seen her smile and relax.

But after returning to Country F, she seemed to have put on a mask.

"Really? Mr Young, you really don't need to waste your time on me." Kathy looked at him.

"I don't mind. Anyway, I'm not in a hurry. We'll have a long time, won't we?" Jaydon leaned against the sofa, picked up the orange in front of him and peeled it off, handing it to Kathy.

She involuntarily stretched out her hand to take it, so their fingertips touched each other. Kathy trembled.

Jaydon looked at her reaction with satisfaction.

After dinner, Jennifer told Kathy, "Kathy, see Jaydon out."

Kathy replied. She watched her mother quickly return to her room, as if deliberately giving them time to be alone.

She frowned and put on a coat to see him out.

Kathy's heart bumped badly. When she raised her eyes again, Joseph had already left.

Vivian, standing beside her, was already overjoyed. She pulled Kathy and said, "It's great, Doctor Kathy!"

"Stop it. He's not that handsome." Kathy said calmly.

"Yes, he is. Doctor Joseph is better-looking than any other men in our hospital!"

Kathy didn't know what to say.

After returning to the hospital, Kathy quickly went into her work. The following week was filled with meetings and surgeries. She had to deal with all the things left undone because of her vacation.

Jennifer had been resting at the Bridges' since she was discharged from the hospital. Kathy slept at her apartment recently. It was close to the hospital, so she didn't have to spend much time on the road.

On Friday night, Kathy just finished an operation when Vivian had already ordered her a meal. Kathy returned to her office and was so hungry that she gulped down her food.

"I heard that several neurologists have left. Doctor Kathy, I think you might be busier after." Vivian said with concern.

During this period, they were already overworked. However, there were always endless surgeries, all transferred from other doctors.

"What?" Kathy raised her eyes in surprise.

No wonder that it became more difficult for patients to see her recently. Although there were already quite a lot of patients came to see her before, the number of patients increased rapidly now. She didn't know the reason until now.

"The chief and deputy chief of our department have left in a hurry. I heard that the same thing happened in other departments."

"Were they poached by another hospital?"

"Yes, I heard that it seems to be Boston Hospital, which is only one kilometer away from us."

Kathy frowned.

"The two hospitals are still cooperating with each other. Isn't it too ugly for Boston Hospital to do this?" Vivian muttered.

"Perhaps it's just a routine transfer. We shall just mind our own business."

"If we don't get new doctors, we will be working all day." Vivian yawned and said in a very dissatisfied tone.

"Hurry up and go home. I'll be on duty tonight."

"No, Doctor Kathy. You've been in the operating room for almost ten hours. You are the one who needs to rest."

The servants even made dessert at night, and Jaydon left after he finished his meal.

When Kathy returned to her room and opened the curtains, her gaze suddenly stopped.

Jaydon's car had just left the Bridges House, so she could see the other black car parked behind Jaydon's car before.

This was a private area, and usually there won't be any other cars parked nearby.

Who was it?

A thought flashed through her mind, but she quickly threw it away.

It couldn't be Joseph.

After a while, she still couldn't drop her thought and went down to the living room. She pulled out the video from the surveillance system and was stunned after zooming in.

It was the pretty face that she had dreamed of for three years.

She trembled heavily and staggered backwards, her eyes turning moist.

What was he doing here?

Kathy had been awake all night. When she got up the next day, she immediately ran to the balcony and did not see Joseph's car anymore.

However, she couldn't calm down.

After breakfast, she had just stepped out of the door when a white Porsche steadily stopped at her feet.

"Jump in. I'll take you to work."

Kathy frowned and looked at Jaydon with hesitation, who had already gotten out of the car and opened the door for her.

She was not used to it.

"Mr Young."

"Kathy, just call me Jaydon, OK?" He smiled tenderly and charmingly.

Kathy returned to the office, but Vivian still did not believe Kathy's words.

"Is he really just a doctor from Boston Hospital? You two have known each other before, haven't you?"

"Yes, we have." Kathy concealed it before because there were other people around. Now, she admitted it.

"What's your story?"

"He is my blind date." Kathy raised her eyes. Seeing that Vivian wanted to know more, she said seriously,
"It's work time. Hurry up and go get the medical records."

"OK, fine." Vivian replied in a dull voice, but she kept the news in mind.

In the afternoon, Kathy's schedule was to go to Boston Hospital for a meeting. Jaydon had returned, so she needed to discuss the details of the operation next week with him.

Vivian volunteered to go with her and Kathy did not refuse. She would still resist spending time alone with Jaydon.

Two blocks away, the building of Boston Hospital was magnificent and grand. It was not a public hospital. But it was said that everyone could see a doctor here. Moreover, the charge was not high, making it a good choice for civilians.

Vivian paid much attention to the news about this hospital lately, and she had been whispering to Kathy about it all along the way.

"I wonder if Joseph will be there for a long time in the future. If he also moves to Country F, I can see more of him."

Hearing Joseph's name, Kathy stiffened slightly, and her expression turned a little unnatural.

"It seems that you are not busy enough." Kathy teased.

"No matter how busy I am, I have to make some time for my idol. It was because of Doctor Joseph that I chose to work in a hospital. He motivates me!" Vivian recalled.

Joseph was indeed a role model for many people in the medical industry.

Kathy didn't have any emotions. She regretted bringing Vivian over with her.

The name of Joseph was repeatedly mentioned.

When they arrived at Jaydon's office, Vivian was instructed to communicate with other medical staff, so there were only Jaydon and Kathy in the office.

"Your hand..."

Kathy's body stiffened and she did not turn around. After a while, she finally used her trembling hands to fasten the buttons of her shirt.

"Mr Joseph, all I want now is for us to be strangers."

Kathy could not see Joseph's expression at this moment, but she waited for his reply.

She knew he was a man of his words.

It had been a long time before Kathy heard Joseph say, "Alright."

She left the room and suddenly heard him chuckling softly, "Good, Kathy, if that's what you are wishing for."

Her heart contracted heavily, and she whispered, "Thank you."

Mu Joseph put out the cigarette in his hand and quietly curled his thin lips, saying word by word, "But I believe you will soon regret what you said."

When Kathy walked out of the room, she immediately went to the bathroom to tidy herself up.

She didn't leave until she couldn't see a trace of chaos.

However, just as she stepped out of the elevator, she saw Jaydon coming out of another elevator.

"Don't you have a meeting to attend?" Her voice was gentle and plain.

But in fact, her mood was still very bad.

Over the past three years, she had become more proficient in concealing her emotions.

"Mr Joseph called off and rescheduled the meeting. It's weird that he was just there." Jaydon was confused.

Kathy smiled mockingly. Suddenly, she thought of Joseph's rage just now. Could it be because she was with Jaydon?
