My Sweetheart

Chapter 711 Heartbreaking Joke

Lincoln glanced deeply at the office. "You remind him to go back when the time is up. He is injured and can't get tired."

Joseph didn't leave the hospital until the evening. It was time for dinner when he returned to Joseph's residence.

Maryam hurriedly greeted him, "Brother Joseph, have you eaten yet? Come here and I will serve you dinner."

He glanced indifferently, "Has Kathy eaten yet?"

Maryam said lowly, "I called her, but she ignored me..."

The man went upstairs directly. Maryam and Grandpa looked at each other, bowed their heads and continued to eat silently.

Mathew looked at his back and sighed deeply.

When Joseph entered, Kathy was still lying on the bed in her original position and her eyes were covered by her hair. he couldn't tell if she was asleep.

But when she heard his footsteps, her fingers on the bed moved.

Joseph walked over and stopped beside her, leaned over and looked at her face for a long time. Then he said faintly, "Kathy, get up for dinner."

Kathy closed her eyes, didn't speak or move.

The man waited for a minute, then leaned over and lifted her directly from the bed. Kathy opened her eyes immediately and looked at him coldly.

He was stung by such gaze, and said in a low voice, "You have not eaten for a day. Go down to have a meal, okay?"

He still asked for her opinion?

Chapter 712 She Made herself Cheap

Kathy had been sitting in the dining room alone for almost an hour, before the men in the kitchen came out with dishes.

He always wore a white shirt and had a cold aura. His handsome face was serious. The blood on his shoulders was not obvious, but she can still see it at a glance.

The servant had already taken away the leftovers, and Joseph served one meat dishes, one vegetable dish, and a soup.

Even the rice was just cooked, "Have a meal, huh?"

He filled a bowl of rice and placed it in front of her.

Kathy picked up the chopsticks and ate quietly.

She couldn't let herself starve to death. Since she didn't jump off the beach, she couldn't let herself die.

He didn't deserve to let her die for him, and everyone in the Joseph family didn't deserve.

Joseph was sitting next to her and watching her slowly eating with deep eyes.

When she was eating, she was gentle and delicate. Her movements were mechanical. She seemed to force herself all the time.

She accidentally caught a glimpse of several wounds on his hand. One of which was exposed, which was a clearly visible scar.

It should be cut or burned.

She just glanced at it and then looked away. There were no any emotions in her eyes.

It was like a needle piercing the tip of his heart. Joseph felt a lot of pain, but he still looked at her intently.

After forcing herself to eat a bowl of rice, Kathy got up and went back to the bedroom. The man still followed her every step of the way.

As she went up the stairs, her head was dizzy, and the man's low voice immediately fell into her ear, "What's the matter? Are you uncomfortable?"

Kathy compressed her lips indifferently, and laughed silently, "Don't pretend anymore. You can stab me in the heart, will you still worry about me?"

As soon as she finished speaking, she was immediately picked up by her waist.

Kathy found out that recently Joseph get out early and came back at dusk.
He still slept on the floor every day, but he had left before she woke up. It was long after she fell asleep that she occasionally heard slow footsteps and knew that he was back.
She had been living in Joseph's residence during this period. Without Joseph, Mathew's attitude towards her has become even colder, even the eyes looking at her were full of disgust.
She would even take the initiative to have a meal with them, because she found that as long as she appeared in front of Mathew and Maryam, their mood would be particularly bad, and even had no appetite to have a meal.

She was happy to do such a thing now.

As soon as she picked up the chopsticks, Mathew asked her coldly, "Kathy, Joseph has always been outside this time. Do you always quarrel with him, so he refuses to come back?"

Although Maryam would accompany him every day, his adopted granddaughter was naturally inferior to his own grandson. At first Joseph ignored him directly in this family, but now he didn't show up in front of him.

Even if the guard said he would come back every night, Kathy was the only one who could see him.

Kathy lowered her head and drank the soup. She had no appetite to eat, but she couldn't abuse the child in her belly, so she forced herself to eat something every meal.

She raised her eyes and said faintly, "What if I quarrel with him?"

A smile hovered on her lips, "What? Your grandson refuses to talk to you and doesn't want to see you, so you can only find me to inquire about him?"

Maryam was very dissatisfied with her attitude, "Kathy, I respect you as my sister-in-law, but don't go too far. Because your brother just died, so grandpa and I always endure you."

Joseph curled his thin lips mockingly, "If that's the case, what's the point of you staying here?" With that, he left in a stride.

Maryam lowered her head, her hands on both sides gradually clenched into fists.

Joseph looked indifferently at the doctor examining the wound for Mathew, "It's okay, the cut is not deep. I will apply some medicine to it later and he will be fine after bind up the wound a period of time."

The doctor and Joseph were old acquaintances and asked with concern, "What happened? How did Mr Mathew cut his hand?"

Naturally, he could see that the gap was cut by himself.

Joseph said lightly, "he is suffering from depression. You ask a psychiatrist to make an assessment for him. If it is serious, let him stay in the hospital."

Hearing this, Mathew immediately retorted coldly, "Joseph, do you want to keep me in the hospital just for Kathy? You can directly put me in a mental hospital."

Compared to his excitement, the man was calm, "Compared to home, the hospital is obviously more suitable for recuperation, isn't it?"

Mathew stared at him and suddenly felt that this man was too strange, he took a deep breath, "Joseph, I am your grandpa!"

He said lightly, "If you are not my grandfather, you can't live at ease."

"Which eye did you see me at ease? Three years ago, I warned you to stay away from Kathy, but what about you? What did you do? False divorce? Now you still let her stay in Joseph's residence, let her appear in front of me every day."

Chapter 715 What Did It Mean

Maryam breathed a sigh of relief when she saw Mathew come back, and said to Kathy lowly, "So I let you get a divorce as soon as possible. After all, Grandpa is the closest person to Brother Joseph."

Kathy's casual words quickly interrupted her, "Joseph will not drive me away just because he committed suicide. Even I know he is acting. Do you think Joseph doesn't know?"

Maryam realized that Kathy's eyes were very dark, but bright, and she spoke in a very light voice, "Maryam, let me teach you how to make mischief."

Before she could react, Maryam only felt that Kathy suddenly reached out and grabbed her. She subconsciously wanted to pull her hand out, but she didn't know if because of excessive force or what... the woman in front of her suddenly fell from behind.

As soon as Joseph came in, he saw Kathy standing on the side of the stairs. His heart was beating very fast. He subconsciously called her, "Kathy, stand still..."

But before he finished speaking, the slender figure suddenly leaned back heavily. He almost watched her roll down from the second floor with his own eyes.

"Kathy!"

The familiar voice in her ear seemed to shatter her eardrums.

Kathy slowly closed her eyes, but found that her consciousness was very clear, and the ceiling above her head became hazy and distant.

She felt this familiar feeling again in pain.

She thought she wouldn't hurt anymore...but, she didn't expect it to be more painful than the last time, more painful...

Maryam stared blankly at the woman rolling down in front of her, and stared at her hand blankly. She really didn't do anything just now...

She didn't push her at all... How could Kathy roll down...

Joseph didn't know how he ran to Kathy's side. When he bent down to pick her up, he saw a pool of blood.

"Kathy."

His voice was trembling, and for the first time in his life, there was an unabashed panic in his eyes.

No matter how Mathew next to him stopped or even prayed, the strength of the man's hand was still great.

If they couldn't stop him... Maryam will be strangled to death by him.

"Joseph...Maryam really will be killed by you, you let her go. I already lose a granddaughter. This is my only granddaughter... calm down!"

He didn't even know if the man who had fallen into madness didn't listen to him or didn't hear him at all.

"Buddy." Lincoln couldn't help but walked over, put his hand on Joseph's shoulder, and whispered softly, "Kathy is still in operation, you can't kill her here."

Hearing that, Joseph's hand was released.

Maryam was almost out of breath. Finally the force on her neck disappeared, and she fell to the ground immediately, clutching her neck and coughing violently.

Joseph let go of his hand blankly, turned back to the place where he was waiting, and continued to wait.

Mathew frowned and his expression was terrible.

Maryam coughed, cried and explained, "Brother Joseph, I really didn't push her...how could I push her..."

She would not do this, of course she would not.

Kathy was still the rightful hostess of the Joseph family. How could she have the guts to push her downstairs, and still in front of Joseph. Was she looking for dead?

Mathew recalled the situation at the time. They really only saw Kathy rolling down from above, but didn't see how she rolled down.

Taking into account the mood of his grandson, his tone slowed down, "Joseph, let's check this out. Whether it was done by Maryam or Kathy fell down herself, there is no conclusion yet."

Chapter 717 She Is Always In His Heart

Joseph stayed in the ward until the evening before leaving.

In the car, he received a call from John, "Mr. Mu, is the plan going to continue? The evidence we collected from the Ross Group is not enough. If we act now, there will be risks."

Joseph's handsome face was inverted in the rearview mirror, cold bloodthirsty, "The original plan changed. I want Darius not to turn over."

It took a long time for John to react, "Then I will continue to collect evidence." He hesitated, "Mr. Mu, Darius is very careful in doing things. We may have to delay for a while."

"Start with Vivian." He said coldly, "I don't have so much patience. I will see the results within three days."

Before John could answer, he hung up the phone, his eyes full of evil emotions.

Darius...if it wasn't him...heh.

Returning to Joseph's residence, Mathew was relieved when he saw him coming back, but his expression was still ugly.

After a pause, he walked over with a cane, "Kathy, how is she?"

Joseph's eyes were cold, as if facing a stranger.

But when she looked at the timid Maryam behind her, her eyes were like sharp swords, and she said coldly, "She hasn't woken up yet, so I don't understand you now, but Maryam, live your last few days."

Maryam turned pale with fright, and walked a few steps forward, with crystal tears in her eyes, "Brother Joseph, what do you want me to say before you can believe it, I really haven't pushed her..."

She herself naturally knew that this matter was unclear, and Kathy made it clear that she was framed.

That woman was really cruel enough to make herself fall.

The soft eyelashes trembled, Kathy opened her eyes slowly, her face was still pale, and her dark eyes were quiet.

"Joseph, let's get a divorce."

Joseph looked at her condescendingly, and subconsciously retorted, "No."

Kathy closed her eyes again, it seemed that this kind of conversation made her very difficult, or would pull her wounds from time to time, "You said, three months, if I want to leave, you will sign."

"Kathy." He called her name, his hands pressed against her soft face, "I won't divorce you."

He had never planned, he would never get a divorce in his life.

Kathy hadn't spoken for a long time, and said lightly, "I don't want to be your wife anymore, even in name only, Joseph, I really can't take it, I can't take it!"

She looked at the ceiling above her head, her bloodless lips made a cold smile, "You are right, I came back to torture you, but I really can't stand it anymore, Joseph, I beg you, please... ..Let me go."

She was so pale and weak that she had already lost two children in her body, as if she had taken her life with her.

The way she was lying on the bed made him feel that as soon as she closed her eyes, she would never open them again.

This feeling made him feel terrified and helpless, and even more dull pain.

Kathy turned her face and slowly stretched out her hand, placing it on Yu Guangxia in the setting sun, her fingers were almost transparent.

The tears just fell, and the entire pillow was wet.

With these hands, she personally strangled her child.

Kathy laughed silently. Her child was gone, but he still kept Maryam. She couldn't help thinking whether he really regarded her as Maryam or fell in love with this woman.

Joseph's face suddenly became cold and stern. His gaze was thrilling, which made Maryam feel like she was being dismembered.

"Kathy." Mathew broke the deadlock first, "it's fine you have woke up."

Maryam was busy taking this opportunity to speak, her pitiful voice with fear and pleading, "Sister-in-law, I know I said something that shouldn't be said, but I really didn't push you... Would you explain to Brother Joseph, OK? I did not push you down, nor kill your child..."

"Maryam, shut up!" The man's roar made Maryam, including Mathew, were terribly shocked.

His eyes were so cold as if he wanted to kill her, "I remember I have told you that you are not allowed to show up in front of Kathy again."

'I did not kill your child...'

When Kathy heard this word, Kathy's eyelashes flickered, and her heart hurt.

It turns out that even if you know something well, but saying it out and not saying it out were completely different.

She was in a trance.

Mathew had never been reprimanded by his grandson, and his mood was even more gloomy. He can't help but become cold, "I come here to apologize. Is your attitude like this?"

Joseph's face was still very cold, "Get out of here!"

Mathew finally understood at this moment, Joseph counted the pain and anger of losing the child on them.

Maryam's face turned pale, and she didn't expect to hear such words.

Why she didn't push Kathy, she still deserved to die?

Joseph didn't give her a chance to explain, and went straight upstairs.

In the dark bedroom, the curtains were pulled up, and there was no sound at all.

In fact, he didn't even know that other than using power to trap her beside him, what else he can do to keep her...

At this time, a servant knocked on the door, "Master..."

"Come in."

It was an old maid who had worked in Joseph's residence for many years. "Young master, Madam should stay in the hospital for a while. She is hospitalized alone, and her family is not around. No one go to see her, plus she just had a miscarriage, she may feel depressed. Apart from staying with her more... I saw that Madam planted daisies in the garden a few days before the accident. You can bring it to the hospital. Do I take it to you?"

Did she still grow flowers in Joseph's residence?

Joseph nodded and responded faintly, "I'll get it myself later."

The servant smiled and nodded, then quietly left.

To bring her something she liked, maybe her mood will improve. Thinking about this, he got up to go downstairs, but quickly stopped. He turned and walked towards the bed.
