My Sweetheart

Chapter 721 The One She Loved the Most

Joseph took out the clothes in the bag and walked to her, "Change clothes, I will take you out later."

Kathy frowned, not knowing what he wanted to do. She said faintly, "The doctor doesn't say I can be discharged from the hospital, and I also don't want to go out."

After he left, she must find a way to leave here.

Joseph had reached out to throw back her quilt and leaned down to untie her medical coat. Kathy watched him and was still motionless.

The blue and white medical coat was unbuttoned by his slender fingers, revealing her white skin. Her eyelashes flickered, "What do you want to do?"

He spoke in a low voice and his warm breath sprayed on her collarbone, "I want to change clothes for you."

Kathy frowned and watched him take off her clothes.

Joseph's fingers paused. She was wearing a hospital gown, but she didn't wear underwear.

After he took off her clothes, the fair and beautiful figure of the woman was completely exposed in front of him.

Suddenly his eyes were deep, and his fingers became stiff.

There were a lot of scratches on her body, and there were still bandages on her elbows, back, shoulders, and even her forehead.

After a long while, Kathy watched him stiffly retracted his gaze, and said lowly, "Don't hurt yourself again next time, no matter for what."

Then he picked up the clothes next to him and slowly put them on her.

She didn't move. But even if she didn't look at him, she could clearly feel his deep gaze resting on her.

The eyes seemed to be full of heartache, but it also seemed to have other emotions.

Kathy's knee still hurt. This was her ward, so she wouldn't bother herself for them.
Joseph kissed her on the face, and then nodded to Mathew, "Okay."
He went out first. Mathew came by himself, and he looked at Kathy complicatedly when he went out.
She was lowering her head and taking off her coat. Her expression was so indifferent and she didn't even look at them.
In the corridor outside.

"Joseph." Mathew looked at the indifferent man, "You really have to ruin Maryam?"

Joseph's eyes were vaguely impatient, "I thought you knew my style very well. Maryam hurt my lover this time."

Mathew persuaded, "You now also know that Kathy's child has nothing to do with Maryam. She may just say something that shouldn't be said, but you can't let her leave City N forever."

Mathew kept as calm as possible, "Anyway, if I hadn't brought her back to Joseph's residence, she would not have come to this point today. I can guarantee that she will never appear in front of you and Kathy again in the future, but don't ruin her completely."

The chill in Joseph's eyes became deeper, "Yes, if you didn't bring her back to Joseph's residence as a scapegoat for you, otherwise I wouldn't be standing in front of you now."

Mathew's face suddenly paled, "What are you talking about?"

Joseph looked at him coldly, "From the time you knew that I was going to be with Kathy, from the time you knew that Marlon was the murderer, you wanted to use Marlon's life to pay for Veronica's life, right? Because you know, because of my existence, you could never avenge Kathy."

Joseph sneered, "You also know that I actually wanted to let Marlon go, but you said she was pregnant and forced you to find Marlon. You set a trap and your purpose is to make me and Marlon give tit for tat. Darius's people could be there because Maryam indeed informed him, but the reason she was so bold, is you are always behind her."

Joseph's eyes were always cold and alienated. Such eyes didn't seem to be looking at a family at all, but more like an insignificant stranger.

Finally, he said lightly, "You are my grandfather, and I will not do anything to you. Veronica's death has nothing to do with Kathy. You misled me at the beginning, I also knew that she was also a victim, but I still put all the blame on her...Grandpa, I hope you not to show up in front of her in the future."

Jaydon suddenly turned sullen, "Why do I feel I am insulted? You tell me right away that you are just exaggerating Joseph's power."

She would get him into trouble? Did she think he had no ability to protect her?

Kathy was embarrassed and said lowly, "I'm just worried about you..."

He looked at Kathy and quickly decided decisively, "I will take you away as soon as you recover."

Kathy looked at Jaydon's determined eyes and nodded slowly for a long time.

She just didn't know why, at this moment, her heart was empty in an instant.

Jaydon looked at her eyes. The quiet mood didn't belong to Kathy. He was distressed, but he didn't know how to ask.

He knew that her brother was dead, and knew that she was hospitalized because of a miscarriage. No matter what it was, asking her again would be tantamount to uncovering her wounds, so it's better not to ask.

When Joseph returned to the ward, Jaydon had already left.

Kathy watched him put the lunch box on the coffee table, beside the sofa and then took them out.

She lifted the quilt, put on slippers and got out of bed.

Joseph raised his eyebrows, a little surprised at her obedience, but soon realized that she came down by herself probably because she didn't want to be held by him.

He only prepared dinner for her alone. Kathy didn't know what fun he will have to sit and watch her having meal, and she didn't bother to ask him.

The way they get along over the past month had been like this. Kathy was calm and indifferent, and never took the initiative to speak to him. He asked to be discharged from the hospital and go back to Joseph's residence to nurse her body two times, but she refused.

Joseph's face would be gloomy every time, and when Kathy thought he was about to force her out of the hospital again, he restrained himself again.

Kathy's face suddenly became cold, "Then don't drink, I want to sleep."

The man hugged her waist and the strength in his hands did not loosen at all. Kathy looked at him displeased, "Joseph, what do you mean?"

He stared at her with deep eyes, then his eyes fell on her pink lips, his Adam's apple rolled, and he whispered, "I can drink, but you need to kiss me."

Knowing that she had put poison in the tea, he dared to drink it. Did he look down on her poison or was he confident in his body too much?

Kathy reached out and took the tea cup, and handed it to his lips with a provocative expression in her eyes, "Then you drink it."

He looked at her little face with a smile on his lips, "Kiss me."

Kathy didn't blink, "Okay."

So Joseph lowered his head in accordance with her actions. The fragrance of the tea overflowed in his breath and was very comfortable. He drank the half cup of tea without hesitation.

She just put the cup down, and the man had been kissing her.

"Hmm..." She opened her eyes wide, and looked at the man's face close at hand. All the words were stuck in her throat and couldn't say anything.

He licked her soft lips, his drunken and blurred eyes seemed to sober up suddenly, and he immediately pressed her onto the soft sofa under him.

Kathy opened her eyes, her eyes were clear. After he left her lips slightly, she said, "I know that you are a doctor and can tell the taste and effect of my medicine. It's not easy to drug you. "

Joseph looked down at her. "So you put medicine on your lips?"

"Yes." Kathy nodded. "This is the only way I can think of to reduce your reaction and defense."

He couldn't stand the word being linked to her name!

Before she could speak, she saw that the man had picked up the knife next to her. He squeezed the handle of the knife into her hand forcibly, his low and indifferent voice was full of persecution, "You know how to do it."

When she held the handle of the knife, the man's hand loosened, "You hate me for killing your brother, don't you? I said, I will pay you back. Come on."

Kathy's eyes widened, looking at the man in front of her almost inconceivably. She grasped what was in her hand, and said, "Joseph, don't think that I dare not kill you. If you really want to stand in front of me, I will do it."

He actually forced her like this, he actually wanted to force her in this way.

Kathy's eyes gradually cooled down. She slowly raised her hand, and the tip of the knife was pointed at his heart. She said clearly, "If I stab you, will you let your people let me go?"

There was despair in her eyes, without the slightest concession or compromise.

Joseph said indifferently, "If you stab me, I will give you a chance to leave, but Kathy, if we meet again next time, you won't have such a chance again."

Kathy smiled, "So you mean, if I can't kill you, then I will be brought back by you one day, right?"

What he meant was that she had better pierce his heart, so that he would never have this chance, right?

She hid the mocking smile in her eyes and said softly, "Joseph, we are really not suitable at all. We are all too extreme. Gambling with our lives will only hurt each other."

She used their child's life, and he, used his life.

Kathy just felt that the light from the ceiling above her head make her feel suppressed and almost suffocate.

When Kathy was at a loss, the phone in her hand rang, and she looked down at the call. It was Belle, the servant of Joseph Bay.

Her fingertips trembled violently, and she watched the name flashing in a daze, but she never answered the phone.

The driver in front probably thought her appearance was too weird, and couldn't help but say, "Miss, if your family call you, you should answer it quickly. You go out at this time, your family will be worried."

Her hands trembled, and she answered the phone.

Belle's voice sounded like she was about to cry, "What the hell is going on with you and Mr Joseph? How could it be like this?"

Kathy bit her lip tightly and didn't speak.

"Madam, where are you now? Come back quickly, this... will really kill him."

She murmured, "Did you send her to the hospital?"

She maybe... didn't stab him in a fatal part, right?

She shouldn't be so cruel.

Belle really cried this time, "How to get to the hospital... Mr Joseph doesn't let us send him to the hospital..."

Her heart suddenly tightened, and she heard Belle cry harder, "... He has to drive to chase you by himself, how can he drive in such a situation... Madam, I beg you, please come back quickly, otherwise he will die..."

He was stabbed and shed so much blood... He still insisted to drive to chase her personally?

Her mobile phone fell from her hand, and the tears flowed more turbulently.

She bit her lip fiercely, and said cruelly, "You can call Mr Mathew, I will get on the plane and leave here today, I won't go back."

There were not many people at the airport at this time, but because Lincoln brought so many people over, it still caused a lot of panic.

Kathy's cheeks were pale but she calmed down quickly. She pursed her lips and looked at Lincoln faintly. "He never said not to let me go when I left, Lincoln, you have no right to stop me."

Lincoln was already anxious at the moment. He strode forward and grabbed Kathy's arm and took her away. "Kathy, I am very worried about Joseph now, so I don't have time to hear you talk nonsense. In short, if you don't go with me now, I can't guarantee what I will do to Jaydon."

His tone was arrogant. As the son of the Fletcher family, his methods were comparable to Joseph.

Kathy said coldly, "Then you can deal with me as well."

After that, she shook off Lincoln's arm firmly.

Lincoln's anger that had been suppressed finally broke out, "You hurt my friend for this man? Kathy, why are you so cruel!"

Kathy didn't blink her eyes, her expression was mild and indifferent, "I'm so cruel? He forced me with a knife, don't blame me for everything."

Lincoln was still furious, "You are his wife, but you run away with other man and still have no guilt! Obviously it's your fault!"

He took a breath and felt that no matter how much he said, it would be a waste of time, "I don't want to say anything to you. You go back with me now!"

Kathy frowned. "Could you not be so excessive?"

Lincoln was already very angry. He stared at Kathy angrily and yelled loudly, "Joseph had a car accident in order to chase you, and now you say I was too much? If he didn't like you, I would not care about you at all!"

Now even Jaydon was stunned. Kathy hurt Joseph?

Kathy didn't speak, just looked at him lightly.

After a while, she lowered her eyes, "Isn't he in a coma? I don't want to stay in the hospital."

No matter how intimidating Lincoln was, Kathy would never go back to the hospital. He could only open a room in the hotel closest to the hospital and send someone to keep an eye on her.

Kathy still had no expression on her face. She had a meal, took a bath, closed the curtains and went to bed.

Her nerves were very uncomfortable, and she seemed to have never been so tired.

She didn't want to do anything except rest, and soon fell asleep in the suite.

Mathew kept guarding in the hospital. Until the effect of the anesthesia gradually dissipated the next night, Joseph slowly woke up.

Lincoln was so excited that he almost cried. "Dude, you finally woke up!"

He stepped to the ward with tears in his eyes, "I took Kathy back. What do you want to do with the traitor Jaydon?"

The man lying on the hospital bed slowly opened his eyes, and a look of disgust gradually appeared on his face, "Who are you? Your expression is so wretched."

Lincoln was shocked at first, but before he got over what was going on, the man frowned and said displeasedly, "Where is Kathy? Why is she not here?"

Lincoln had an illusion of falling from heaven to hell and returning to the world.

He didn't grasp the point at once, and said tremblingly, "Dude, did you just say I'm wretched?"

He was so handsome, how could Joseph say he was wretched?

Joseph didn't have much strength to speak at this time, but it didn't affect him to continue to show a disgusting expression, "You are a man, but your behavior is like a sissy. So you looked wretched."

Joseph was very displeased, very dissatisfied, and there was a bit of sadness in his tone.

Kathy raised her eyes, "I had already printed the divorce agreement and signed the divorce agreement before I left. We should have divorced three years ago. Joseph, it was you who used the means to keep our marriage."

Joseph squinted his eyes, his eyes quickly filled with coldness, "Kathy, the man you were looking for is so useless. He is not my opponent, so don't try in vain to take my woman."

Kathy frowned. What was he talking about?

In her memory, although the man was jealous of Jaydon, she didn't think he would treat Jaydon as a real rival in love.

He just didn't like any men around her.

She asked solemnly, "Do you know how you got in a car accident?"

Joseph's dark eyes looked at her, his handsome face tense, "Because you were going to run with that man, I chased you and had a car accident."

Her brows furrowed tighter, and she asked faintly, "Why should I run?"

The man's expression suddenly became sullen, his face was still weak, but the coldness in his eyes was not diminished at all, "Because you don't know who loves you the most, you are wobbly between me and him."

Was he teasing her, or he really had amnesia?

She raised a finger, "What does one plus one equal?"

"Kathy, your name is registered as my wife! This will never change! Don't think about it, we will not divorce!"

Kathy looked at his handsome face and spoke faintly, "I said that we should have already divorced, but you didn't make our divorce successful at that time. In my eyes, this marriage is over. I like Jaydon, I only like him, always."

She now wanted to know whether he can't remember anything, or whether his memory had been messed up.

The man's face changed suddenly.

"We get married not because we liked each other, we just got what we needed. You need a wife, and I need to get marry because of the pressure from my home. When the time is up, we break up."

Kathy pursed her lips and put on a false smile, "Jaydon was your subordinate before. I am attracted by his temperament. I like the young and energetic men like him, and don't like the domineering and unreasonable man like you when I was young."

Joseph's obsidian eyes looked at her solemnly. His eyes were so dark that his skin seemed to not be a little bloody.

Her heart softened, and she turned around without looking at him again, "I'm going to get lunch."

Seeing the woman leaving, a familiar pain spread across his heart, spreading across the limbs at an extremely fast speed.

As soon as Kathy came out, Lincoln came in. He was keenly aware of the atmosphere in the ward.

He smiled wryly, he stepped forward and said, "What's the matter with you? Are you uncomfortable?"

He muttered in his heart, 'did Kathy say anything to stimulate him?'

Joseph said coldly, "What kind of man Kathy likes?"

Lincoln scratched his head, thinking hard about what he knew about Jaydon:

"He looks very gentle... restrained, handsome, he is best among the straight A students..."

Joseph's eyebrows tightened tighter, and the wounds all over his body were aching.

Straight A student?

He was also a straight A student, he was also very gentle, but when facing Kathy... he can't be restrained.

Kathy came in ten minutes later with the dinner plate. Lincoln was no longer there. The bright ward was so quiet that breathing can be heard. The man closed his eyes and breathed evenly.
