

Sir, You Don't Know Your Wife Chapter 1032

The moment Desire finished speaking, she successfully lifted everyone's spirit as they answered her at the same time. "Yes."

It was the first time Lara and Desire experienced what it was like to race against time.

There were more than a hundred people at the scene and all of them were elite soldiers of the MX.

Not only that, Lara even called the professional search and rescue team from the MX on her way over to help look for Janet together.

The search and rescue team had rescue dogs with them, but even so, they ended up sniffing in some open spaces and failed to find Janet anywhere.

Two hours later, Lara and Desire's team gathered together again.

"Lara, how is your side of the search?" Desire panted.

Lara furrowed her brows and shook her head, showing how upset she was. "We found nothing."

The two hours of search yielded no results.

Seeing that the sun was about to set, they realized that if they still could not find Janet after she had gone missing for almost two days, there really was no hope of her being alive.

"Why don't I ask everyone to go back and have a rest first? We can continue the search tonight."

"No. The sun is about to set. Our chances of finding her will be even slimmer after that."

With that, Desire became even more worried.

Just as Lara and Desire were at a loss, a loud roar of a plane was suddenly heard in the sky.

As they turned their heads at the same time toward the sound, they could see two familiar men showing up in front of them.

“It’s Lee.” Desire was stunned. “Who is the other person?”

Lara squinted her eyes to focus on the person. “He is a member of one of the three major families in Sandfort City—Young Master Henry, also known as Henry Moss.”

After looking at each other, Desire and Lara walked toward the two men.

“Lee, you are finally here.”

As soon as Desire saw Lee, she immediately felt assured, as if all her worries were gone at once.

At that moment, he was wearing a black trench coat as he pushed his glasses and looked at them nervously. “Where is Janet? Have you found her?”

“No.” Lara shook her head before turning toward Henry and asked. “Why are you here?”

Instantly, he raised his brows. “What’s the problem? My sister-in-law is missing, so why can’t I be here?”

When Lee first received the call from Desire, he was in a business meeting with Henry at Sanders Enterprise. The moment Henry heard that Janet's life was in grave danger, he and Lee immediately set aside all their work and rushed over here.

However, Lara was still speechless as she rolled her eyes at him. "It's good that you know to come here, but what about Mason? Doesn't he want his wife back?"

It was already two days, but they still could not find him and he never answered his phone.

A man like him is not worthy of Janet's love.

"Um..." Henry felt a little awkward because he had also tried to call Mason before arriving, but no one answered the phone. Janet might be dead, but isn't he worried at all? Tsk! Love isn't reliable after all. I thought that Mason loved Janet very much, but it obviously isn't the case! If I knew how little he cares for her, I would have snatched her for myself long ago. If she is my wife, I will never put her in danger no matter what.

Upon looking at his face, Lara immediately thought of that sc*mbag—Mason.

The more she looked at him, the more annoyed she became, so she stared and growled, "All of you are the same."

"You..." Henry was fuming as he was not willing to back down. "Don't talk nonsense. How can you put me in the same category as Mason?"

"One tends to take on the color of those around them," she sneered.

"You!"

“That’s enough!” Lee rubbed his brows irritably. “You all are going home if you continue to argue.”

As soon as he said those words, Lara and Henry immediately shut their mouths.

Then, Desire stepped forward with a gloomy expression. “Lee, do you have a plan?”

He nodded his head and pointed upward, telling everyone to lift their heads.

Desire was stunned at first. “A helicopter?”

“Are we going to use the helicopter’s infrared thermal image to find her?” Lara asked.

She had heard of that method before, but it was usually used by the air force.

Lee nodded his head. “Since today’s condition is extraordinary, we might not be able to find her.”

After all, the helicopter’s infrared thermal image was used to find people through body heat. Once the person was dead, there would be no body heat to detect. At that moment, it still was not confirmed whether Janet was dead or not, so he was not certain whether the helicopter would be able to locate her.
