

Chapter 215

The Delta team members coordinated from all over the hospital, and everyone made their way out to the SUVs.

"Anyone get eyes on the vampire?" Liam said over mind link.

Everyone shook their heads.

"It was probably unrelated to us," Owen said. "Could be a vampire stealing blood bags."

Liam nodded. "Let's get out of here anyway," he said.

"Since we're in the city," Thea said. "Anyone want to stop and get some pizza or something? Celebrate a job well done?"

Liam looked at his watch. "We have time," he said.

"Who knows the best place?" Thea said.

"I do," Maverick said.

A little while later, they were all sitting together enjoying the best pizza any of them had ever eaten, laughing and mind linking about the op.

While everyone was laughing and talking, Kai kissed Thea's cheek.

"You look beat, darling. Are you okay?" Kai thought to her.

"That took a lot out of me," Thea thought. "I think I had to concentrate too hard too long, and feeling what they felt was rough."

"Do you want to head home so you can rest?" Kai thought to her.

"No," Thea thought. "This is important for the team. They need to celebrate when an op goes well. They're too serious all the time."

"You're an angel," Kai thought. He kissed her again.

They tuned back into the group ruckus over mind link.

"Landon pretending to have a seizure. It was one for the books," Maverick said.

"Your performance with the doctor was even better," Landon said.

Everyone laughed.

"So now the Luna can paralyze people, put them to sleep or in a coma, and make them feel debilitating pain," Maverick said. "That's going to come in handy. We need to start planning for situations where we can utilize that."

"She can also heal people," Shaw said. "She woke people up from comas, fixed a paralyzed guy."

"I'm not a healer," Thea interrupted the group's mind link. "The coma and paralyzed patients were different. They were already healed. I just tweaked some things. You saw there wasn't anything I could do for the burn patients or the other pain patients. You can't rely on me being able to heal."

"Why were you able to help some and not others?" Wyatt said in mind link.

"It's complicated," Thea said in mind link. "I'm not clear on what I can and can't do yet. Maybe I should just tell you everything I did today. You guys can help me figure it out."

The group nodded, and Thea went through every detail.

"So the healing had already taken place in the paralyzed patient," Wyatt said over mind link. "The damaged or dead cells were cleared away, but they weren't replaced because the spinal cord can't generate new cells. Your magic can create whatever is in the DNA, so it made the missing cells."

"With injuries, nothing is missing," Liam said. "The body is functioning the way it's supposed to—healing itself."

"I can give the body a boost," Thea said. "Make sure it's working optimally. That's it, I think."

"The coma patients were already healed and probably had missing cells like the paralyzed patient. I bet the cells in the brain don't regenerate either. Your magic probably made what was missing, then you manipulated the electrical impulses to jumpstart it," Oz said.

"The burn patients had too much healing left to do. You couldn't create new skin and nerves when they still had to remove the damaged tissue and fight the infections," Kurt said.

"It sounds like the other pain patients had genetic diseases," Jonah said. "Your magic works with the DNA and optimizes it. It can't change the DNA."

"A straight healer would be able to magically fix genetic diseases and injuries. We see the difference," Owen said.

Thea could sense the excitement in the Delta team members. They had been waiting most of their lives for Thea to get her gift so they could help her use it.

"What about the manipulating stuff, paralyzing people, making them feel pain. How easy or hard is it? How does that affect you?" Liam said.

"Feeling the burn unit was taxing. I'll have to practice to know how making people feel that will affect me, but I feel bad making any of you feel that."

"It was unpleasant," Shaw said. "But you didn't keep it going for long."

Comments

Support

Share