Hogwarts Express

It had been a very sluggish morning, the rain poured down as the air was chilled. Within a cabin, students hadn't yet got an older packed from being eager, and shy to be the Hogwarts express, mixed with a sense of what was set to come.

Draco was escorted by older wizards that his Mother and Father hired, ahead for their new safety and care. He glared at the Weasley twins, ones who surrounded him, uncomfortable with all this hissing.

All the 5th year students who came back to start were slowly being, being brought into the train, the sound of gossip and goodbyes from family rang through the platform.

Harry hugged Sirius goodbye, immediately being taken into custody by the Ex- all his reasons for protection.

Draco scanned the crowd as he was brought closer, spotting Blaise "Yeah! I must go to my car, I'll see you all back at the train, I'll send a short response, nursing at her so he could to his friends only.

"Draco! I haven't seen you all summer! You didn't even text!" The visually shocked Draco in worry.

"Nothings changed about me." Draco whispered, not wanting to talk about personal things near his fellow Scytherins, He stepped on the train, greeted by Penny and Daisy.

All the way down the train was here sitting alone in an empty compartment up against the train's caboose.

Professor McGonagall had met Harry inside the train, which was a very big surprise- She took him her hurry sit in the back, explaining that certain students needed extra care and protection for the year.

Harry hadn't even questioned it considering he came out of a shock, and a all he'd killed Voldemort with the help of his friends, three were now sitting in the same Wizards, and Ministry who disagreed with his actions.

"Now you stay here" The trolley will be by shortly. We will depart soon for now." Professor McGonagall commanded.

A few minutes went by, the sounds of students taking their seats and talking together.

Draco was pulled aside, separated from the Slytherin cabin of the express. He just assumed it was more measures his parents set up.

"Mostly ridiculous." He muttered to himself.

"I'm sorry Mr. Malfoy, but considering your father's been a servant of the past war loans, you must be secluded and watched this year—" Professor McGonagall explained, stopping at the compartment door.

Draco rolled his eyes, standing outside the compartment as he watched the Professor walk back down the halls of the train. He stood at the door, clenching his fists. He finally opened it, taking a few steps in only to have Pansy tightly hug same.

"Malfoy!!!" Harry said in shock.

"Pansh? Pansie-ugh."

The two of them stared in awkward silence for minutes at a time, not sure of what to say.

"What are you doing in here?" Draco growled, shutting some words.

"Probably the same reason you're here." Harry responded slowly, unsure of how he felt seeing Draco in a whole happened.

Draco stood there standing in the open door, frozen and angry, but mostly lost afraid to move.

Harry swore that he saw Draco's skin pale even more than usual, "Hmm? Um... going on?"

Draco closed the frosted glass door behind him, closing the privacy curtains. "Only because I have no choice." He slowly walked over to the other seat, sitting on opposite sides.

It was very upset in the dark cabin for me, strictly sounds weren't torn slowly talking- a and the sounds of rain. As Draco and Harry avoided eye contact for the first half hour.

"So what did you do for the last two months?" Harry politely tried to start some sort of civil conversation, trying to forget the past.

Draco shot him a sneer, but his move not to be rude. "Spend the whole summer at the Manor... alone." he looked away towards the window.

Harry sighed, knowing what it felt like to be alone. But the last two months he had spent with Sirius, learning to be a family. "My summer was boring." he had, not wanting to share attention to himself.

Draco looked at Harry from the corner of his eye, noticing he looked all wired. His hair was longer, his clothes were very out of place for a rules. Normally Harry wore old clothes and used a tech token but not this time, he caught a scent of new scent and he resented it.

Harry noticed Draco was staring, but he couldn't help but stare back. "Malfoy, can I ask you something?"

Draco was caught in guard, but forced himself to relax. "What?" "Why did you come back?" Harry asked.

Draco looked directly at Harry, so icy. "I have the right just like everyone else." he whispered.

"That's not what I meant, why did you- wanna come back?" Harry asked a bit worried.

"That's none of your business Potter." Draco growled, looking away again.

Harry rained at eyebrow, seeing that Draco was still rude as ever. "Fine." he he'd, leaning back in his seat.

Up echoes of the train, the 4th years had been seated nearest to the front door. Only a few students came back, the Ancient of each house was back with a strong, vote, Luna Lovino, Neville, Ron, Ron and Hermione. Penny, Blaise, and Gayle from Slytherin. Some of their peers from the same class attended as well, but chose to leave for the year.

Ron and Hermione had gotten used to a huge fight a week ago about their future existence, sorting a part time job and a house.

Neville and Lovino were in close ear-ear, snuggling together as they watched what would be many days from the window.

Ginny sat alone by herself, a row behind her brother Ron, listening to Hermione and Ron's bickering.

Seamus and Dean sat close as they gossiped about where Harry had gone. They'd heard rumors about his friends since the summer of a attended letters and an owl. :)

Penny and Pansy were also sitting close to Blaise since he'd left Gayle third whatever as he usually did. Everyone seemed to stay within their own cliques.

There were rumors of big news for the students returning for their 6th year, but nobody had heard anything substantial enough to confirm it. All they knew is they would be put in advanced classes and have more free periods than normal.

Ron stuck his head out into the hallway, looking for Harry.

"Stop that Ron we aren't supposed to get out!" Hermione in a need of parchment at his head. "Don't get us in trouble before we even get there!"

"Sorry mate, why can't we get the problem?" Ron complained, sitting back down.

"Things will be ok' since this year Ron...maybe that's a good thing." Hermione said, trying to cheer him up.

"I heard Professor McGonagall say there's nothing negative about the news...maybe it will be fun!" Luna said suddenly, "Let's think of the positives!"

"Don't be so fly-y and ir' Luna, what if it's bad?" Pansy asked rather roughly.

Ginny glared at Pansy, wishing she wasn't such a grumpy.

"I think it's bad..." Gayle mumbled.

Everyone got quiet other nervous looks, subtling amongst themselves. All the younger students were making a loud roar of chatter and excitement, now bore all at once.

The Hogwarts Express finally made its time, pulling into Hogsmeade. Everyone grabbed their things and walked out with their friends. Certain students stayed behind waiting to be the last in the train.

Draco felt the train slow down to a stop, sighing in relief that they finally arrived. He knew they still had to ride the carriages to the castle outside. "This is stupid!" he quickly growled to himself.

Harry stood up, opening the door to peer out. He turned down the door when he saw tons of students still filing out. "It's going to be a bit..."

Draco crossed his arms as he leaned back in his seat." Just what I wanted to do with my morning! Sharing a cabin with the Golden Boy, Mr. Saint Potter." He rudely mused.

Harry shook his head. "You're not on my list of wounds I like either...you think I like spending time with someone who hates me?!" He glared.

Draco raised an eyebrow, unsure how to respond. I don't hate you...why can't I say this! Shaking his head in frustration.

Harry sighed, looking out the window and out over from Montcrow to discuss the hopes of parties and dances.

Draco sat stood at the Slytherin table, not looking at any people his usual crew as everything that happened. He pushed his head around his palm with the fork, making a disgruntled face.

"Attention!!! Everyone is to know for the opening ceremony to begin!" Professor McGonagall's all her word to her throat to amplify the voice.

The room slowly became silent, the rumble of chatter fading.

"Everyone has been sorted! If you are not at the house table you belong at, please switch now!" Professor McGonagall stepped down to the podium, Professor Lupin and Hagrid or other side of her. "I am honored to welcome you to another year at Hogwarts! Hopefully this year we can try or without any problems!"

A few whispers and conversations broke out between students.

"Furthermore! Everyone who has been newly sorted and welcomed by your new houses congratulations you are becoming part of the school. Professor Lupin and Professor Hagrid will discuss the next part of announcements." Professor McGonagall stepped down, the meeting back to her seat at head master.

Professor Dumbledore stood up from his crowd. "Good morning old professor Lupin! Professor Hagrid, and to the students! Welcome to the prefects and teachers to their houses in single file please!" He announced, waving his hand signaling all the other professors to lead the way.

"As for all the students from 2nd to 7th year please do the same! The students coming back to redo their year please stay with us and move to the front!" Professor Hagrid's booming voice announced.

A an ten minutes of students leaving and separating in single file, the 6th year students came to the front of the Great Hall, sitting at the ends of each table, waiting with curious faces.

This time Professor Snape stepped to the podium, waiting for silence.

"I know all of you heard rumors and gossip on the train... some students also know that things will be di erent. I'm sure you've noticed your robes and uniforms have no color... that is by choice." Professor Snape started to explain.

Everyone looked at their clothes, gasps and confused remarks made. "We have stripped you of your houses, all of you are involved with sorts the war and are under the watchful eye of me and teachers. What we went through doesn't come without suspicion and danger." Professor Snape slowly told the news.

Rebellion and outrage broke out within the students.

"SILENCE!!" Professor Snape shouted with his wand to his throat. "You will not be Disobedient! You are being so sorted! Anyone who refuses will be expelled!!" He said angrily.

Professor McGonagall nodded over, calming Severus, "Now everyone gather around the seating hat and let's get this started."

Everyone begrudgingly made a line, slowly taking their turns.

"Time waster if you will in the new houses, but if it's longer, you will cooperate and do as you are told." Professor Hagrid commented, walking over to supervise.

Many students took their turns, most in the same house. It wasn't until Hermione came up that everyone fell silent, curious to the choice of the hat.

Hermione sat down, remembering her first time, staring up at the bonn of the hat.

"Well you've become sort a sack Witch in your elder years... hmmm di ult. I'll" Pausing not pondered. "RAVENCLAW!!!"

Everyone clapped and cheered, Hermione was very happy about the decision, joining Luna who was sorted the same as she always was.

Ron was up, sorted in his order. Seamus and dean, all sorted into Gry Jeder.

Ginny and Neville were up next, all sorted back into Gry Jeder without fail.

Harry walked up, sitting in the chair. Whispers surrounded him with worried faces starting.

"Well well well Mr. Potter it seems you have changed more than I anticipated." The sorting hat mocked.

"Please don't be rude." Harry snapped back.

"Hmmm you went against my suggestion when you last your first year...but I think..." He sorting hat thought.

Everyone had their breath, so did Harry, clenching his eyes shut.

"GryffindorI!"

The whole crowd of students and Professors gasped loudly, leaving a pair of cyclid silence in the Great Hall.

Draco felt his stomach flip violently as he heard those words. He had been sorted Slytherin as always and now he found himself wishing to be in the same house as him. "I'm just like...what the bloody hell is going on!!!"

Harry felt his heart sink, even more thinking this would happen. He turned his head to look at Professor McGonagall with saddened eyes. She looked back at him with a frown, but she knew in the back of her mind it was a possibility.

Everyone was lost with hardened hearts as Harry walked over to the rest of the Slytherin's.

Harry was mortified, he looked at all the Ancients and Witches from the Sorting glee, calming Percy laughing.

"It looks like everyone has been sorted! Now the last few things we have to today..." Professor McGonagall cleared her throat. "You will be directed to your new and old dormitories by the teachers who have been assigned to your houses. Please be sure to follow them carefully. For your new and old houses you will find in the Great Hall tomorrow schedules are already with your belongings that have been brought to the dorms!"

Professor Hagrid walked up to the hutch. "I know all of this has been stressful and a big inconvenience! But the houses you've had in the past won't go unnoticed. You will always be our special students never forget that."

"Now everyone it's time to go to the dorms! Class starts tomorrow and you need this time to unpack and familiarize yourselves with your new surroundings." Professor McGonagall announced, dropping down to help.

Everyone walked with their professors to their new and old houses without a word.

Harry and Draco were walking in the back of the Slytherin line, both afraid of the situation.

Draco refused to speak, his mind was racing with questions and worrying things. They didn't reached one of the deepest parts of the dungeons. Draco felt claustrophobic.

The door opened to a very large common room with gothic black leathers and wood, couches, and kitchen surrounding it. Hundreds of stone low tables infront of a giant grey cobblestone fireplace. Dim lights from chandeliers hanging from the ceiling illuminated the room, along with the green and grey colors of Slytherin that complimented the decor.

Draco sighed in comfort from the familiar scenery, stepping infront of a great non-staircase.

Harry followed everyone up the wide stairs, leading to the bedrooms.

The floor your back home the walls of a very large once walked bedroom. A great amount of space between beds was made, with optional privacy screens and clothing chests. The walls of the room mounted two large black leather couches with wall bookshelves with items of study books and textbooks.

Harry was happy that the Slytherin dormitories were so fancy and comfortable...but he never thought he'd ever be in a place as a student.

Blaise came up behind Harry, smacking him on the back. "I never thought I'd see the day! The Golden Boy coming with the enemies!"

"Shut up Blaise, ah matches are over now!" Pansy came over, Draco immediately reserving him out of the loop conversation.

Harry smiled nervously, picking the bed closest to the back wall. "I don't want any trouble..."

Gayle walked over to him, glaring furiously. "You don't belong here."

Draco swooped in, stepping infront of Gayle.

Gayle stared a look with Draco, backing a

"Potter you can't seem to go anywhere without causing an issue can you?" Draco said sarcastically, blocking the way so his friends couldn't bother Harry.

Harry rolled his eyes with a angry glare. "What do you want Malfoy?"

Draco sighed, adversely irritated. "Try to keep a low profile, you are around a bunch of wizards that don't like you..."

"You hate me too, leave me alone Malfoy." Harry said with a saddened voice.

Draco heard the word hate for the second time. I never hated you he thought, watching Harry unpack. "Looks like your Slytherin uniforms and robes are already in your trunk." Is' ing the trunk open at the end of the bed.

Harry pushed it closed, glaring. "We are living together this year, let's do each other a favor and stay out of each other's way."

Draco backed up, feeling slightly hurt, clutching his arm nervously, but he didn't let it show. "Fine by me."

What the two of them didn't know, is that would prove to be impossible.

Continue reading next part ⏎