St. Mungo's

Harry and Draco had every class together, along with their friends. They were enjoying the time they had together, feeling like more of a tight-knit group. Everything was going fine until Severus Snape had pulled Draco out of his last class, refusing to let Harry go with him.

Draco was living up to his drugged-away-from-behavior-for-months by Severus. "Get your hand in." Draco said to Harry.

Severus finally let go when they reached the dungeons. "Silence you both! If you choose to fight, then you will be treated poorly!" He snapped, snatching a folded Daily Prophet against his chest.

Draco took a glaring angle at Severus. "Why are you giving me this trash?" He re-did it.

"Your Father has much front page Mr. Malfoy." Severus glared at Draco's indignant behavior.

Draco opened it, reading the article. "Yes...this isn't true...my Father is in Azkaban?" He read the news print in horror.

"Perhaps things...learn to act. A. week. turn..." Severus slowly suggested. "Either way, Mr. Malfoy, an Auror will be coming to get you tonight or dinner...you are expected to speak with the Aurors."

Draco looked up at Severus with disgust. "Are you mad?" He stopped loudly. Knowing the messages to the floor. "I can't remember seeing that man ever again! I am ill and I choose never to even be in the same manor!"

Severus pinned Draco violently to the wall. "Now you listen to me! Your Mother is refusing to deal with this situation on you are the only one who can be your father's medical proxy."

Draco furiously tried to get free. "Let go of me!"

"You will be getting End of discussion, end of argument!" Severus yelled, letting Draco go. "You don't want to hurt it! Hasten."

Draco turned to look on Severus, running to his room deep in the Dungeons. "This just can't be! My father was never suppose to see daylight again!? How are I supposed to face my Father or what he's done like this drought, saddened and completely devastated.

Harry walked out of Advanced Herbology, worried that Draco never returned from Severus taking him away. Harry couldn't help but look out as he was inside the castle, pulling his wand out. "Revelio Draco!" He quietly spoke, seeing the light point in the direction.

Harry put his wand away, quickly sprinting through the Dungeon hallways. He knew where Draco's room was, he'd been there before. The room was quiet, but a slight opening at the corners of the A panel bed was seen. "Draco?"

"Go away." Draco's voice called.

Harry came over, climbing into the bed, closing the curtains behind him. "What are you doing alone in the dark?" He laid down with him.

My Father has been released from Azkaban...he's at St. Mungo's...on the fourth floor for observation." Draco told Harry right away, even a bit Sanirosa told him not to.

"What!?!? That's impossible we were both at his trial...he had a life sentence!" Harry stated in disbelief.

"I don't what I told Scrupe! But he said the situation obviously changed...it was on the front page of the Daily Prophet...I am being forced to go to Mungo's tonight. My mother is refusing so I am being put on her behalf."

Harry knew how miserable this must be for Draco, wishing he knew how to help. "You know they'll need you to be involved with him and everything he does?"

"I am the only heir to the Malfoy name, the fortune, the Manor." Draco sighed. "He is to be out of my Mother-inlaws."

Harry pulled Draco to his chest, rubbing his back. "I'll come with you."

Draco buried his face into Harry's chest, taking in the scent of cinnamon and passion inside. "I couldn't ask you to do that. And it's not everything that's happened."

Harry pulled Draco upwards, kissing his lips. "I will always be with you." He wrapped his arms around him. "I'll go with you."

Draco's eyes widened, knowing what Harry was trying to start. "Thank you...Harry." He pushed his face into his neck.

Harry smiled, tightening his hug. "Let's get out of these musty clothes and put on something comfy if we are going."

Draco's carefully detached his arms, rolling off of Harry with a groan of discontent. "I wish we didn't have to go at all."

Harry bounced out of the bed, opening both sides of the closet. "Well atleast we'll be together, it will be easier to get through it."

"I'm not wearing any of that yet...because I'm not." Draco pointed, slipping his t-top as he took his pins to his chest.

Harry opened the drawers on both sides. "Which ones you want?" He asked, taking a his cloak and jumper.

Draco rummaged through it, pulling out a tiered green T-shirt and black Slytherin logo sweatpants. "I refuse to dress up for this nobody!"

Harry tried to hide a smile, but he couldn't help it. "You're cute when you're pissed off, Draco."

Draco he eft, kissing Harry's lips. "Let's get ready."

Harry changed his clothes, setting off and