Padded Prison

Draco and Harry were deftly probed by Professor Bora-ahora of History of Magic class, bored to death by thousands of notes and a lecture that seemed to have no end. Hermione and Luna sat a few desk rohsm of them, equally starting to get drowsy.

Harry couldn't help but yawn, causing Draco to look at the tail of the notes for the class. He looked over to Draco who was literally asleep. "Draco." He whispered, taking his hand. "Hey!"

Draco gasped, rubbing his face."Sorry...this lecture is making me insane." He sighed, writing down the notes he noticed.

Harry pulled Draco's chair up against his, leaning into him. "Do you want to visit your father and Lucius one done today?"

Draco glared at the thought. "Not especially...why do you ask?"

Rubbing his left eyebrow he yawned, finishing his notes.

"We should go back since you found out new information from Pansy, and your also receiving owled from?" Harry looked out to Draco.

Draco nodded, sighing as he put his books back in his school bag. "Hell you come with me again? We can go the normal way."

Harry smiled. "Of course I'll go with you." He packed up his things, putting away the parchment more they made. "We have to let Professor McGonagall know before we go."

Draco took both their assignments to the table with his bags already crossed, walking a very lazy look that had pearls and unions embedded on the cover. She looked up with a smile. "Mr. Malfoy it's nice to see you." She crossed the list. Harry's bag to you here today?" The professor hand on the side of the desk.

Draco nodded over, sitting down. "I'm sorry Professor, I just don't want to escort." He said meekly, lowering his head slightly. "I know it's against the rules, so..."

Harry hugged Draco. "Old man here to go, you'll be edge of the grounds and separate to Purge and Draco a bit." She sternly said, smiling a little. "Really?" Draco asked, shocked that there was no argument or restriction.

"Mr. Malfoy, we've known the matter with Greyback and your Father...we are so sorry that none of us were able to help prevent the situation." Alnessa apologized, petting Draco's hair for a second. "You are allowed to go see your Father's property, but not the Manor."

"Why are you being so nice to me?" Draco asked confused.

"Oh Mr. Malfoy don't look so forlorn." She whispered, sitting in the chair next to him. "Are you all seven years you attended Hogwarts that you were under the mercy of your Father and Mother...you to learn to know! And energy! We will always be here to assist you and care for you no matter the circumstance." She smiled.

Draco hid his face. "Thank you Professor."

Alnessa slipped her hand under Draco's chin, pointing his face up. "No boy you don't need to thank so much like this anymore." She wiped the dampness from Draco's cheek. "You have Mr. Potter and all of us to be there for you, we know you've been through a lot."

"Thank you...but I feel like I don't deserve your kind words. Voldemort killed your friends and the entire house...I don't deserve forgiveness." Draco shakily sighed, a tear falling down his cheek.

Alnessa immediately took away his arms, embracing him. "Oh no no no this is not true! You scared for such a long time! It's time to heal and become better!" She tightened her clutched arms around him. "Voldemort died all of that, not you!"

Draco allowed himself to hurt, wrapping his arms around her back, sobbing into her shoulder. "I'm so sorry!"

"No, my dear boy there's nothing you need to apologize for! You are a brave man to him. You will get those teeth in the back of Draco's head, trusting his hair. "Just it all, it's okay you're safe."

Draco nodded, sighing as he put his books back in his school bag. "Well you come with me again? We can go the normal way."

Harry smiled. "Of course I'll go with you." He packed up his things, putting away the parchment more they made. "We have to let Professor McGonagall know before we go."

Draco took both their assignments to the table with his bags already crossed, walking a very lazy look that had pearls and unions embedded on the cover. She looked up with a smile. "Mr. Malfoy it's nice to see you." She crossed the list. Harry's bag to you here today?" The professor hand on the side of the desk.

Draco nodded over, sitting down. "I'm sorry Professor, I just don't want to escort." He said meekly, lowering his head slightly. "I know it's against the rules, so..."

Harry hugged Draco. "Old man here to go, you'll be edge of the grounds and separate to Purge and Draco a bit." She sternly said, smiling a little. "Really?" Draco asked, shocked that there was no argument or restriction.

"Mr. Malfoy, we've known the matter with Greyback and your Father...we are so sorry that none of us were able to help prevent the situation." Alnessa apologized, petting Draco's hair for a second. "You are allowed to go see your Father's property, but not the Manor."

"Why are you being so nice to me?" Draco asked confused.

"Oh Mr. Malfoy don't look so forlorn." She whispered, sitting in the chair next to him. "Are you all seven years you attended Hogwarts that you were under the mercy of your Father and Mother...you to learn to know! And energy! We will always be here to assist you and care for you no matter the circumstance." She smiled.

Draco hid his face. "Thank you Professor."

Alnessa slipped her hand under Draco's chin, pointing his face up. "No boy you don't need to thank so much like this anymore." She wiped the dampness from Draco's cheek. "You have Mr. Potter and all of us to be there for you, we know you've been through a lot."

"Thank you...but I feel like I don't deserve your kind words. Voldemort killed your friends and the entire house...I don't deserve forgiveness." Draco shakily sighed, a tear falling down his cheek.

Alnessa immediately took away his arms, embracing him. "Oh no no no this is not true! You scared for such a long time! It's time to heal and become better!" She tightened her clutched arms around him. "Voldemort died all of that, not you!"

Draco allowed himself to hurt, wrapping his arms around her back, sobbing into her shoulder. "I'm so sorry!"

"No, my dear boy there's nothing you need to apologize for! You are a brave man to him. You will get those teeth in the back of Draco's head, trusting his hair. "Just it all, it's okay you're safe."

Draco nodded, sighing as he put his books back in his school bag. "Well you come with me again? We can go the normal way."

Harry smiled. "Of course I'll go with you." He packed up his things, putting away the parchment more they made. "We have to let Professor McGonagall know before we go."

Draco took both their assignments to the table with his bags already crossed, walking a very lazy look that had pearls and unions embedded on the cover. She looked up with a smile. "Mr. Malfoy it's nice to see you." She crossed the list. Harry's bag to you here today?" The professor hand on the side of the desk.

Draco nodded over, sitting down. "I'm sorry Professor, I just don't want to escort." He said meekly, lowering his head slightly. "I know it's against the rules, so..."

Harry hugged Draco. "Old man here to go, you'll be edge of the grounds and separate to Purge and Draco a bit." She sternly said, smiling a little. "Really?" Draco asked, shocked that there was no argument or restriction.

"Mr. Malfoy, we've known the matter with Greyback and your Father...we are so sorry that none of us were able to help prevent the situation." Alnessa apologized, petting Draco's hair for a second. "You are allowed to go see your Father's property, but not the Manor."

"Why are you being so nice to me?" Draco asked confused.

"Oh Mr. Malfoy don't look so forlorn." She whispered, sitting in the chair next to him. "Are you all seven years you attended Hogwarts that you were under the mercy of your Father and Mother...you to learn to know! And energy! We will always be here to assist you and care for you no matter the circumstance." She smiled.

Draco hid his face. "Thank you Professor."

Alnessa slipped her hand under Draco's chin, pointing his face up. "No boy you don't need to thank so much like this anymore." She wiped the dampness from Draco's cheek. "You have Mr. Potter and all of us to be there for you, we know you've been through a lot."

"Thank you...but I feel like I don't deserve your kind words. Voldemort killed your friends and the entire house...I don't deserve forgiveness." Draco shakily sighed, a tear falling down his cheek.

Alnessa immediately took away his arms, embracing him. "Oh no no no this is not true! You scared for such a long time! It's time to heal and become better!" She tightened her clutched arms around him. "Voldemort died all of that, not you!"

Draco allowed himself to hurt, wrapping his arms around her back, sobbing into her shoulder. "I'm so sorry!"

"No, my dear boy there's nothing you need to apologize for! You are a brave man to him. You will get those teeth in the back of Draco's head, trusting his hair. "Just it all, it's okay you're safe."

Draco nodded, sighing as he put his books back in his school bag. "Well you come with me again? We can go the normal way."

Harry smiled. "Of course I'll go with you." He packed up his things, putting away the parchment more they made. "We have to let Professor McGonagall know before we go."

Draco took both their assignments to the table with his bags already crossed, walking a very lazy look that had pearls and unions embedded on the cover. She looked up with a smile. "Mr. Malfoy it's nice to see you." She crossed the list. Harry's bag to you here today?" The professor hand on the side of the desk.

Draco nodded over, sitting down. "I'm sorry Professor, I just don't want to escort." He said meekly, lowering his head slightly. "I know it's against the rules, so..."

Harry hugged Draco. "Old man here to go, you'll be edge of the grounds and separate to Purge and Draco a bit." She sternly said, smiling a little. "Really?" Draco asked, shocked that there was no argument or restriction.

"Mr. Malfoy, we've known the matter with Greyback and your Father...we are so sorry that none of us were able to help prevent the situation." Alnessa apologized, petting Draco's hair for a second. "You are allowed to go see your Father's property, but not the Manor."

"Why are you being so nice to me?" Draco asked confused.

"Oh Mr. Malfoy don't look so forlorn." She whispered, sitting in the chair next to him. "Are you all seven years you attended Hogwarts that you were under the mercy of your Father and Mother...you to learn to know! And energy! We will always be here to assist you and care for you no matter the circumstance." She smiled.

Draco hid his face. "Thank you Professor."

Alnessa slipped her hand under Draco's chin, pointing his face up. "No boy you don't need to thank so much like this anymore." She wiped the dampness from Draco's cheek. "You have Mr. Potter and all of us to be there for you, we know you've been through a lot."

"Thank you...but I feel like I don't deserve your kind words. Voldemort killed your friends and the entire house...I don't deserve forgiveness." Draco shakily sighed, a tear falling down his cheek.

Alnessa immediately took away his arms, embracing him. "Oh no no no this is not true! You scared for such a long time! It's time to heal and become better!" She tightened her clutched arms around him. "Voldemort died all of that, not you!"

Draco allowed himself to hurt, wrapping his arms around her back, sobbing into her shoulder. "I'm so sorry!"

"No, my dear boy there's nothing you need to apologize for! You are a brave man to him. You will get those teeth in the back of Draco's head, trusting his hair. "Just it all, it's okay you're safe."

Draco and Harry went back to their classes, finishing out the day. They went back to their room a or the last class to finish their assignments and change into comfortable clothes.

Draco sat smiup of the dresser wanting his hairy to finish grabbing needs. "Usually I'm the one who takes ages to finish anything." Draco he released, rubbing his bitten down with both hand's sharpy.

Harry came out of the closet, pulling on a black T-shirt. "Sorry I couldn't find my black silk shirt." He walked over to the mirror.

"Didn't know you owned silk...it looks nice." Draco looked at his little definition of muscle that could be seen through the chest of the shirt.

Harry smirked. "You can gander at me later, we should go." He playfully swatted Draco's leg.

Draco laughed. "I'm fine...you're too." He stood up, putting socks and his ankle high boas on.

Harry slid the extra before the a, making sure they both had their wands and keys. "Don't worry we'll have plenty of time when we get back to Hogwarts."

"I'm sure you're okay coming with me again? I'd understand if you wanted to wait for me here." Draco felt guilty for always relying on Harry.

Harry pulled Draco into a hug. "I told you before I'll always be with you no matter what." He pushed his head under Draco's chin, resting into his neck.

Draco blushed hard, never expecting such a action and warmth. "Thank you...Harry." he wrapped his arms around Harry, pulling his face into his hair. He always smells so good....

Harry took Draco's hand, walking outside. He looked at the doors, walking down the halls.

Draco looked down at Harry's hand, feeling better that he got to hold it.

Harry noticed Draco looking. "What are you thinking about?" He lightly squeezed his hand against his.

Draco brought Harry's hand to his lip, kissing it. "You make me feel so much more confident...like I can get through anything."

Harry smiled and kissed Draco as they walked out of the Dungeons. "I promise I'll always be here."

Draco and Harry made it o the grounds, appearing to Purge and Dawse Ltd. They went inside, traveling through to Ft. Wurgo's. The air was very still, and many visitors or of, were out and about.

Draco made his way through the first floor with Harry close behind, assisting as much people as he could.

Harry grabbed Draco by the arm, pulling him behind a corner.

"Harry what are you doing?" Draco asked alarmed.

Harry pointed to two of the scarms a few feet infront of them.

Draco listened very carefully.

"Yes, I know...I'm just worried...what if something bad happens because my Father is here? There's so many deliveries patients and Healers here..."

Harry hugged Draco from behind. "Let's take it one step at a time." He said softly. "Maybe having doctors and a safe environment is good for him."

Draco sighed, doubtful about that. "I'm going to go find a Healer...I shouldn't be long...I just want an update." He kissed Harry, pulling away his cheeks.

Harry kissed back lovingly. "Be safe...don't let your guard down."

Draco pulled apart regretfully, walking down the Hall.

Harry watched painfully as Draco walked away down the hall, a feeling of dread overcoming him all of a sudden. What was that?

Draco looked around but there didn't seem to be much activity. "Hello?" He called, standing infront of the desk that seemed to be abandoned.

Footsteps were heard coming from down the hallway.

Draco clutched his wand in the back of his pants. "Who's there?!?" He demanded response.

"Relax Mr. Malfoy!" The Healer waved his hands. "No need for that." He walked up to the desk.

"Where is everyone? Why is it so quiet?" Draco asked, sitting in the winged chair.

"Usually in the beginning of the week there's not that many visitors." The Healer sat in the chair behind his desk. "I didn't think I'd see you here willingly."

"Yes well...my husband suggested I come." He admitted. "He's my Father no matter how much I detest the man." Draco glared slightly at random memories he mind pulled from his childhood.

The Healer chose to not question the boyfriend remark. "Mr. Malfoy it's good you came when you did we have some news."

Draco looked at the Healer in curiosity. "What kind of news? Why wasn't I told there was news before I got here?"

The Healer looked concerned. "Please be mindful that your Father isn't the same as he once was..."

"I'm already aware of that...why are you bringing this up? What's happened?" Draco said growing impatient.

"He's up and walking again...the Curse has subsided...he still seems to be a bit unsure if we can trust his functioning independently."

"What?" Draco shouted, standing to his feet.

"Mr. Malfoy please!" The Healer rose from his chair. "You must remain calm! If you are to stay here, this is a safe space!"

"I don't think you understand the consequences of my Father being here fully functional! Someone could get hurt!" Draco said desperately.

"He's harmless here, he's still on many potions and mood stabilizers." The Healer tried to keep Draco calm. "If we thought he was of any threat to us, he'd go back to Askaban! Please remain calm!"

Draco looked at the Healer with a crazed expression. "You're a fool if you think I believe such nonsense! Do you know how many lives he's ruined? He was a big part of that being with the Dark Lord for so many years!"

The Healer took in an exasperated breath, flattening his robes. "Mr. Malfoy, if you cannot settle down you will be asked to leave."

Draco scrunch, furious at this man. He took a few seconds to swallow his temper, sitting up to a few chairs.

"Good...now back to the news we have." The Healer sat back in his chair, giving Draco some room to breathe. "Your father is awake and alert. We have spoken to your Father already about what happened and he's a part of all of it."

Draco rolled his eyes. "I already know. Greyback wanted my father to join some dangerous revenge plot for the death of the Dark Lord, who refused and he was cursed by Greyback before he escaped."

The Healer gave Draco a questionable look. "How would you possibly know this?"

"My first call here to see my Father...I'm to give me my Mother...He told me everything she knew about it...she didn't know much, just that Greyback was his name before he was branded a Werewolf and that's when he started to become a monster." Draco's voice became horribly drunk." He continued. "And then I heard more from one of my ex friends."

"Very well...glad you know. Now Mr. Malfoy we are hoping you'll see your Father today...he seems to be very resistant to talk to us any further. Maybe a visit from his son would loosen his tongue." The Healer looked to his notes in his lap.

Draco pinched the tip of his nose in annoyance. "You don't seem to understand my relationship with my Father do you? He doesn't care like me. He tolerates me till he feels like beating me...my mother tolerates me but he does not."

The Healer tried to hide his expression of alarm, sighing. "I just please human and get see him...I truly mean that he's harmless..."

"So you think if you see it in the forms of a doll that makes it any less dangerous?" Draco shook his head. "You're only one in love." He got up, walking towards the direction of his Fathers door.

"Wait Mr. Malfoy your key!" The Healer ran over to hand him the key.

Draco gracefully walked down the hall, refusing to show how scared he was on the inside. He squeezed the key in his palm, giving a furiously as he approached the black door.

The door was newly equipped with thick double chained locks.

Draco stuck the key into the magic chains, watching them disappear. He shakily placed his hand on the iron door handle, pushing it open slowly.

The door creaked loudly as it slowly swung open, revealing the same padded and upholstery furniture.

Draco stepped in, immediately sit- erring at the sight of his Father.

Lucius was standing next to the magic window that had a open pane a night sky landscape. His hair was back to its beautiful silky white, his skin was pale as ever. His clothes were white with a matching robe.

Draco flinched as the door closed on its own behind him, pressing his back against the door.

Lucius turned to face his son. "Hello Draco." He said lazily above a whisper.

Draco just stared, has rushing through him. "Father, I can you're doing better."

Lucius walked towards his son, putting down his book on the bed as he walked over.

Draco started to panic, holding his wand in a death grip behind his back.

Lucius put his hand on Draco's cheek, stroking the skin. "You have been a very bad boy since I've been away..."

Draco whined lightly in the back of his throat from the touch, starting to tear free. "What do you mean?"

Lucius stared expressionless into his son's eyes, stepping his hand violently across Draco's face.

Draco fell to the ground from the force of the hit, cowering under his Father.

Lucius stood towering over Draco, pulling his head to the side by his hair. "You have disgraced the Malfoy name for the last time boy." He whispered against his ear. "You better watch yourself...one and that I'll, Tell half blood freak."

Draco turned at the mix of curses, his father and his word were gone. He fell to the ground, bleeding and sobbing. He sunk to the floor, his back against the cold stone. "I'm sorry..." He cried. Relieved, passing out.

Continue reading next part >