

Taming A Billionaire

#One : The Mans Dangerous - Read Taming A Billionaire One : The Mans Dangerous

Chapter One : The Man's Dangerous

Nik Spencer stared out the window trying to imagine how the night would look like. The old man wouldn't give him a break, surely it wasn't a crime to be a bachelor at age twenty-six.

Nik knew most men even at age thirty weren't married and not bothered by that, after all, marriage wasn't for everyone. Some choose to remain single while others marry but he chooses to tag along with the single men.

No! No marriage, not after the horrors he went through the hands of Kay, he wasn't ready to test such waters again.

But he's a man with raging hormones and desires, So he only considered short time relationship with the opposite sex which doesn't go beyond a month.

Surprisingly, only Tina's being able to surpass such a short time arrangement or maybe he just let her. He knew she was different from other girls who've shared his bed, maybe because he's challenged by her level of intelligence and willpower to succeed.

Tina was the heiress to a fast-growing beverage company. There was this vibe about her that attracted him to her, she doesn't take nonsense from anyone and sticks by her principle and whatever else she thinks is right.

He knew she's the exact polar opposite of Kay who depended on him so much, not willing to stand on her own and almost sucked him dry if he had not seen to her deceit

Nik felt the tie tighten at his neck and he gulped swiftly as if there was a huge lump in his throat but inwardly, he knew it was the effect of the memory. It still haunted him, the terrible mistake he made.

Frustrated and stressed out, he loosened the tie roughly and murmured a few profanities. After a long day at work, the least he needed was introducing Tina to his father and she added to his frustration.

Tina refused to come, said she had some deals to make with some foreign investors who were hard to come by. So he had to go to the dinner with no female companion, well his father would have to take it that way. After all, he was and never interested in the whole dinner of a thing.

"Could you go faster?!" Nik yelled, transferring his aggression on the innocent chauffeur

"I'm already a bit over the speed limit" the chauffeur replied as Nik gritted his teeth in frustration

"Well, make it go a little bit more faster" he retorted needing nothing further than reaching the Old Man's place and getting everything done

"I'm try-" Michael his chauffeur let out a loud gasp and barely jerked the car to a stop when a loud thud was heard

Startled, Michael stepped out of the car and shrieked at the sight. Nik closed his eyes and murmured a silent prayer "God, let it not be what I'm thinking" But Nik needed not a prophet to tell him he just hit someone Adding one final touch to her lips, Maya popped her lips to make the lipstick sharply defined. she smiled and stared at her reflection in the mirror. She definitely looked good even though she hated makeup, she loved her natural self better.

Clutching her purse, she set out to make Andrew's birthday a special one, grinning at the thought of Andrew complimenting her dress.

She didn't dress a lot, thanks to lack of money but she took out time and resources to afford this Lacy little black dress which hugged her curve so well that she realized she wasn't shapeless as her sister called her.

Raised in a family of two, her sister was the gorgeous one. Kim was tall, beautiful with lovely long dark hair and wonderful curves plus she's the perfect child.

Her Mom and dad loved her so much that Maya wondered if she was invisible in her parent's eyes. Her sister Kim, now a successful lawyer resides with her doctor husband in Newyork having the perfect life

"While I'm still struggling in my acting career" Maya snorted bitterly at her pathetic life.

She had almost given up on herself before she met Andrew. He encouraged her not to give up yet, made her feel lovable and special. So that's why she was going to return the favor tonight, make him feel special and loved.

Already on cloud nine, she attempted crossing the clear road when out of nowhere a car almost hit her but the shock sent her sprawling to the ground.

With her heart going into double-time, Maya gasped and realized she just escaped an accident though she felt some pain at her ankle and arm, probably bruised them from the impact on the hard concrete floor, she thought

"Hey, you okay?" a man stepped out of the driver's seat and headed towards her.

"Do I look okay? " she retorted, groaning from the effort of lifting herself off the ground. The man helped lift her to her feet and she swayed sideways as a result of her heels.

She bent her arms and stared at the red bruise forming there already. What a good body to impress Andrew with.

"Were you blind or what!?" Maya yelled at him, annoyed that Andrew would be more concerned over her minor injury than the effort she put into dressing up for tonight.

"I'm sorry" was what the man could say bowing his head repeatedly

"That's enough!" a voice boomed from behind her and she whirled around only to stare at a god.

His tailored suit was obviously expensive and he had a don't-mess-with-me vibe surrounding him. Maya knew at once, the Man's dangerous