

TASTING ALL MY MATES

Chapter 457

457-The Missing Mother Witch.

Enya's POV:

"You are his girlfriend, not his fated mate," I muttered after I couldn't take her ignorance anymore.

"Enya! Let's talk," I bet Theo noticed I was getting furious, so he rubbed my elbow, but I pulled away from him.

"Really! Well, the—," Kellice opened her mouth again, but this time Theo shouted at her.

"Enough! You are upsetting her," Theo yelled at her, shooting a glare at her, but she looked calm.

"Well, fine, but to answer you—I'm his mate, and we do a lot more than just talk in bed," Kellice muttered, and my jaw dropped.

Theo did a double-take at Kellice and then looked my way. He struggled to pick a side to focus on first.

"Hey!" Theo argued, spreading his arms in the air and looking at Kellice. I was too stunned to even react instantly. This wasn't what he had told me. He confidently said their relationship was for show only, but her claims were completely different.

"What? I didn't think you wanted me to hide that piece of information from her," she shrugged, bluntly staring into my eyes while I felt my body turning numb.

"Is it true?" I ignored her spiteful eyes and turned to grab Theo by his collar.

“Tell me, Theo! Is this true?” I asked him again, glaring into his eyes and making him turn to Kellice and frown.

“Just tell her the truth. It will help her.” Kellice went on to hurt me with her words.

I wouldn't be that angry because, by the end of the day, Theo never promised me any loyalty. But he is still my mate. How can he go around sleeping with her and then come back to me, looking all loyal and genuine?

“Tell me,” I yelled, shaking his body and not releasing him from my collars.

“NO!” Theo shouted, making me let go of him, but the instant I did that, he held my hands and pulled me closer. “No! You hear me? I will never cheat on you. I see how you look at Maynard and Lazlo with disgust, and at Enya! It will be a silent kill for me if I end up in the same line as them. So here is my truth. She is lying.” Theo explained, without looking away from my face. I was just watching him display his emotions and hold me tightly.

“Why are you hiding—” as Kellice tried igniting the fire again. I closed my eyes and opened them again to stare back at him.

“I believe you!” I said to Theo, and it made Kellice not utter another word.

The worried look on Theo's face was swapped with a smile of comfort.

“And I'll give up everything to make sure I don't break your trust,” Theo said softly, fluttering my heart.

I had to shake my eyes off him, or else it could become awkward. As soon as I stepped back from him, he faced Kellice, who didn't look too happy.

“If this is how you will interrupt, I will never be able to push her over the edge and get her wolf back,” Kellice sighed, tying her arms over her chest and staring at my face sadly.

“What? What do you mean by that?” I asked, staring at Theo and then at her face.

“Not emotionally. I told you, you cannot emotionally hurt her,” Theo grunted at her, making me even more confused.

“Hold up! Guys! What’s going on?” I confronted them after it was no longer a secret that they were up to something.

Theo turned to me and parted his lips to let go of a deep breath first.

“Ke—,” Theo mumbled but couldn’t finish talking when Kellice interrupted.

“I think we haven’t been properly introduced. Hi! I’m Kellice! A witch,” she smirked, reaching over to me and pulling her hand out for a friendly handshake.

“A witch?” I inquired, stunned, and befuddled.

“She is the witch who assisted me in returning to this world,” Theo stated.

“I don’t understand.” I stepped away from them both, trying to comprehend what had happened.

“Kellice contacted me on the other side and made me aware of everything going on here. She told me she would help me come out, but she wants to make sure I will be good. So, she brought me here and is babysitting me. In my words, she is my master,” Theo sarcastically smiled, trying to butter her up while she rolled her eyes at him. We both knew Theo wouldn’t care if she was on good terms with him or not. He was trying hard to be good.

“I was told by the Mother Witch what happened to him and how you have been suffering even after you gave up so much for these packs and their alphas. She made me promise to help you with everything and save your life. I sent you some texts here and there, but I didn’t know how else to help you. You were being betrayed so much by your loved ones that I knew you would not trust anything I said. In order to come into contact with you, I knew what I had to do. Since the mother witch wanted you to be gifted for the sacrifices you made for everyone, I decided to bring what you loved the most back to you.

Hence! Explains Theo standing here,” she pointed at Theo, explaining everything going behind my back.

Theo folded his muscular arms over his chest and nodded sweetly.

It surprised me that Mother Witch planned all this help for me. But where the heck did she herself go?

“That’s all fine, and I have a lot of questions, but where is Mother Witch?” I asked her directly, as she looked sadly at her mention.

“That’s the issue,” Kellice sighed, preparing me for bad news with a pause in her words.

“We have lost contact with her,” she claimed.

“Lost contact with her?” I frowned, watching her close her eyes and say.

“She is missing.” The news from her lips really shook the world from under my feet.
