Tattooed Luna by Mrs Smith Chapter 441-"Oh?" I asked, waiting to hear what he had to say.

"Crash it and let everyone know that you have ears everywhere, even without your informant..." "Or?" "Or stay in the shadows and see what you can hear.

However, I did gather some information that might intrigue you." Alec got a weird glimmer in his eye.

"What?" I asked, suspiciously.

"The old man that lives there. He hates Vin. Rip funded his operation so the old man turned a blind eye and did favors for Rip. Since Rip was killed, Vin hasn't paid him, It might be worth our while to pay him a visit with a check and see what we can do." "That's.... an idea." I stewed over it for awhile before I spoke again. "We could give him money and he could betray us or give us wrong information." "True. He could take our money and not want to work with us since he has spent his life around everything illegal." Alec agreed.

"However." He leaned forward. "He could give us all the information we are missing." "I mean, we could pay him a visit and see what he has to say." I felt a little uneasy about this.

"If we did, we couldn't use the quiet, shadow approach. Our cover would be blown." "What's even worse, if we did approach him and he said he would help us. We get to whatever event is going on and then he announces who we are. There isn't another way. out. We would be dead." I stressed. "I got a look of that place when I approached Gunther. Plus, I had my hand around his neck. He wasn't exactly a fan of me." "Money changes a person." Alec gave me a look as he said it. He wasn't wrong. Money does change a person.

Changes their motives and changes their attitude towards a situation.

"It's not like we can send Zac anywhere and Gunther and Kara have been hiding in some cabin. We are running out of tricks to see but I would like to figure out what he has to say.” “That might be our next move. See what Gunther thinks.” Alec agreed.

“You said he slept at the old man’s house. Maybe Gunther will be able to gage on if he would work with us or not.” “We would have to see if Vin is around or watching.” “We could send that pack of wolves.

Blake has been with them since a few days ago. He doesn’t have a family and I was thinking he would be good to have undercover in case we needed something.” “That would be helpful. Blake could give him a message or figure out the best way to communicate with Gunther.” I was surprised he sent Blake to live with the pack of wolves but it made sense.

“The only problem with that. If Vin recognized them, that wouldn’t be good.” Alec said.

“That is assuming Vin has enough man power to do anything about it.” “They ran to that cabin with no hesitation. Other than the helicopter we sent to look at it, we don’t have eyes. Who knows what security he has.” Alec didn’t sound too sure himself.

“Think about it. Kristen wants to go to your house for supper. She doesn’t Penny isn’t going to cook so she is wanting to bring something with us for everyone.” @ “Is everything okay?” I asked.

“Oh yeah. I think she just misses you honestly. You have been so busy with things that you haven’t spent time with Kristen and she is missing her twin.” “Look at her heart showing.” 1 ~~ laughed.

“She has been a little more emotional ~ but she does have something she wants to talk to you about.” “Emotional like Emmy?” I asked.

“Fuck no. Nothing like that.” “What does she want to talk to me about?” I asked, unsure of this supper.

“That’s between you and her. My only job was to tell you that we are coming.” Alec held up his hands.

“Thanks for the warning.” I said, dully.

"Anytime." Alec smirked as he stood up. "I'm going home to tell her I | delivered the message. We will see you | at six." "Okay. See you then." Alec nodded and walked out.

Deciding I might as well go break the news to Penny, I stood up and walked out of my office. The packhouse was busy. People were coming and going and the warriors were all on high alert.

Since the attack on Vin, I have expected an attack in retaliation but so far, Vin has been quiet.

"Penny?" I asked as I walked in the front door.

"Looking for something for supper." She didn't even look over at me.

"Alec didn't say." Grabbing a pickle, I ate it as she walked to the livingroom.

"I think I have an idea of what it might be about." Penny looked at me and sat down.

"What's that?"

Tattooed Luna by Mrs Smith Chapter 442-offer. "There's no need to trouble you further. I'll take this one. It's perfect," she said, her voice tight with emotion.

Rose observed Clarissa's tension with a pang of sadness. "Ready-made garments may not offer the same fit as bespoke ones. There might be some adjustments needed. I recommend trying it on in the fitting room for the best result. If alterations are necessary, I'll take care of it." Clarissa hesitated briefly before she walked into the fitting room. 9 Chapter 0442 "I'm guessing the Halloween party. We have been discussing costumes and food." "Alec said she wants them to go a disco ball and a 70s person." I looked at her to gage her reaction.

Penny tossed her head back and laughed. "I loved that idea. It was by far one of the better ones she tossed out there." "What else did she want?" I asked.

“Either she was going to be the volleyball from Castaway and make him Tom Hanks or be Juno.” “Those are horrible ideas.” Shaking my head, we walked back to the livingroom and sat down.

“There was some more sexual ones but we all decided to go as something funny.” Penny had made the recliners | hers. There was pillows lining it all the edges. Cups and snacks were piled neatly on the end table and her computer was within arms reach.

“The Moon Goddess was funny?” I asked turning on the T.V.

“Better than the gumball machine she wanted me to be.” Penny pulled up a blanket as Friends started playing. By the time I looked over at the next commercial, she was passed out.

Wanting to be helpful, I got up and picked up the livingroom, did the dishes and got the laundry rotated.

There was some cleaning stuff out so | went ahead and cleaned the bathrooms.

I had just finished folding the blankets when the doorbell rang.

“What?” Penny shot up, looking confused.

“Looks like Alec and Ice are here.” I tried to hide my laughter as I opened the door.

“Hey!” Ice smiled as she came in. Alec was holding a few different bags and took them straight to the kitchen.

“Oh no! I was going to do some cleaning before you got here.” Penny frowned.

“Already did it.” I said as I went into the kitchen with Alec.

“You can come do my house next.” Ice laughed as the girls came in.

"The builders have finished putting in all the cabinets and shit. Our hour is a giant dust collection." Alec was pulling the food out. He placed two salads in front of the girls and him and I each got a steak.

"I can't wait to see it!" Penny looked excited. "I'm surprised you managed to do it all by yourself. Usually, I have to do it all for you." "Hey!" Ice faked looking hurt. I was mid way into a beer and choked on it.

Beer came out my nose, making my eyes water.

"She isn't wrong." I laughed as I cleaned my face.

"If it wasn't for me, you wouldn't have even made it to fifteen years old." Penny opened her salad and took a bite.

"Send your ass back to the orphanage." Ice grumbled. "I did some stuff!" Gi |

"You did. You gave me all the information and I organized, created a plan and submitted it. Then I did the followup checks and daily set ups." Penny looked at Ice like she dared her to argue.

"Whatever. I was running my own shop." "Speaking of which, I am going to need a tattoo once our babies are born." I said to her.

"What are you going to get?" Ice asked, eagerly.

"I was thinking about their footprints down my arm or something." "With three of them, that would be | really cute." Ice agreed.

"Yeah, that is what I am going for....cute." Rolling my eyes, I just finished my beer off and got started on my food.

"Alec said you have something you wanted to discuss with us?" Penny asked after we were quiet for awhile.

"Yeah so.... we found out we are having a girl." "That's so exciting!" Penny's eyes got wide as she smiled.

"Thank you. We wanted to have a handful of kids so Alec will have another chance for a boy." "Hey! Girls are just as capable as men." Penny pointed her fork at him.

"I know that but I'm not going to raise my daughter like Kristen was raised. If she wants to fight, that will be her choice. If she wants to be a princess and get pampered, that's okay too." Part of me was a little put off by that but I understood where he was coming from. Ice didn't have the best upbringing and had very little choice on her life. He wanted to make sure his daughter was given the options her mother didn't have.

"So, what is the question?" I asked.

"Well, I was wanting to see if you guys have talked about baby names? We were discussing some and [ was thinking about naming our daughter, |

"Why are you so nervous?" I finally asked.

"I'm not nervous!" She rolled her eyes and looked away from me.

"I can see it all over your face." I said, calling her out on her bullshit.

"I'm trying to make sure the world is a safer place and their mother isn't in danger." I challenged her back.

"We really have only thrown names out there but we haven't had a serious conversation about what to name them." Penny said, trying to defuse any tension.

sound as neutral as possible.

"Are you sure? We can look at other names." Ice looked at me uneasily.

Tattooed Luna by Mrs Smith Chapter 443-"I really like that." Penny said, enthusiastically.

"It was just a thought. We haven't decided really but I didn't want to officially decide on it until I talked to you." Ice was looking at me, hoping for some reaction.

"Whatever you call her, I'll be spoiling her rotten so it doesn't really matter." I tried to sound like it didn't bother me but there was a little nagging voice in the back of my head that told me it really did bother me. Not sure why. It wasn't like we already decided on names. We talked about it once and that was it.

Getting up, I grabbed two more beers and set one in front of Alec. After opening mine, I took a long drink as Penny, thankfully, changed the subject. “I got some fabric from the store and I’m going to need help designing the goddess dress.” “Oh! I would love to help. We can either cut a whole in a dress for your stomach and just wrap the white fabric around it or just make a dress out of the fabric.” “I like the idea of cutting a whole. We can go shopping for a white dress or I can order one.” Penny acted relieved but kept looking at me and smiling.

“I need to buy Alec some 70s clothes too.” Ice kept looking at me too and it was getting annoying. Since we were done eating, I started cleaning up.

“Colt needs some robes. Maybe we can go shopping this week. Halloween isn’t far off and our chances to go are very limited.” Penny pointed out.

«Prue. We really need to get going.” Ice agreed.

Alec got my attention and nodded to the front door. Following him out as the girls talked, I sat on the porch swing and he leaned against the pillar.

“Here.” He offered me another beer.

“Thanks.” I said. Downing the one I had, I was able to open the other one and take a sip before he started talking.

“We don’t have to name our daughter that.” Alec started.

| Waving him off, I just shook my head.

“It just caught me by surprise. We | haven’t discussed names. My attention has been on Vin, not baby names.” “you have three to name. Not just one.

Plus, making a child is big. Needs to be fierce.” “Come out here to plead your mate’s wishes?” I asked with a little bit of attitude.

“No. Blake got back to me this afternoon. There is another event tomorrow. If we want to finance the old man, we need to move.” “What about Vin?” I asked, intrigued.

“Rumors say he isn’t going to show up.” Alec looked at me.

“Do you think this is our best play?” I asked. Taking a long sip from my beer, I weighed our options. We didn’t have many choices and sitting back, waiting for an attack or for Vin to get stronger didn’t feel like a great option.

“There isn’t one but if we did nothing, Vin will only get stronger.” Alec said, mirroring my thoughts.

“Just thinking that. Let go and see what he has to say.” I finished speaking when the girls came out.

Penny sat beside me on the swing and Ice took a chair.

“What are you boys talking about?” Penny asked.

“We are going to go on another trip.” Alec said, simply.

“You have been gone a lot.” Ice said.

“Do you want us to get Vin?” I asked, a little annoyed.

“That isn’t what she meant.” Penny put her hand on my knee. “Every time you guys leave, we are just worried you won’t come back.” “If we don’t leave, the fight comes here and that means more death.” I said. Draping my arm around her, she snuggled against me. Kissing her forehead, I tried to push reassuring feelings into her.

“If the event is tomorrow, we should really leave tonight.” Alec said, slightly unsure.

“Yeah, we can make it by there in the morning.” “At this rate, you guys should rent an apartment there.” Ice half joked.

“Nope, you need to come home. Who knows when I will have these babies.” Penny instantly got concerned.

“I’ll never miss the delivery.” Putting my hand on her stomach, I just felt my little guys fight it out.

“However, we do need to leave tonight.

Maybe gone a day or two.” “Might as well stay and watch the auction. Take the guys with you?” Ice said.

“Probably. Little extra cover and maybe put someone on the inside.” Alec agreed.

“Well, then I guess we should get going so you can pack.” Ice stood up.

“Thank you for bring over supper!” Penny smiled at them.

“Of course. It was nice talking to you all.” Ice looked at me as we stood up.

“Take care. Better give my niece some candy when you get home.” I said and gave her a smile.

“Is that what kind of uncle you are going to be?” “Obviously.” I just shrugged as Alec helped her down the stairs and into their car.

“I’m ready for this to be over so you don’t have to leave anymore.” Penny said as we made our way inside.

“Of course. You really shouldn’t be doing that stuff anyway. I’ll take care of it.” I said to Penny but my mind was already on the task at hand.
