The Divorced Billionaire Heiress chapter 2474-That was why Julie tried her best to invite Selena to make a guest appearance.

Julie always had an eye for potential.

It was just a short clip of around ten seconds, yet it had caused quite a stir online in an instant.

[OMG! She's so beautiful! I want to know who she is!] [Isn't this the singing bar owner some time ago?] [OMG! Her figure is amazing!] [She's so much better than many celebrities. I'm now her true fan!]

Selena was in the bar, holding a cigarette in one hand while scrolling through the comments on her phone.

She clicked her tongue and felt a little helpless.

"Everyone has great tastes to appreciate me so much!"

Chaz was speechless and thought, 'If her fans see this, they will surely cancel her immediately...'

The waiter, who was interested in the topic, came over and asked, "Boss, what's next after this clip? Can you give us some spoilers?"

Selena could not help but laugh.

"She'll undress, of course!"

Everyone was shocked.

Was this something they were privy to?

Selena twitched the corner of her mouth indifferently. "The customers will be here soon, so start preparing..."

She looked back and saw Zachary languidly leaning back and looking at her with gentle eyes and a smile on his face. Selena did not know when he got here.

She paused and laughed.

"Zach, why didn't you make a sound when you came?" "I was out of town for training the past two days and didn't have time to visit, so I was afraid that you'd forget about me. That's why I came here as soon as I landed."

Zachary smiled frivolously. His face was tough and handsome.

A faint smile was enough to steal people's hearts.

Zachary brought a gift box over and smiled.

"These are some local specialties. Everyone bought them, so I couldn't refuse. I thought you might like it. But it doesn't matter if you don't like it. You can give it to someone you don't like."

When he said this, Selena, who was initially somewhat resistant, suddenly had no reason to refuse.

She smiled and accepted it naturally.

It was heartwarming to know that someone cared about her.

"Thank you, then. If you called beforehand, I would've reserved the best private room for you!"

Zachary stood there and looked at her with clear eyes.

"I don't want to be in the private room. I just want to stand where I can see you. Otherwise, it won't be interesting for me. Besides, you've already become a lot of people's dream girl now, so I really can't sit still and do nothing."

Zachary had also seen the clip online and was naturally amazed by this short clip.

He could not help his desire and could not resist coming over. 1

Chaz had always been optimistic about this young man, so he went over to greet Zachary eagerly.

"Our boss has always been like this. She's very charming. Our recent business is all because of her! She's effortlessly beautiful. If I didn't like men, I would've pursued her!"

Selena gasped and looked at Chaz inexplicably.

Why did Chaz talk so much?

Zachary nodded in agreement. His eyes fell on Selena, who was extraordinarily gentle and bright.

"You're right. I should really seize the opportunity!"

Selena lowered her head in embarrassment. Her neck was slender, and her skin was fair and smooth.

She was indeed effortlessly beautiful.

Chaz looked at the two of them and wanted, even more, to match them together.

“Why don’t you two go out for a walk? It’ll be hectic later with all the customers around, so you guys won’t be able to talk. It’s so rare that you two can get together!”

Chaz desperately winked at Selena, signaling for her to seize this opportunity.

Selena wanted to pretend that she did not understand Chaz.

However, Zachary understood Chaz. He raised his hand, clenched his fist, pressed it against his lips, and coughed softly with a bit of embarrassment.

“I don’t mind. Selena, do you want to go out?”

At this point, it was useless refusing him.

Selena smiled helplessly.

“Okay. I can treat you to dinner?” “In return, I’ll treat you to a movie?”

The two looked at each other, and Selena instantly understood what Zachary meant.

She did not explicitly refuse him and wanted to give them a chance.

It would not be bad if they ended up together.

After all, feelings must be cultivated.

Selena went and changed her clothes. She wore a simple linen dress that was no longer on the market but looked elegant and graceful in it. Her long hair was let loose on her shoulders, and she was stunning.

Zachary’s eyes lit up. He reached out to help her carry her bag.

Selena also cooperated and handed it over.

Chaz looked at her as if she was his daughter that was getting married and waved his hand.

“Go out and have fun! Don’t rush back!”

Selena was speechless.

They arrive at a restaurant.

Since this was an impromptu date, they did not make a reservation.

Fortunately, Zachary was familiar with the boss, so the boss arranged for them to replace a guest who missed their reservation.

The interior of the restaurant felt vintage with simple yet dated furnishings.

They only took in ten tables of guests per night.

There were also no private dining rooms. Each table was separated by curved dividers that were modern art paintings of beautiful ladies in charming poses.

Selena blushed when she saw it. Her heart also raced.

The desserts here were also unique.

Selena glanced around and smiled.

“You can order, but don’t order too much. I don’t eat much at night.”

This was true mainly because Selena had to maintain her figure. She did not want to be an old and fat rich woman.

Thus, she was persistent in keeping up her looks and figure.

Zachary nodded, not doubting that Selena was being reserved. That was because Selena was not a duplicitous person to him.

While they waited for the dishes to be served, Zachary could not help but raise his eyebrows and said with a smile, “Selena, since you’re willing to have dinner with me, does that mean I have a chance?” “You really can’t give up, huh? Don’t tell me you haven’t had a girlfriend in the past few years?”

As soon as she changed the subject, Zachary coughed seriously and chuckled.

“No, it’s just that none of them can compare to you. That’s why I wasn’t that interested in them. I’ve had two girlfriends, but I broke up with them and don’t keep in touch with them anymore. That’s why I feel that being able to meet you is truly a blessing from God.”

Selena felt at ease with his honesty.

After all, it would be ridiculous if Zachary said he had never had a girlfriend.

In the same restaurant diagonally opposite them was a divider with a painting of a lady dressed in an elaborate dress. A side profile was revealed through the gap of the divider.

The location of that table was the best in the restaurant, and most people could not get a reservation there.

A man and a woman sat on the same side with a vacant seat opposite them. They were probably still waiting on someone.

The man's face was a bit aged and tired. He reminded his daughter, who was sitting next to him, with a cold face.

"You'd better put away that temper of yours. It's already a pleasant surprise that he allowed you to leave the police station. If he finds out what happened, I'm afraid our entire family will end up in jail!"

Cindy pursed her lips unwillingly.

"Dad, I took care of everything, so no one will know."

She lowered her head. Even though she said so, her face became visibly pale.

Cindy was a little worried.
