Chapter 84: Misunderstanding 84

"Divine Doctor Uncle, you, you're on top of my mom."

A childish voice rose from the hospital bed.

"You, you better get up."

The woman trapped beneath Su Fan said frantically, her pretty face flushed red.

"Sorry, sorry about that."

Su Fan awkwardly shifted his body aside.

The woman regained her freedom, quickly straightened her clothes.

Single mother Su Ya.

She had gone home yesterday, changed into a new outfit.

A green high-collared dress that ended ten centimeters above her knees, and on her feet, she wore a pair of flat leather shoes; she was dressed appropriately, yet she exuded the charm of a young widow.

"Su, Divine Doctor, how come you're here?"

Su Ya looked at Su Fan, somewhat nervous.

Su Fan asked Su Ya in return.

"Shouldn't I be here?"

"No, no, no, that's not what I meant. I, I thought I said something wrong yesterday that made you angry and you wouldn't want to talk to me anymore."

"Am I that petty?"

Su Fan said with a wry smile.

He thought to himself that it had not been easy to come across someone with extreme yin constitution, and he didn't want to miss out.

Having gained so much from dual cultivation with Liu Ye, he believed Su Ya would bring him even more surprises.

"Then, then it's just me overthinking. But about yesterday, I'm really very sorry."

"What's in the past is in the past, I haven't taken it to heart."

"I came to bring you and the child some food."

Su Fan handed over the lunchbox to Su Ya.

Su Ya's cheeks instantly flushed.

At the same time, she became even more convinced about Su Fan.

A man like him, she definitely couldn't let slip by.

"It's kind of you."

She accepted the lunchbox without any pretense.

Since she had already decided to let Su Fan become her husband, why not start enjoying her rights a bit early?

Su Ya and Yaya, mother and daughter, were eating, while Su Fan sat on a bed nearby, grinning foolishly at them.

This kind of life seemed quite nice.

Alas, he was burdened with his grandfather's last wish, aspirations of a great man lie far away, he must not get entangled in affairs of love, especially with the hot poison in his body, he needed to extend his lifespan, which meant he had to find more women with extreme yin constitution, destined not to settle with just one woman.

"Sister Su..."

Just then, a familiar voice sounded at the door.

"I've brought you and little Yaya some..."

A cheerful nurse with a face full of smiles eagerly entered the ward.

But before she could finish her sentence, she saw Su Fan sitting by the window bed; her smile vanished.

She stood there, frozen.

Su Fan was also dumbfounded.

With a guilty conscience, he hopped off the bed, standing up.

Just like a child who had done something wrong.

"Little Luo, you're here. Yaya, say hello to Aunty."

Seeing the new arrival, Su Ya, who was in the middle of her meal, put her chopsticks down.

Yaya waved at the newcomer.

"Hello, Aunty."

The visitor was Luo Ya.

"Hello, Yaya."

Luo Ya took a deep breath, pretending not to see Su Fan, and greeted Yaya.

Then she lifted up the lunchbox in her hand.

"Yaya, today Auntie made your favorite soy sauce pork ribs."

"You made soy sauce pork ribs too, hehe, then today Yaya and I are really going to be stuffed."

"Too?"

Luo Ya noticed the already open lunchbox on the bedside table.

It looked so familiar.

"Damn..."

Su Fan was completely flustered.

Now things were really messed up.

Yaya, the little child, bluntly said.

"This is the food Uncle Su brought. He cooked it himself for my mom. He likes my mom, tee-hee-hee."

Damn it...

Su Fan felt the urge to jump out of the window.

The worst part was, Su Ya didn't even try to explain.

With her face blushing, she scolded her daughter in a low voice.

"You little devil, don't talk nonsense, just eat your food."

This statement, while seemingly scolding Yaya, essentially confirmed the fact that Su Fan was pursuing Su Ya.

Slander, she's slandering!

Su Fan wanted to cry but had no tears.
