

Chapter 47 This Car Seemed To Possess A Unique Charm

Madisyn and the man together radiated an undeniable vibe of a couple.

A twinge of jealousy surged through Gilbert as he took his seat beside Madisyn.

When Madisyn noticed him, her eyes briefly flashed with disgust. "Get lost!" she snapped.

Gilbert ignored her cold response, thinking her behaviors must have been caused by her sadness after he had abandoned her. "Madisyn, our breakup must have been tough on you. If you're feeling down, just come to me. I'll help you get through it, okay?"

Staring at her beautiful face, Gilbert was hit with a wave of remorse.

Had Madisyn been the real daughter of the Chapman Group's CEO, he would never have left her.

To him, having such a beautiful girlfriend was like a status symbol.

"Get lost," Madisyn said again, her tone even colder.

"Madisyn, don't be so stubborn. You weren't one to date casually before. Seeing you like this, I'm sure you still have feelings for me," Gilbert said, sure of his insight.

Madisyn was left utterly dumbfounded. How had she not seen Gilbert's disgusting nature before?

If only she had known, she might not have cared about the downfall of the Santos family.

Meanwhile, Jenna had returned from the restroom, noticing Gilbert was missing from their table.

She quickly spotted him nearby, with Madisyn.

Her temper ignited on the spot.

"Madisyn, don't you have any shame?"

In her fury, Jenna threw her cup of coffee at Madisyn, but it never reached her. Andrew deftly deflected it, splashing the coffee on Jenna instead.

Jenna's outfit was ruined in an instant, leaving her in a sorry state.

With her eyes brimming with fury, Jenna accused, "Madisyn, it's bad enough that you got yourself a pretty boy, but you even let him assault me!"

"If you don't leave this instant, the next move will be mine," Madisyn retorted sharply, her tolerance exhausted and her disdain evident.

Worried Jenna might make a scene and attract unwanted attention, Gilbert steered her away, suggesting, "Let's go have our meal."

However, once back at their table, the image of Madisyn lingered in Gilbert's thoughts.

Compelled by his fixation, he soon found himself texting Madisyn.

"If you're still hung up on me, how about you become my secret lover? I can offer you ten thousand a month, okay?"

He was convinced that Madisyn would accept his proposal.

Almost immediately, his phone chimed.

Expecting Madisyn's reply, Gilbert grinned and checked his phone, only to discover it was just spam.

Annoyed, he promptly deleted the unwanted message.

At the same time, Jenna's phone buzzed with a new message too. As she opened it, her expression darkened with anger.

It was an image from Madisyn; a screenshot of Gilbert's brazen proposal.

How could Gilbert send such a message to Madisyn?

What did that mean for her?

That damn bitch Madisyn must have seduced Gilbert!

Jenna's bitterness grew, and she confronted Gilbert. "Gilbert, do you actually love me?"

"Of course I love you, silly. What made you question that?" Gilbert responded gently, his gaze filled with tenderness.

"I just feel insecure... You and Madisyn were together for quite sometime..." Jenna said, her voice trailing off.

Gilbert quickly reassured her, "She and I were only together because of the engagement; nothing real happened between us. It was only after I met you that I truly understood what it means to like someone."

Jenna felt a wave of relief wash over her at his comforting words.

Meanwhile, Andrew looked at Madisyn and inquired, "Who was that?"

"Well, that's my ex-fiance," Madisyn replied after a pause.

Andrew's face gave nothing away as he continued to dine with refined grace, epitomizing the poise of a gentleman.

Madisyn felt that something was amiss with his reaction but couldn't quite identify it, so she returned to her own meal.

Once they finished eating, they walked outside. Madisyn's gaze immediately landed on Jenna, who stood by her car, posing while Gilbert snapped photos of her.

Upon seeing Madisyn's car again, Jenna was enamored with it once more.

Such a vehicle was a perfect match for someone as distinguished as herself!

Therefore, she requested Gilbert snap a series of photos with her and the car, planning to share them online to wow her audience.

While posing, Jenna caught sight of Madisyn approaching and observing. This observation only boosted Jenna's self-regard.

She assumed Madisyn was also captivated by the car.

"Madisyn, is something wrong? Do you admire our car as well?" Jenna inquired, playfully tossing her hair.

"Your car?" Madisyn responded, her smile faint.

"Absolutely," Jenna said, holding tightly to Gilbert's arm. "Gilbert purchased this car for me! What's your opinion? Isn't it breathtaking?"

Gilbert noticed Madisyn's focused gaze as well.

Madisyn had always been composed, rarely displaying a strong liking for anything.

Yet, this car seemed to possess a unique charm that even Madisyn found irresistible.
