

Chapter 55 Being Jealous

Silence followed Madisyn's question.

Madisyn noticed a melancholy look on Elaine's face, and Dane pressed his lips together tightly in concern.

Elaine reached out and gently took Madisyn's hand. "Howard... His health isn't great right now. We're not sure when he'll be able to come home."

"Mm, it's okay. I hope he recovers soon," Madisyn responded, realizing her mistake in asking the question. She swiftly changed the topic, asking, "What about Waylon?"

A hint of jealousy crept into Dane's tone. "Madisyn, do you need something from him?"

"Not exactly," Madisyn said, too embarrassed to admit that she wanted Waylon to visit Andrew's home with her for delicious food.

Elaine explained, "Waylon's usually on set for one to two months for a film. He's been away for more than a month already, so he should be back in just a few days."

"Okay." Madisyn nodded.

A few more days didn't seem too long.

Dane observed Madisyn's thoughtful expression, his feelings of jealousy growing.

When had Madisyn and Waylon become so close?

He couldn't afford to lag behind!

The following day, Dane did something unusual—he joined the family for breakfast. Afterward, he even offered to drive Madisyn to work.

"Madisyn, I've transferred a million to your account. Use it however you wish. If you need more, just tell me," Dane said cheerfully.

"Dane, I don't need that," Madisyn responded. Was this how her family showed their love, by offering money?

Dane insisted, "What's mine is yours. Feel free to use it."

He truly embodied the role of a commanding CEO.

Madisyn decided not to decline any further.

"Is there a new product launch coming up soon?" Dane inquired.

"Yes."

"And how are the preparations? Is there anything I could do to help?" Dane's tone carried a hint of concern.

Madisyn flashed a reassuring smile. "We're all set."

If all went according to plan, the products would be produced today.

Indeed, by the close of the workday, the production was complete.

Everyone had a chance to try the products out and appreciated the quality.

"Miss Johns, I came across a post on Mina's social media," Brenda said, hesitating, then informed Madisyn, "She and Michelle have both joined in Miggie Skincare."

Madisyn paused briefly. "Is that so?"

Brenda thought Madisyn might not be familiar with Miggie Skincare. "Miggie Skincare is actually our top competitor, and they've been quite successful recently. It was surprising that Miggie Skincare would recruit them. And it feels wrong for them to switch from our company to a rival."

"It's not an issue," Madisyn responded evenly. "Their choice of where to work is their own affair."

"But Miggie Skincare's new product launch is happening at the same time as ours. What should we do?" Brenda was anxious.

"Then they're just out of luck," Madisyn responded with confidence, immediately calming everyone's nerves. They all needed to emulate Madisyn's self-assurance!

With Mina's departure, the role of vice president was now unoccupied.

Madisyn intended to promote Brenda to the position after the product launch.

Time flew by, and the day of the eagerly awaited new product launch finally came.

At Prus Mall.

This mall was a premier destination for skincare products, known for its wide range of high-end and budget-friendly options. It was typically the first to stock all the latest skincare releases, and both Miggie Skincare and Natural Beauty had outlets here.

Due to the simultaneous product launches, the mall was crowded.

Miggie Skincare had even brought in celebrities to enhance their event's appeal.

Their customers had already started to line up.

The competition between Miggie Skincare and Natural Beauty was so fierce that onlookers were snapping pictures and sharing them online, causing intense debates.

"Natural Beauty is bold to schedule their launch alongside Miggie Skincare's. Isn't that just asking for trouble?"

"Absolutely. And Miggie Skincare didn't hold back this time—they even brought in celebrities."

"But it's the quality that counts with skincare. I'll wait to see which product is better before making my choice."

"There's no doubt that Miggie Skincare will come out on top! Natural Beauty might claim to be all-natural and gentle, yet their product has once caused skin damage before!"

"Exactly! Natural Beauty should be shut down! You know what, guys? I'm going to see their failure for myself!"

Susan was currently working in Natural Beauty's store, assisting customers with product trials.

She spotted a girl glancing around nervously.

"Hello, can I assist you with anything?" Susan offered a friendly smile.

"I... I'm just looking," the girl muttered, her gaze dropping. "I probably can't afford anything here."

"That's alright. Let me show you around. Our products are high quality and priced high, but you're welcome to try them out for free. Why not, right?" Susan's smile was inviting.

The girl paused, asking, "Really?"

"Absolutely," Susan assured her, handing her a sample and applying it carefully while describing the product.

The girl looked up at Susan and blushed, embarrassed.

This girl was the same one who had declared her eagerness to witness Natural Beauty's downfall.

She had planned to use her supposed inability to afford the products as a way to frustrate the staff.

Yet, faced with Susan's kindness, she found herself regretting her initial intentions.