

Chapter 59 Turning To Like Natural Beauty

"Do the employees of Natural Beauty arrogantly believe they can outperform Migge Skincare?"

"Whose side are you on, Natural Beauty or Migge Skincare?"

"Those Natural Beauty employees?"

There were some hot topics about the two companies on the internet.

A conversation between Susan and Michelle was uploaded to the internet. In it, Susan confidently stated that Natural Beauty would outdo Migge Skincare. The post spread quickly.

Many netizens mocked Natural Beauty.

Soon after, Migge Skincare released its sales figures, which were impressively high. This sparked further debate.

"Is that woman out of her mind? Natural Beauty's sales are nowhere close to Migge Skincare's right now."

"I don't even want to use Natural Beauty's products anymore."

"Migge Skincare's products can hardly stay on the shelves; they sell out so quickly online. We might as well wait for Natural Beauty to go bankrupt."

"Actually, I think Natural Beauty's products are quite good. I've used them myself. The sales staff were very helpful..."

Nearly all netizens were criticizing Natural Beauty.

The voices of a few supporters of Natural Beauty were drowned out.

Madisyn's employees were also aware of the situation. Susan reached out to Madisyn to apologize. "Madisyn, this is all on me. I said something wrong."

Madisyn reassured her calmly, "You didn't say anything wrong. What we need now is time."

Given enough time, their products were sure to win over many people.

Madisyn remained optimistic.

A week slipped by uneventfully.

One morning, Talia woke up and instinctively looked in the mirror. To her astonishment, her skin wasn't as red as usual. She was taken aback.

She had always had sensitive skin and over the years, nothing she tried seemed to work.

A few days earlier, she had run out of her usual skincare products. Remembering the samples given to her by a saleswoman at Natural Beauty, she decided to use them.

She wasn't expecting much at the time and planned to shop for new skincare products tomorrow.

However, she was amazed at how good her skin looked this morning.

She couldn't trust her eyes or jump to conclusions, so she decided to get a professional skin test. The results were significantly better!

"Your skin sensitivity has improved. It's better by one-fifth than before. What have you been using recently?" the cosmetician inquired with interest.

"I've just been using these samples. Could you check if there are any side effects?" Talia handed over the samples.

The cosmetician examined them and her expression turned serious.

"What's the matter?" Talia asked, growing anxious.

Could there actually be side effects?

"Are these products very expensive?"

"They were free samples from a saleswoman at the Natural Beauty's store."

"Really? They are generous," the cosmetician said in surprise. "The ingredients here are top-notch. This raw material is imported and exceptionally beneficial for sensitive skin."

Talia felt overwhelmed by the information. Were Natural Beauty's products really that effective?

Once home, she quickly shared her experience in her group chat.

Unexpectedly, other members also reported positive experiences.

This sparked some thinking. Perhaps it was a mere coincidence that their favorite celebrity had previously suffered an allergic reaction.

More feedback started coming in online.

Many people even reached out to Natural Beauty's staff to inquire about the raw materials that led to such impressive results.

Natural Beauty was quick to respond. They disclosed that their raw materials were imported from abroad, and that they were the exclusive distributor in the country.

As a result, Natural Beauty's sales skyrocketed!

Of course, most people weren't just following the crowd blindly. They had seen numerous positive reviews before deciding to try the products themselves.

Many were now purchasing Natural Beauty's products.

In just a single day, Natural Beauty's sales surged to thirty million!

The staff at Natural Beauty found themselves swamped with work.

Madisyn didn't finish work until ten o'clock in the evening.

Recently, Dane had come to pick her up himself, intent on keeping Andrew away.

He was waiting for Madisyn outside when his phone suddenly rang.

"What? How did that happen?"

Dane scowled as he stared at the Natural Beauty's entrance and eventually said, "I see."

He then called Madisyn, explaining, "I've got an urgent matter to handle and might not be able to drive you back."

"That's okay. Handle your work, Dane."

Madisyn had just stepped out of the elevator, about to hail a cab, when she noticed a familiar car slowly pulling up.

The distinctive license plate made it clear it was Andrew's.

Andrew opened the car door for her and asked, "Have you had a busy day?"

"Yeah. Why are you here?" Madisyn was puzzled. She was sure that he knew Dane had been picking her up lately.

"It's been a while since we last saw each other," Andrew replied casually.

Madisyn was sharp. She quickly pieced together that Andrew might be involved in the mishap at Dane's company.

Andrew appeared dignified and graceful. Yet, beneath that facade, he was quite the schemer.

Madisyn felt she understood him better now. Surprisingly, this revelation didn't diminish her fondness for him; instead, she just smiled.

Today, they dined at her favorite restaurant.

Madisyn's mood lifted even more.

Meanwhile, someone else was feeling less cheerful.

Josie had been on the phone with Kristine, boasting about outperforming Natural Beauty.

"Their sales have flatlined recently. No progress whatsoever," Josie remarked gleefully. "Natural Beauty is on a downward spiral. Ever since Madisyn took over, many of her employees have resigned to join my firm. If this continues, her business will inevitably collapse. Then, Dane and the others will realize you are so much better than her."

Kristine sighed. "Madisyn is too stubborn. She thinks life in a wealthy family is blissful. Yet, the reality is young people from affluent backgrounds often face greater challenges in achieving career success."

"That's true. It would be better if she just stayed away. Let's check how much they sold today. If they hadn't even sold one thousand products, it would be hilarious!" Josie chuckled as she headed to the Natural Beauty's store. When she saw the sales figures for the new products, she thought her eyes were deceiving her.

Kristine waited patiently.

A few seconds passed without a word from Josie. Kristine asked playfully, "Well? Did they not sell a single one?"

