Selling Myself To The Alpha

"You must get away from here as soon as possible."

"I don't have a choice," I sigh heavily. "I spend all my savings on this wedding. Hopefully, this plan will work."

"It worked," Nina whispers urgently as she takes my hand in hers. "You're free of him now."

"Thanks, Nina," my eyes well up with gratitude. "You're the best."

"Yes, but I'm not. I'm angry, too. If it were not for our plan, it would not have bothered me. It is normal for people to look at me with honest fear."

"I know," I take a deep breath. "But this is one hell of a risk and dangerous."

"I know," she rests her hands on my shoulders. "Trust me, okay? This is going to work. My dad knows what he's doing, and we can trust him."

"Well, it's not going to come to that. Let's get this over with so you can relax," Nina gives me a wicked smile and I shake my head.

"Are you ready?" Nina gives me a wicked smile and I shake my head.

"Yes," I say softly, knowing that I must be ready to go. "I'm ready."

"Great," the man smiles brightly as he takes Nina's phone. "You ladies look lovely."

"Thank you," we reply and take a stand next to each other.

"Excuse me, sir," Nina says loudly as she walks over to an older man. "Would you mind taking a picture of us? We're getting married today."

"Of course," the man smiles and pulls out his phone. "I'd be happy to do it."

"Thank you," I manage to smile as I turn around. "So do you."

"You're welcome," he says and we both laugh.

"I think I forgot something," I say as the man lifts the phone to take the picture. "I forgot my veil in the car."

"Oh, wait," the man says quickly. "I'll go and get it for you."

"Thank you," I say as he walks away and I wait for him to return.

"Here you go," he says as he hands the veil back to me. "Enjoy your day."

"Thank you," I say quickly and the man walks away.

"It's okay," she whispers as he strokes my back. "You're safe now."

"The concept of time is lost on me when I wake up again. I have no idea if I were sleeping for hours or days."

"I'm not sure," Nina's voice is steady. "It happened so fast, and I was only concerned about you."

"Who was the driver?" Wyatt demand. "He needs to be held accountable."

"Don't move," she urges softly. "You bumped your head pretty hard when you landed, but there's no serious injury. They gave you something for the pain making you sleepy. Go back to sleep, I'm right here and will not leave your side."

"Thank you," I sigh as I allow the darkness to take over again.

"There's no serious injury. They gave you something for the pain it's making you sleepy. Go back to sleep, I'm right here and will not leave your side."

"You imbecile," Wyatt interrupts her, and his rudeness is enough to stir me to live. He has noticed my eyes are open and he rushes towards my side and takes my hand. "You're awake. How do you feel?"

"I'm not done with you," his voice is low and dangerous as he lays me down and gets up. "This is just the beginning."

"You bitch," his voice is low and dangerous. "You will not get away with this."

"You're right," she says solemnly. "I do need my friend to be okay."

"Me until you find a job and a new place in the city."

"I'm not staying here."

"I don't need your money," she interrupts me. "But I do need my friend to be okay."

"Don't pop the champagne just yet," I grunt. "He made it clear that he's not done with me."

"It worked," Nina whispers urgently as she takes my hand in hers. "You're free of him now."

"That's great news," Nina claps her hands together and looks at me with bright eyes. "But I think he will discharge you today."

"When can I go home?"

"Excellent." The doctor gives me an encouraging smile and I nod.

"You're doing great."

"I'm not sure," Nina says. "It happened so fast, and I was only concerned about you."

"My makeup is impeccable, and I look like the fairy princess I dreamed of. But it brings me no joy."

"The colour compliments her tanned skin and black hair."

"It is not a lie. Nina looks stunning in her violet dress."

"That's great news," Nina claps her hands together and looks at me with bright eyes. "But I think he will discharge you today."

"When can I go home?"

"Thank you," I say as I turn around. "So do you."

"You're welcome," he says and we both laugh."

"It is not a lie. Nina looks stunning in her violet dress."

"The concept of time is lost on me when I wake up again. I have no idea if I were sleeping for hours or days."

"I'm not sure," Nina's voice is steady. "It happened so fast, and I was only concerned about you."

"Who was the driver?" Wyatt demand. "He needs to be held accountable."

"Don't move," she urges softly. "You bumped your head pretty hard when you landed, but there's no serious injury. They gave you something for the pain making you sleepy. Go back to sleep, I'm right here and will not leave your side."

"Thank you," I say as I allow the darkness to take over again.

"The concept of time is lost on me when I wake up again. I have no idea if I were sleeping for hours or days."

"I'm not sure," Nina says. "It happened so fast, and I was only concerned about you."

"Who was the driver?" Wyatt demand. "He needs to be held accountable."

"Don't move," she urges softly. "You bumped your head pretty hard when you landed, but there's no serious injury. They gave you something for the pain making you sleepy. Go back to sleep, I'm right here and will not leave your side."

"Thank you," I say as I allow the darkness to take over again.

"The concept of time is lost on me when I wake up again. I have no idea if I were sleeping for hours or days."

"I'm not sure," Nina says. "It happened so fast, and I was only concerned about you."

"Who was the driver?" Wyatt demand. "He needs to be held accountable."

"Don't move," she urges softly. "You bumped your head pretty hard when you landed, but there's no serious injury. They gave you something for the pain making you sleepy. Go back to sleep, I'm right here and will not leave your side."

"Thank you," I say as I allow the darkness to take over again.

"The concept of time is lost on me when I wake up again. I have no idea if I were sleeping for hours or days."

"I'm not sure," Nina says. "It happened so fast, and I was only concerned about you."

"Who was the driver?" Wyatt demand. "He needs to be held accountable."

"Don't move," she urges softly. "You bumped your head pretty hard when you landed, but there's no serious injury. They gave you something for the pain making you sleepy. Go back to sleep, I'm right here and will not leave your side."

"Thank you," I say as I allow the darkness to take over again.

"The concept of time is lost on me when I wake up again. I have no idea if I were sleeping for hours or days."

"I'm not sure," Nina says. "It happened so fast, and I was only concerned about you."

"Who was the driver?" Wyatt demand. "He needs to be held accountable."

"Don't move," she urges softly. "You bumped your head pretty hard when you landed, but there's no serious injury. They gave you something for the pain making you sleepy. Go back to sleep, I'm right here and will not leave your side."

"Thank you," I say as I allow the darkness to take over again.