

Chapter 903

903 WHAT ACTUALLY HAD HAPPENED

"Where is my daughter?" Elder Rose asked Rei, her voice and the way she looked at the man was filled with hatred and anger. This was not the look that you would give to someone that you respected.

However, Elder Rose's respect for Rei had gone for so many years.

"It had been more than four decades and you are still asking me the same question," Rei said calmly. He sat down on a chair and gestured for Elder Rose to sit down too, but she didn't budge from where she was standing. She didn't even want to sit at the same table with Rei if she could help it. "You know the rule, Rose."

"I don't give a fuck to the rule!" Elder Rose hollered. www.novelworld.com

Right now, the two of them were inside Rei's bedroom, where it was only the two of them. This room was surrounded by magic, thus no matter how hard Elder Rose was screaming, people outside wouldn't be able to hear them.

Therefore, Rei let her scream and cursed as she liked.

"But, I care." Rei leaned his back against the backrest of the sofa and intertwined his long fingers, he stared at Elder Rose's angry face. "I created the rule and I want all of you to follow. No question asked."

"I don't give a damn about your fucking rule! I want to know about my daughter!" Elder Rose couldn't help it anymore, she felt like she was going to attack him if he kept doing this to her.

Seeing Abby was pregnant triggered something inside her, the hatred that she had buried so deep now resurfaced again when she heard Abby was pregnant with baby girl and she knew what would happen next.

Abby might think she would only lose her baby for about a year, that was what Elder Rose thought too, but she lost her second daughter forever. She only held her once and that would be the first and the last time for her to see her baby, because Rei didn't return her even after a year had passed.

"Where is she? What did you do to her?"

"You have asked that question a thousand times." www.novelworld.com

"And I will ask a thousand more until I get the answer."

"I don't have any obligation to answer you."

"Where is she?!" Elder Rose lost it. "What have you done to her?!"

Still, Rei followed through with what he said. He didn't give her the answer she wanted, instead he reminded her of her crime. www.novelworld.com

"You cared so much about your second daughter, but you were going to harm your other daughter." Rei tilted his head, as he stared intensely into Elder Rose's eyes. "What's your goal by aborting the baby?"

Rei came in time before Elder Rose managed to go through with her plan, but unfortunately Abby was already unconscious.

Seeing the situation, Rei had different idea in his mind. He was going to deal with Elder Rose, but before that, he needed to use the situation to his benefit, so he could meet with Iris again. Cane's hunch was right about the whole situation.

Grace and Liam came after and they were trapped into this scheme.

It was also him, who had put Abby into asleep, but to his surprised, Iris couldn't wake her up. She should be able to do so and this was a big question for him.

"I am not going to let you get the baby." Elder didn't even try to lie with her intention.

"So, you preferred to kill the baby rather than have me to get my hand on the baby?"

"Yes." Elder Rose gritted her teeth. "You are not going to have the baby, Rei."

"Want to bet?"

Two weeks after the incident with the Serafim, all the preparation to march toward Moon Dew pack had been done and they were ready to go.

Along that time, Abby was still unconscious and despite the elders' effort to put pressure on Cane and Iris to find a way to wake her up, neither of them budged. Iris even stayed inside her room for a whole day and Cane refused to discuss anything aside from their preparation.

Strangely, Rei didn't make the same demand, he looked genuine enough to put his thought in their plan to take down Decratic and take over all of the remaining pack.

Thanked to Iris's suggestion, now Cane slightly warmed up with Cezi, since they had a plan on their own for Celestial Moon pack, which didn't involve people from the Holy Kingdom.

Meanwhile, for Grace, because they couldn't get Iris to wake Abby up, the best the elders could do was to restrict her movement, right now the healer was being confined in her own room, which was not a bad thing, since she was still allowed to receive visitors.

And for Liam, the last time they saw him was in Abby's bedroom and after that, no one saw him anymore.

Iris knew Cane also looked for the knight, but none of his warriors could get an information about his whereabouts, not even his scent. It almost felt like he had vanished into thin air. His disappearance was concerning.

Three days before they were going to Moon Dew pack, if Iris didn't stay inside her bedroom, she would come to visit Cedric and because of his condition, he needed more time to recover completely and today was the first time he woke up after he almost died more than two weeks ago.

Iris came to visit him when he groaned softly and opened his eyes. The first thing he saw was Iris's auburn curls, which was lighter shade like Abby's hair and then her gentle, blue eyes.

For a moment, he thought he saw Abby, until he heard her soft voice calling his name.

"Cedric?" Iris asked Hanna to get a glass of water for him and Zephyr to help Cedric drink the water. Lou refused to get involved with this man and aside from the people, who already knew about this situation, no one knew that the alpha and the luna sheltered the almost died knight in the merchant's bedroom.

"Wh-where am I?" Cedric asked in a coarse voice. He felt like he just ate sand. The last thing he remembered was the pain and blood, a lot of blood. He touched his neck, but it was intact.

"Don't worry, you are fine now." Iris saw his gesture and knew what he was thinking at this moment. She then told Zephyr to inform Cane that Cedric had regained his consciousness. "Do you remember what happened?"

Cedric looked hesitant to answer the question, because he knew what followed afterward and even though he just woke up, but he already weighed the situation.

"What are you trying to think of?" Lou looked upset because Cedric was hesitated to reply to Iris's question. He was sitting not too far from them, waving a fan on his face. They were on the peak of summer right now and the weather was very hot for the merchant. He hated it to be sweaty. "Answer that question. You are very ungrateful even after she saved you."

It must be because of the hot temperature that caused the merchant to be aggressive more than usual. www.novelworld.com

However, he stopped himself when Iris gave him a warning look and focused to fan himself again. He refused to go out with Cane and the people from the Holy Kingdom to check their preparation. All he needed was to prepare himself, he didn't care about anything else.

"Yes, I remember," Cedric replied. He then furrowed his brows and looked at Iris. "Did you... the one, who saved me?"

"Yes, I did." Iris then added. "Grace also helped you." She didn't take credit for herself.

"Thank you."

Cedric looked around him. This room was impeccable. Though he was in the shifter's hand, but apparently, they treated him decently.

"What... happened? What they said about me?" Cedric was hesitated to ask, because he didn't want to answer any question.

"Among the knights, no one talked about you and for the warriors..." Lou shrugged his shoulders, answering the question for Iris. "The warrior didn't care whether you are alive or dead."

In another word, Cedric just vanished and no one care enough to find out where he was. It was not sure what the elders told them about Cedric, since he held an important position, but then this was an internal affair in Holy Kingdom, thus they couldn't dig more.

"You need to rest. I will ask someone to deliver the medicine from time to time until you fully recover."

"Thank you."

Iris didn't ask further question, neither she talked about the birthmark on his back, because he just woke up and she didn't want to pressure him further, which Cedric was really grateful for, since he was still at lost of how to navigate the situation.

Iris only told him that he couldn't be seen in public, or he would put himself in danger and more so, it would complicate thing between the shifter and the people from Holy Kingdom.

Cedric understood the implication of it, so he agreed without a second thought. After a few more word, Iris left the room.

"Look, since we have to share a room, you are going to sleep on that sofa and not to come closer to the bed, that's my personal space, understood?" Lou made things clear between them.

And two days later, they went to Moon Dew pack, marched with full forces from shifters, knights, magic users and the merchants.
