

Chapter 939

939 THE FINAL BATTLE (5)

Iris was consumed with rage. She was seeing red when she watched how Rei acted like he led this war against Decratic.

But, because of her anger, she failed to see those monsters, who marched toward them. The monsters from hell.

Iris didn't even realize how the ground beneath her split into two, letting out the red smoke of the poisonous miasma, while the fissure was getting bigger. It almost looked like it would create a cliff.

Iris was knocked to the side when the ground beneath her cracked and she almost fell into the fissure. Rei saw this too and he immediately marched toward her, without knowing that Iris intended to kill him for killing her people.

"Are you, okay?" Rei looked worried about her wellbeing, it reminded Iris of the memory when he looked very concerned after he hit her mother. The sight was very disgusting. "Decratic has made his move. We need to strike back and..."

But, before he could do anything, Iris had used the black wisp to stab him. Fortunately for Rei, he had a great reflex and could dodge it in time, but the lycan immediately jumped on him. Lu saw this as a clue, as a permission to attack this bastard, so of course, he wouldn't let go of this opportunity. He had been wanting to tear this man apart.

"Stop it!" Elder Dandoff got involved, he created a protection around Rei just in time before Lu could claw his chest.

Of course, this was upset the lycan, but before he could fight back, the Nefilim and the other monsters had reached their spot and they were forced to deal with them first.

Iris couldn't care less about Rei and the rest, as she put protection shields around her, Lu, Aliana and Ethan, while Rei and his people dealt with the monsters.

It was not a surprise to see how Rei managed to control the dragon. Iris was sure that back then, one of the dragons that attacked Lu was not even out of control. Rei intentionally loosened his control over the creature.

"How is she?" Ethan asked, fear etched on his face. He had tasted this feeling before when he thought he was going to lose Aliana, but it was still as dreadful.

Iris currently continued to heal Aliana, she kept her focus on her because she could feel her hatred toward Rei gave Decratic new energy. The crack on the ground was getting bigger and the poisonous miasma became thicker.

"She will be fine," Iris said after a few hours of trying to get rid of the spiderlings inside of her body.

The battle was still going on between Rei and his people against the monsters. From the look of it, he had released the knights from their illusion, thus they could fight these monsters.

However, Iris didn't have any desire to help them at all. She was safe within this protection, more so, Rei made sure no monsters would be able to get close to Iris. He protected her, which made her feel sick in her stomach.

Once again, Rei used the ashes of the spiderlings he got from the cocoons that had been burned by the dragon, which consisted with the warriors, to control the monsters. This was his main goal to deem the warriors into such tragic ending, so he could use them in this way.

Neither Cane nor Iris knew that he could do such thing, they didn't even know this kind of method was existed in the first place. Or else, they wouldn't have let this man get close to them. Cane and Lou might have concocted a plan to kill him in the first chance given.

Rei killed some of the monsters and tamed, controlled some of them, which in a way it gave him more power, adding to his forces, while he weakened Iris's people and forced her to rely on his power instead.

Cane failed to read this movement, because everything happened almost at the same time and magic was not the field he knew very well.

"She will be fine... she will be fine..." Iris repeated the word, she leaned over and hugged Aliana. She had lost so many people, she was not going to lose her too.

The spirit of the fallen warriors had disappeared and just like what had happened to them before... they couldn't grieve properly. They didn't even have time to discern their emotions about the loss of their loved one and had to keep moving forward and think of a way to survive this war.

This leaving Iris with turmoil, because she had to keep her heart pure, she couldn't hate Rei for killing her people. How she could do that?

"She will be fine, she will be fine..." Iris repeated the word, as if she was hanging onto that. She was not going to lose anyone anymore.

But, the night was still long and this battle was even longer... No one knew, who else she was going to lose...

On the other hand, Lou watched how the Sylph started to fade away, which weakened the protection around them, because they couldn't use its power anymore.

"What happened with that air spirit?" Jace asked, he gritted his teeth when there was a crack on their protection. From the look of it, this shield wouldn't be able to protect them from the attack for any longer.

Most of the monsters went toward Rei and the people from the Holy Kingdom's direction, but there were so many of them and they kept coming, which made it unavoidable that they became a target too.

Cedric pulled Abby behind his back, as he withdrew his sword. Protecting her like he used to.

"Iris must have seen the fallen warrior's spirit, it must have upset her." Lou understood how things worked with Iris's power more than anyone here, but not like usual, he didn't seem to brag about that. It bothered him to know how devastated Iris was right now.

They were silent for a while, until Jace gave an order.

"Be ready for a fight!" The beta was also worried about his little sister and the gamma. The night was so gloomy and with the rain that kept pouring down, it made their visibility shorter, more so, it took their ability to sense anything in the air, all the scents were washed away by the rain.

Behind Jace, all the warriors shifted into their beast form and not long after that, the shield could no longer hold the attack from outside and it shattered.

"Damn it! Damn it!" Lou cursed under his breath when he watched how a Nefilim crushed three beasts in one movement and the other monsters that he had never seen, sucking the blood out of the warriors, some of them killed the warriors in the most brutal way by using their sharp claws.

This was a chaos, the only strategy they had was to stick together and don't get yourself killed, which didn't really help at all.

Decratic knew how to use his puppet, he himself had not yet appeared since the beginning and let these monsters to deal with them first, killing as much as they could.

And Rei took the advantage of this situation with the cost of the shifters, since they looked down on their kind.

On the other hand, as the night progressed, she watched how the fallen warriors appeared one after another, indicating there was a massacre in the area where they were fighting the monsters. She dreaded the sight every time they came to her and this only plunged her deeper into the darkness.

Beside her, Ethan wanted to see how Aliana was, but he didn't want to interrupt Iris when she hugged her dearly. He couldn't see what she saw, but he knew what it was and from the look of it, Iris was mortified.

Ethan didn't even want to know, who had lost their lives in this war.

Meanwhile, the lycan didn't budge from his spot from beside Iris. His red eyes stared into the distance, through the fog of the rain. His fur drenched, but it only gave a menacing look on this cursed creature.

For a while, you would think that he guarded Iris there to protect her, but all of a sudden, he let out an angry growl and dashed out of the protection shield to disappear into the mass.

"LU!" Iris was mortified when she lost sight of him, she immediately let go of Aliana's body and was about to go after him when Ethan stopped her. www.novelspace.com

"You need to stay!" Ethan grabbed her elbows, while his other hand cradled Aliana's body. He wouldn't let her go.

"I need to find him!" Iris said adamantly. She was scared to think Lu would meet his demise amidst the aggressive attack of the monsters. What if something happened to him? What if she couldn't see him again? Cane...

"Stay back! He will not go if he didn't know what he was going to do!" Ethan snapped at her. "You need to focus on your emotions! You are feeding Decratic more power!"

It was easier said than done, because stopping her from hating someone was not something that you could command. This was the feeling that you couldn't control.

"Calm down and focus on getting rid of all the negative emotions!" Ethan was desperate. He knew how ridiculous it sounded, but there was no other way to win this battle if Iris kept feeding Decratic with her hatred. "Stay, Iris! You will not help, if you joined the fight! You only make Decratic grow stronger!"

Iris bit her lip, she wished she could do something. She wished, she knew how to fully use her power without hurting herself. She still tried to find a way to use her power massively without any repercussion to her babies.

She could absorb all of the black magic around her, but it would give her a backlash. Her babies... she was not going to risk their lives.

Ethan was right, Iris sat down again, she needed to compose herself, because the more agitated she was, the bigger the crack on the ground. Currently, the width of the crack in the ground was already around one meter wide.

It would only get bigger and the monsters would appear incessantly. Iris couldn't use her power, her anger prevented her from controlling it.

She had fed Decratic with enough negative emotions to the point, she had a hard time to control her own power.

Ethan was right, she needed to calm down, but it was hard.

And when Iris closed her eyes so she didn't need to see the spirit of the fallen warriors, from the distance she could hear a banshee-like voice. The screech hurt her ears.

"What is that?!" Iris pressed her palms against her ears, while Ethan chose to cover Aliana's ears instead of her, which caused his ears to bleed.

"I am not sure!" Ethan said on top of this deafening screech.

From where they stayed, they couldn't see what was happening, but Lou and the other could see it pretty clearly. It was the lycan, who was tormenting a woman. www.novelspace.com

They didn't realize this woman in the beginning because it had been so long since the last time they saw her, more so, her existence had never crossed their mind.

However, Will recognized him almost immediately. He was in his beast form, fighting off the monsters, while protecting Hanna, who fought beside him in her beast form too.

But, a glimpse of this woman was enough to make Will staggered back and whimpered. He couldn't preserve his beast's form, thus he shifted back into his human skin and concurrently, a monster jumped on him, ready to tear him apart.

Thankfully, Hanna saw that and tackled down the monster and killed it in an instant. www.novelspace.com instant.

Meanwhile, apparently the lycan targeted this woman. The cursed creature attacked her brutally, but even when her body had torn apart, she was still alive.

Hi, author here. Firstly, I want to thank you for supporting this story. I truly appreciate all the comment (I read them all even when I didn't reply) and all of your support in any form you can show me.

And just like every beginning, we come to the end of the story. (what a wonderful journey that I have with you all!)

Secondly, I want to apologize for all the inconvenience throughout the story. (Personally, I am not that cruel. Lili Thing is my animal spirit.)

The story after this will be Bonus Chapters and Side Stories of each character. There is nothing major will happen, since the main story has come to end. I will reduce it to one chapter a day.

In the bonus chapter, I will focus on Iris and Cane's little family, while the Side Stories will focus on each side character (their back story before the main story or their story after this war. Since, I can't write them and squeeze their stories into the main plot.)

I hope you enjoy these chapters. (Treat this as a therapy and my apology for the trauma. ^^)

Last but not least, please support my new story if you like my imagination of werewolf story: Replacement Bride of the Alpha From the North.

Thank you so much from the bottom of my heart.
