Somehow, he knew his friend would be coming over that he had already set up a table next to his. Evan said, "I hope you are okay with using only Wifi. Setting up a LAN cable takes a while." "Wifi is good," Keith answered while getting into place.

"Welcome to the company," Evan said with a smirk, seeing Keith walk into his office.

Chapter 192: Some Never Change

More than two weeks had gone by since Charles passed away. Keith had to return to work. However, the CEO office of Prima MedCare reminded him so much of his father. It was fine for Keith to return home to the Hendersons' mansion. As needed, he let himself cry, but work was work. Keith needed a better place to get him to concentrate, and that was how he wound up in Evan's office for the past two days. Evan allowed his friend to deal with his grief. To Evan, it was okay as long as Keith wasn't directing his grief the wrong way.

"Everything okay at home?" Evan asked.

we are going to stay at the old mansion permanently. It will help US with Mom." 1

"Yeah, I think that's also great. Aunt Helen won't feel so alone," Evan commented.

He leaned back, adding, "I didn't realize we were all exhausted with everything."

Keith had just opened his laptop. He smiled at Evan, saying, "Yes. We are slowly accepting things. I think "Karise is still on leave, and I think she will try to get an extended vacation – maternity plus bereavement." "Hmm. Sean and I could still check on Prima MedCare if you needed more rest," Evan offered.

Over the past few weeks, Evan and Sean had periodically visited Keith's company, keeping tabs on the operation. It abled Keith to still focus on his father, and when Charles died, it allowed him to mourn without feeling the pressure of the board of directors.

Keith glanced at Evan and assured him, "I'm good, Evan. Don't worry about me. Every day, I feel better, and my little girl is starting to communicate, lifting the weight off my chest."

"Yeah, she is awake often now. She has the same eyes as me. I feel like I'm looking at myself when I look
