

Chapter 042|He is mad about you

"You came!" The Baker twins both said in unison the minute Diane and I walked through the gate, a reprieve I was thankful of because although I was aware that Tristan was mega rich because who casually mentions a beach house as one of the properties his mom had gotten him for his birthday and still looked completely indifferent? But I didn't expect the beauty that greeted me the minute we walked right into the gate and I wasn't the only one because I heard Diane's audible gasp.

Although Tristan's beach house wasn't as towering as Titiana's or extravagant as Law's I couldn't help but notice that it was its simplicity that made it so beautiful. With a beautiful fountain in the front of the house that just made you completely breathless and the endless ceiling to floor windows that made the house look more like a glass house apart from the fact I was already liking the thought of bare feet, the caressing breeze and the feel of water and sand on your legs, I could tell that they had quite the view from inside the house. For a while I imagined myself lazily lounging around on a robe, sipping from a bottle of ridiculously expensive wine and watching sunset from such glass elements designed to allow maximum lights into the house and imagining just how breathtaking the beach would look in that moment I breathed in the cool breeze.
