

The First Heir 115

Chapter 115

They needed at least two billion in investments this time!

Henry could afford that much himself, but he could not possibly contribute so much at once. He would require approval and red tape from all parties.

That was why the medical developments in the country could not keep up with those from overseas.

Now that Mr. Clarke had agreed to invest that amount, though, that would speed up domestic research by at least five years!

Five whole years!

That would take so much blood, sweat, and tears from so many diligent medical personnel.

Henry Turner knew very well how much every medical researcher toiled away behind the scenes, doing what looked like mundane and meaningless experiments.

That was why he was so grateful.

It was not just him, either. His students in the room were extremely excited too.

They knew that their teacher had brought them here and treated this man to a meal for a reason.

They needed to find someone who was willing to donate two billion.

That was not a small sum by any means.

Who would ever want to invest in a medical project that could go five or even ten years without a tangible result?

Everyone was getting emotional, and they all cheered to Philip's health.

It took a while before Henry finally calmed down. He ventured carefully, "Mr. Clarke, we need an astronomical amount of funding this time. Are you sure you're willing to invest in us?"

trust Philip. He was just being want to see a ray of hope, only

do you need?"

Also, we might not be able to

His heart was pounding.

remembered just how enormous a sum two billion

when he heard that amount made Henry's heart skip

Turner's Hospital's Riverdale branch must only have a contract with Beacon Pharmaceutical, and you must work with Wynn Johnston, an suddenly said, completely

everyone in the

stayed calmly drinking his tea

billion really was not that built a national statue of Confucius on Mount Fuji, he spent almost ten billion on

he could give them

others to bully his country,

still made sure

Hot tears filled his eyes and he said excitedly, "You're amazing, Mr. Clarke! I accept your condition, no already old and gray, but right here

such a boon

he never dared to

jumped to their feet and respectfully raised can for the local medical scene. Right now, the bigger countries are dominating the area and limiting our access to medical technology, refusing to share their knowledge with us. I've gotten quite sick of that.

All I ask is that all of you can dedicate your minds to your

The applause was rapturous.

of food and wine, they decided to leave unfortunate coincidence awaited

voice called out to him loudly