Chapter 1591

This damned Philip dared to threaten them like this!

Abominable!

How hateful!

After Philip left, Bernard breathed a sigh of relief and asked his second brother, “Martin, what should we do now? We’ve really landed ourselves in trouble. I don’t think Philip will let it go. Who would have thought that he actually has a black card from the Swiss Bank? This is simply unbelievable!”

Bernard was very uneasy. How could they deal with Philip, a person who owned a black card from the Swiss Bank?

It was impossible!

Chapter 1592

Early the next morning, Martin and Bernard brought everyone to Beacon Group’s conference room.

The atmosphere in the entire conference room was somber and tense.

Everyone seemed to be deep in thought.

Last night, most of them had received solicitations from two different parties, either at home or at the clubhouse.

Today's shareholders meeting was crucial.

Martin settled into the chairman's seat while Bernard sat next to him.

He coughed lightly, signaling everyone to be quiet. He then spoke directly, "Today's shareholders meeting is very simple. I, Martin Johnston, will also be very straightforward and won't beat around the bush. Today, I'll resign from all positions in Beacon and will no longer serve as chairman of the board."

Philip's sudden appearance caused everyone in the meeting room to be at a loss for words. They felt unsettled!

One of them stood up abruptly, pointed at Philip, and sternly said, "Who are you? Who let you in? Don't you know where this is? Security, kick them out!"

This person was a newcomer and Martin had just promoted him, so he naturally did not know who Philip was.

Philip turned his head and glanced at the guy. With a faint smile at the corners of his month, he said, "Take him down."

Swoosh!

Two black-suited thugs behind him stepped forward and pinned that man to the floor!

Instantly, the man howled, "Mutiny! Who the hell are you? This is Beacon's conference room. How dare you act so boldly?! Security, where's the security?"

Instantly, more than a dozen thugs rushed over and directly pressed all those who just voiced out to the floor!

In a flash, the conference room was in chaos!

More than a dozen people who stood on Martin's side were harshly pinned to the floor by Theo's men!

They howled in anger, "Damn it! Who are you to do this to us? We're the shareholders of Beacon! Even if Wynn were here, she wouldn't dare to do this to us!"

"Let go of us or we'll go to the Riverdale Chamber of Commerce and sue you!"

"Philip Clarke, you're too arrogant. This is Beacon, not your house! What right do you have to preside over this shareholders meeting?"

Everyone gasped!

All gazes fell on Philip.

This guy was really too high-handed!

Martin turned around, his face looking unpleasant as he stared at Philip. He said sullenly, "What are you doing?"

Philip chuckled, stood with his hands behind his back, and stared at Martin with scorching eyes. He said, "Like you, I'm poaching talents. No matter how much you offer and how many promises you make, I'll triple all offers. And it's all in cash!"

With that said, Philip looked at those people behind Martin who looked skeptical yet eager. "I think everyone is here for the money and no one will refuse the money that's right in front of them, right?"

"What's your basis for saying that? How much money can you possibly have? You're just a kept husband who relies on his wife!"

"That's right. Your reputation in Riverdale is not that good. How can we believe your words? Don't try to bluff us."

Philip gave them a cold look, took a list from Theo's hand, and looked at it. Then, he slammed it on the conference table heavily and shouted, "Here's a list of all those who reached an agreement with Martin Johnston last night."

Clatter!

All of a sudden, the crowd panicked. He was about to settle the score with them right now.

Immediately, many people stood forward and knelt in front of Philip to beg him, "Mr. Clarke, we were wrong. We were really wrong. We were blinded by Martin Johnston. We're really loyal to Beacon. Please forgive us."

However, Philip looked at them coolly and asked those who were still standing, "Does anyone else want to come forward?"

One after another, several people stood up and knelt on the floor, admitting their mistakes.

"Notify all the media in the city and announce the secret about Wynn."

When Bernard heard this, he was still a little worried and asked, "Martin, if we really do this, there'll be no turning back. At that time, Charles will no longer tolerate us and that'll be the end of our kinship. Moreover, we've promised our big brother and sister-in-law that we'll never disclose Wynn's secret to the outside world. If this is revealed, not only Wynn but also Charles and Martha will be criticized."

Martin's face appeared dark as he looked at Bernard with raised eyebrows, saying, "Bernard, do you think we have another way out now? Since Philip is forcing us like this, why should we care about family affection? It's every man for himself!"

Martin did not want to reveal the secret that had been buried for more than 20 years either. However, at this point, he had no other choice.

If Philip had been willing to give in, he would not have resorted to this!

Bernard thought about it and said, "Martin, let's do it this way. We'll tell Philip this secret and let him make his choice before we act. This way, we're giving him a choice. If Philip still remains obstinate, then we won't be blamed for our actions."

Martin laughed and said, "Haha, well said. Since you've chosen me, I naturally won't treat you badly. But I didn't expect Philip to be so vicious and ruthless, not showing the slightest mercy at all. This is simply too disrespectful of him."

While saying that, Martin even slapped his hand on the armrest of the sofa in anger.

Although it was a bit pretentious, nobody would say anything. Instead, they smiled flatteringly and said, "Exactly! Philip is simply too arrogant. We're veterans in Beacon, after all. For him to kick us out like this, it's too disheartening!"

"Mr. Johnston, as long as you say the word, we'll definitely follow you to the ends of the world!"

"We must get rid of Philip quickly!"

Martin nodded as he stood up and said, "Everyone, please rest assured. The scale of Martin Pharmaceutical is comparable to Beacon. I believe that with your help, Martin Pharmaceutical will soon be among the top three in the pharmaceutical industry in Riverdale. At that time, we'll fight with Beacon to the death!"

As soon as that man heard this, tears of excitement filled his eyes as he said, "Thank you for your trust, Mr. Johnston. I won't let you down!"

All of a sudden, everyone there became anxious. They stood up and began talking.

"Mr. Johnston, I also have the R&D information about one of Beacon's drugs."

"I know several distributors who can help our company expand our sales channels."

"Mr. Johnston, I have confidential documents from Beacon Research Institute. I'll sure they won't disappoint you."

Martin looked at everyone's eager gazes to gain merit and a smile slowly bloomed from the corners of his mouth.

Martin's face trembled as he recalled what he had discussed with Bernard in the company the other day, which indeed involved his trump card.

On the side, Jacky suddenly shouted at this time, "Mr. Johnston, look! This Russell Carl actually dared to eavesdrop. He must've been sent by Philip. I think such a person must be driven out!"

However, Martin directly interrupted him and asked Russell with a smile, "How much did you hear?"

Russell replied, "About Chairwoman Wynn Johnston's background, that's all."

Martin's face darkened. He thought about it and finally said, "Very well, then. I'll leave this matter to you and Jacky. I hope the two of you won't let me down."
