

The First Heir 1751

Chapter 1751

Ross' face darkened as he said, "Anyway, we've taken over this case and we already have the relevant evidence. We only need to ask a few questions..."

"I'm sorry, Mr. Hogan, I want to handle this case myself. I have a feud with these people," Philip interrupted Ross and said, "However, I can provide you with some information. One of them is Angus Wager, a famous figure in bar street The other one is Hector Dunley from the Dunley family of Charbury."

"Well, Ada, have you taken note of it?" Ross turned his head and asked a female officer behind him.

That female officer looked valiant in uniform. With a ponytail, a delicate face, lightly powdered cheeks, a pair of sultry eyes, and pouty lips, many men would think of her as a goddess.

Ada Sacha nodded and said, "Ross, it's been recorded. I'll inform the others and immediately conduct a search in the entire city."

Ross nodded.

Before long, a group of seven or eight people arrived at the entrance of Hibiscus Hotel. Hector saw a row of sponsored cars parked in front of the hotel from a distance.

Hector immediately trotted over, knocked on the car window, and whispered, "Seventh Uncle?"

The car in the middle opened the door and let Hector in. Angus and his men saw this scene and tried to squeeze in but the convoy immediately drove away, leaving Angus and his men stranded.

Hearing this, Angus turned his head, slapped the underling on the back of his head, and yelled, "Do you want to die? Force our way through? Open your eyes and see what kind of people they are!"

The underling rubbed the back of his head and said aggrievedly, "If we don't force our way through, are we just going to sit here and wait?"

“That’s right, Angus. What should we do next? Even the only rural road out of Uppercreek has been blocked.”

“Angus, you have to think of something. You know a lot of people. There must be a way!”

At this time, the underlings could not hold back any longer and kept talking. They were afraid that Angus would abandon them.

Angus kicked the person who spoke and cursed, "Are you an idiot too? We're already wanted by the authorities. How can we turn ourselves in? Besides, who's Hector Dunley? A member of the Dunley family in Charbury! What can happen to him? We're just scapegoats. As long as we get caught and the Dunley family pulls some strings on their side, we'll become murderers!"

The underlings were terrified when they heard this.

At the same time, they also understood that in this situation, they could only run and hide. Only when things died down a little would they have the chance to escape Uppercreek.

Angus and his men smoked a few cigarettes in the alley.

Then, Angus got up and said, "I'm going to ask a friend of mine to see if he can take us out of the city. The first priority is to leave Uppercreek. As long as we can leave, we can still work hand-in-hand."

"Okay, we'll listen to you!"

The underlings nodded. Angus was the backbone of the group. Angus did not think too much about it either. He took out his phone and called his friend.

His plan was very simple. He would reach out to his friend to look at the situation. If that did not work, he would hide in this area.

This friend of his specialized in cargo transportation. They had known each other for more than a decade and were close friends.

Soon, Angus and his men were dragged down from the car by a group of truck drivers.

At this moment, Angus knelt on the ground and yelled hysterically at the fat man in a suit who was standing in front of him, "Eugene Cain, you betrayed me!"

The fat man smiled and said, "I'm sorry, friend. I didn't want to, but you've messed with people who shouldn't be messed with."

Hearing this, Angus' heart went cold as he roared, "Why? Did you betray your friend for five million dollars? Don't forget, I was the one who helped you make a fortune back then. Without me, you wouldn't be here today! You ungrateful son of a b*tch!"

"Hehehe..."

Eugene sneered and said, "Angus, you're wrong. I'm not doing this because of the five million dollars. You don't seem to understand the situation yet. Now it's no longer a matter of just the five million dollars. Even the streets have issued a pursuit notice against you. Do you know how much it is?"

The streets?

Could it be Victor Bell?

“How much?” Angus asked coldly.

Victor immediately said, “We’ve caught Angus Wager and his underlings. They’ve been locked up and can be interrogated at any time.”

“So?” Philip’s eyes narrowed slightly.

Was this not good news? Why did Victor say that something was wrong?

Victor looked at Simba next to him. The latter understood and said straightforwardly, “According to the news from the scene, Angus admitted that the one who made the move was Hector Dunley. However, Hector left Uppercreek in a car from one of his seventh uncle’s sponsors and is heading back to Charbury. Moreover, according to the news we received, Hector’s seventh uncle is quite influential in Uppercreek and knows many people.”

As soon as he finished speaking, Philip's eyes burst into cold light. He stared at Simba and asked, "A sponsor's car? Why wasn't it checked thoroughly?"

Hearing this, Ross was dumbfounded. He looked at Philip in confusion and asked, "Mayor Winter, what do you mean?"

On the other end of the phone, Peyton Winter took a deep breath and said, "Ross Hogan, don't ask any more questions. All you need to know is to follow orders. After this matter is over, I'll give you an explanation."

Since he had put it this way, Ross also understood that the young man in front of him had a very special identity!

Could he be the son of a hidden affluent family? Did he represent a certain level of identity?

Ross ended the call with a frown before he said respectfully to Philip, "Mr. Clarke, I'm at your disposal."

"Huh? Ross, what are you talking about?" Ada, who was behind him, dropped her jaw. Her eyes were full of shock.

All the medical staff of Uppercreek Municipal Hospital was shocked by this scene!
Terrifying!

The people in front of them were all iconic figures in the domestic medical field. At this moment, they were so respectfully bowing to the young man in front of them.

For such a lineup of medical personnel, it would be almost impossible to find another group of people in the country who could be compared to them. Moreover, there was still a hovering helicopter above their heads!

For a while, all the medical staff looked at Philip with awe and suspicion. The identity of the young man in front of them was definitely something special. He obviously looked so ordinary, though. How could he have the means to gather such a team of medical experts in such a short time?

Without hesitation, Philip dialed the other party's number.

The call was quickly connected, and the person on the other end asked in confusion, "Who are you? Why do you have my personal number?"

"Homer Dunley, I'm Philip Clarke," Philip said flatly.

"Philip Clarke? I don't know you. Did you dial the wrong number?" When Homer heard this, he frowned and wanted to end the call.

However, Philip's next sentence startled him. "Your son, Hector Dunley, injured my god-sister and is fleeing back to Charbury."

Homer frowned.
