Chapter 1801

“You... You’ve gone to the main Dunley family in Hampton?” Homer’s voice went up a pitch as he asked while glancing at Milo next to him.

Milo’s expression was also very unpleasant but he immediately mocked, “Boy, Hampton is the territory of the main Dunley family! You’re bold enough to dare go there alone, but I’m afraid you won’t come back in one piece!”

“Hehehe...”

Philip had already entered Hampton!

He was sitting in the helicopter, looking down at the most developed city in Charbury-Hampton!

This was where the main Dunley family was located. They were also the pillar of the entire Dunley family. The sound of the propellers whistled in his ears. At one glance, the tallest building in Hampton was like a giant sword that plunged into the sky!

This fifth uncle was none other than the fifth uncle of the patriarch of the main Dunley family, Winston Dunley. He was the half-brother of the former patriarch of the main Dunley family.

In terms of seniority, he was the fifth uncle of the current patriarch of the Dunley family, Sterling Dunley. He was also the family head of the branch Dunley family in Flower City!

Milo and Homer were Winston's nephews. Homer and Milo's father died young. Winston's status in the main Dunley family was not low, and he was also quite reputable in Hampton.

As soon as Milo said that, he took out his phone and dialed Winston's number.

The phone rang five or six times before it was picked up. A calm and aged voice came from the other end, asking, "Milo, is there anything wrong that you're calling me at this hour?"

Milo was full of compliments with a respectful smile on his face as he said, "Fifth Uncle, how have you been?"

"Okay, we'll leave this to you," Milo said before he hung up the phone respectfully.

At the same time, he breathed a sigh of relief. With a triumphant smile, he said to Homer, "Homer, it's settled. With Uncle Winston taking action, this matter will come to an end at last."

Homer also let out a breath of relief and fell heavily on the sofa, covered in a cold sweat.

It was finally resolved.

With Uncle Winston around, no matter how capable Philip was, he should not think of making any waves in Hampton.

On the side, Hector also burst out in laughter and said, "Dad, I already told you that everything will be fine. With Fifth Grandpa around, who can do anything to the Dunley family of Flower City?"

As he said that, he sat on the sofa swaggeringly, crossed his legs, and picked up an apple to munch on.

The car quickly drove away and headed to the Dunley Group building.

In the car, Philip dialed Jowin Benson's number and asked, "Do you know Winston Dunley?"

Jowin was dealing with Fred's affairs in Flower City at the moment. When he received the call from Philip, he quickly replied, "Winston Dunley? Young Master Clarke, this person is an important figure in the main Dunley family with quite a bit of influence in Hampton. He's the fifth uncle of Sterling Dunley, the current patriarch of the Dunley family. He's also the current head of the Dunley family of Flower City, the backer behind Homer and Milo Dunley, as well as their uncle."

Philip nodded and said, "Okay, I got it."

Then, he ended the call and said to the man next to him who was on the computer, "Can you contact Winston Dunley?"

The computer expert replied, "Yes, one minute."

Hearing that, Winston scowled. At this moment, he had entered the building of the Dunley Group. He took the gilded private elevator and went straight to the upper floor of the building.

Of course, it was not the topmost floor.

The top floor was the office of Sterling Dunley, the patriarch of the entire Dunley family. His office was on four floors below the top.

In fact, the floor level of the Dunley Group building represented the hierarchical status and identity of the owner of the floor in the main Dunley family.

Winston Dunley, as the fifth uncle of the patriarch of the main Dunley family, had a lot of status and influence in the Dunley family. Moreover, he was mainly in charge of the Dunley family's foreign trade and export.

At this moment, Winston walked out of the elevator and pushed open the gilded door of his office. He was angry, and with a sneer on his face, he walked to the French windows where he took a cup of coffee from the maid. He said solemnly, "Young man, since you said I have no capability, let's see what kind of waves you can create in Hampton."

Make sure to protect the young master's safety! If anything happens to him, I'll hold all of you accountable!" George shouted coldly before hanging up the phone.

Just at this moment, one of his subordinates was staring at the computer before he got up and reported, "Mr. Thomas, the other party is trying to use their power to collect information about the young master."

George sneered and said, "Hehe, this bunch of small fries have no idea what real power is! Do people like them have the right to dig out information about the young master? Wishful thinking! Spread out false information about the young master!"

"Yes!"

Very quickly, everyone started operating.

Ten minutes later, Winston's people found first hand information about Philip.

Philip turned around, looked at the woman, and said with a smile, "Old George has told me about you. You've been very capable."

Maia Harp was the Clarke family's person in charge of Hampton and also the chief president in Charbury, as arranged by the Clarke family.

She was only 28 years old this year but she was already a successful career woman. She was in charge of all the Clarke family's businesses and staffing arrangements in Charbury. She may be a woman but she was more capable than a man!

Otherwise, the Clarke family would not have appointed her as the chief president of the Charbury region.

"Thank you for the compliment, Young Master." Maia smiled, her eyebrows arching like half crescents. She added, "Butler Thomas has already briefed me about the purpose of your visit to Hampton this time. I'll definitely carry out your arrangements. Please rest assured in giving me your orders."

In just ten years, they have become a great clan in the mainland and are on equal footing with the Wallis family in Golden City. They were one of the six great clans back then, sitting at the same conference table with the Clarke family to discuss and work together. They were also a frequent Philip frowned and fell silent. He turned around and looked at the Dunley Group building that seemed to shoot up into the sky.

It seemed that he could almost see a figure standing behind a window somewhere on the highest floor, looking back at him too.

"If I make a move against the Dunley family, what are my chances of winning?" Philip asked.

Maia frowned and thought for a moment before saying, "Based on the assets and personnel you can currently use, only 40%. After all, this is the Dunley family of Charbury, not the Clarke family of Arcadia Island. The strength and power of the Clarke family are weakened by half here. Besides, the Clarke family has a cooperative relationship with the Dunley family. I'm afraid the elders in the family won't agree if you want to take action against the Dunley family."

"Only 40%?" Philip's eyes were cold, and there was slight displeasure in his tone.

"What if I bypass the Clarke family and strike out against the Dunley family myself?" Philip asked as he turned around and stared at Maia with a searing gaze. Maia was a little baffled by Philip's question.

At that very moment, Philip's phone rang. It was a call from George. His respectful voice sounded from the other end of the phone. "Young Master, Winston has made a move against the Clarke family in Riversouth and already monopolized half of their partners. Should we continue with the next plan?"

"Go ahead," Philip said coldly.

George quickly responded and said, "Young Master, do listen to my advice. For the time being, don't target the Dunley family. Wait for the people I've arranged to arrive in Hampton before you..."

However, before George could finish his words, Philip interrupted him and said, "I don't have much time. Hurry up."

"Yes." George was helpless. He ended the call and said to the subordinates around him, "Let's begin."

Not long after Philip ended the call, he received a call from Winston.

As soon as the call was connected, Winston's hearty laughter sounded from the other end. He said, "Young man, I've received your generous gift. I like it very much. For this, I have also prepared a gift for you in return."
