Chapter 2051

In the afterglow of the setting sun, the purple-gold token reflected a dazzling cold light. The moment this token was taken out, Christian, who was standing at the entrance of the memorial hall, widened his eyes as his breathing became rapid.

After that, without another word, he knelt on the ground and said, "Greetings to the grand elder."

Instantly, all the elders and people in charge of the branch family, as well as the young masters and young ladies, turned to Horace and bowed deeply.

"Greetings to the grand elder."

For a while, these words resounded throughout the branch family's memorial hall!

Philip also trembled when he saw the purple-gold token in Horace's hand. His third uncle actually got hold of the grand elder's token.

Behind him, all members of the Griffin Army knelt on one knee and said with bowed heads, "Greetings to the grand elder."

Their cries were more majestic and imposing than those people from the branch family. Like rumbling thunder, the sound echoed and circled above the branch family's memorial hall.

Aria turned her head, looked at Horace disapprovingly, and said, "And you! Do you want to cause trouble with him too? Do you know what kind of place the branch family is? If Christian really had the intention to kill today, who would've been able to stop him?"

Horace looked a little sullen and said, "But Aria, I did ask for the grand elder's token, didn't I? Besides, nothing happened."

"Say it again!" Aria coldly scolded.

Horace was like a schoolboy who had made a mistake. He turned to Philip and accused him, "Why are you so stubborn? Why couldn't you hold back a little? You just had to go and cause such a big fuss! Apologize to your third mother right now!"

Philip felt helpless. He knew that his third mother loved him.

"Third Mother, I'm sorry. I know I was wrong."

Philip lowered his head and said. Then, he took a step forward, pulled Aria's delicate arm, and said, "Third Mother, don't be angry. I won't dare to do it again next time."

With that said, Philip even wanted to make a vow.

Aria snorted and said to the attendant next to her, "Let's go."

Philip was dumbfounded at Dr. Garfield Gates' words.

Wynn had a hidden illness? She only had three years left to live?

How was this possible?

"Dr. Gates, are you sure?" Philip looked a little unhappy. If not for the doctor's superb medical skills, he would have gotten someone to give him a bashing!

Dr. Gates nodded with a look of regret and said, "Young Master Philip, there's no reason for me to lie to you. Young Madam's body is very special, indeed."

Philip frowned, and his heart was in turmoil. His breathing became very rapid and tense.

Dr. Gates sighed and paced back and forth with his hands behind his back. Finally, he said, "Young Master Philip, have you ever heard of something called the golden blood in this world?"

Philip abruptly reacted and said, "It has something to do with golden blood?"

Dr. Gates nodded and said, "Young Master Philip, truth be told, 20 years ago, I was fortunate enough to have encountered a patient with golden blood. That patient's condition was very similar to the young madam's. She underwent two childbirths and had a hemorrhage during her second delivery. Later, her blood flow collapsed and her body quickly deteriorated. All vitality in her blood essence was lost. In less than three years, the patient passed away and left two children behind."

"I have visited famous doctors and read various ancient books, but there's no treatment for this disease. It can be said that for people with golden blood, regardless of men or women, the blood flow in their bodies will collapse at a certain age. Within three years, they will die."

Dr. Gates' face was full of chagrin and regret. He had practiced medicine all his life and saved countless people.

After pondering for a moment, Dr. Gates said, "Multidew Herb."

'Multidew Herb?'

'What kind of medicinal material is that?'

After hearing this, Philip's entire face trembled as he inquired, "Dr. Gates, what medicine is this?"

Dr. Gates shook his head, put his hands behind his back, and explained, "Young Master Philip, I don't know this medicine either. It's just something recorded in an ancient book. It's said to be made from the juice of a hundred kinds of herbs that has absorbed sunlight and moonlight. It takes 3,000 years to form a plant. Then, the plant is taken and pounded into medicinal dew."

Dr. Gates raised three fingers as he said that, his face full of helpless distress as he shook his head.

Philip did not feel well after hearing this. Was there really such a thing in this world?

"Young Master Philip, the 3,000 years mentioned in the ancient texts may not be very credible and perhaps just exaggerated."

Seeing Philip's look of dejection, Dr. Gates coughed lightly and said, "However, don't be discouraged. Although this prescription is hard to come by, I'll try my best to read the ancient books again to find out if there's a remedy to alleviate the young madam's illness."

Philip nodded. He felt very empty, disappointed, and upset.

"Dr. Gates, I'll be counting on you, then," Philip said respectfully with a bow.

Dr. Gates quickly helped Philip up and said, "Young Master Philip, you don't have to do this. I'm just one of the Clarke family's doctors and I should do my best. You don't have to bow to me."

Philip did not say anything but looked at Dr. Gates very seriously and said, "Dr. Gates, don't tell the young madam about this matter for now."

Dr. Gates naturally understood and answered with a nod, "I understand, please rest assured. I'll go back and prescribe a few supplements to the young madam to replenish her blood and boost her vitality. Even though it can't help much, it can lessen her suffering for the next three years."

he nodded and instructed the servant to send Dr. Gates back. Looking at the doctor's departure, Philip stood in the yard and looked up at

At this moment, a tiny figure was rubbing her sleepy eyes. She was wearing a cute pair of pink pajamas and standing at the bedroom door.

“Daddy...”

Mila called out and walked in wearing big pink slippers.

Philip smiled, bent over, and picked Mila up. He hopped her nose and asked, “Why are you awake?”

Mila hid in Philip’s arms in fear and said, “I had a nightmare. I dreamed that Mom left me and went far away.”

While saying that, Mila looked at the sleeping Wynn on the bed and wanted to call out to her.

Philip immediately put a finger to his mouth in a shushing gesture and said, “Mom is asleep. Let me play with you for a while.”

Mila nodded, looking very cute with her hair slightly disheveled.

The father and daughter sat in the living room to play at this moment. While playing, Philip noticed a small object hanging from Mila’s neck. It was a small green bottle carved with patterns and there was a red string on both ends. The bottle was about the size of a little finger.

Philip frowned. He did not buy this for his daughter.

Wynn was stunned. Philip actually had a great great grandfather. Was that not her father-in-law's great grandfather?

The generation gap was too huge!

For a while, Wynn was a little flustered. She stared reproachfully at Philip and said, "Why didn't you tell me earlier? You nearly got me into trouble."

After that, Wynn took Mila, who was still drinking her milk, back to the room and started changing. About half an hour later, Wynn changed into a long white dress with a small trench coat. Her hair was coiled on her head, and she put on high heels. With light makeup on, she looked very savvy and approachable.

"How is it? Do I look okay?" Wynn looked at herself and glanced at Philip expectantly.

Philip stroked his chin, nodded, and said, "Okay, this is fine. The grand elder is not a particular person."

Wynn rolled her eyes at him and said, "How can we act so casually? No way, I'll change into another outfit."

With that said, Wynn returned to the room. Ten minutes later, she still decided to stick with the previous outfit.

Soon, the four arrived at the middle hall.

At this moment, an old man with his hand behind his back was looking at the birdcage hanging in the yard. From a distance, the old man was dressed in plain clothes, looking quite hale and hearty.

Horace walked in with Philip and the others. He bowed slightly to the old man and said, "Grand Elder, Philip has brought his wife and child to visit you."

The grand elder turned around with a benevolent smile. He looked at Philip who was grinning broadly, stretched out his hand in a beckon, and said, "Little Monkey, are you finally willing to come back and visit this lonely old man?"

Philip stepped forward, bowed to the old man, and said with a smile, "Grand Elder, I'm here to visit you."

The old man rolled his eyes at Philip before looking at Wynn and Mila who were standing with trepidation on the side.

Then, with a smile on his face, he beckoned to Wynn and Mila while saying, "Come here, all of you. There are not so many rules to follow here."

Wynn stepped forward with Mila in her arms, bowed to the old man, and said respectfully, "Grand Elder..." Then, she said to Mila in her arms, "Mila, this is your great-grand elder."

At this moment, the grand elder was lying on a wicker chair, enjoying tea and listening to music.

“Little Monkey, refill my tea,” the old man called out.

Philip walked over with a few steps, refilled the old man’s teapot, and sat next to him.

The old man glanced at Philip and asked with a faint smile, “Something on your mind?”

Philip squeezed out a smile and said, “Nothing...”

The old man chuckled, looked at the flowers and plants in the yard, and said, “I watched you grow up. I can tell at a glance that you have something on your mind. If you tell me, perhaps I can help.”

Philip thought for a while, got up, and sat down next to the grand elder. He refilled the old man’s teacup before asking, “Grand Elder, I want to ask you something.”

The old man hummed and said, “What is it? Why are you so secretive and why do you look so serious?”

Philip pondered for a moment and asked, “Do you know about the Multidew Herb?”
