

The First Heir 2611

Chapter 2611

It was already the afternoon when Philip finally recovered his energy. He walked out of the manor and was ready to go to the Underground Bounty Society with Fennel.

Marquis Ron had invited them, saying that they had found something valuable from the ruins of the Hall of Evil.

Not long after, Philip and Fennel's car arrived at the entrance of the Underground Bounty Society. Marquis Ron had been waiting with a group of attendants.

"Mr. Clarke, Lord Apollo..." Marquis Ron stepped forward and personally opened the car door with great respect.

Philip and Fennel got out of the car, glanced at Marquis Ron, greeted him politely, and asked, "What is it that we have to come here in person?"

Philip asked, "What's this meteorite?"

Fennel frowned and said, "If I'm not mistaken, it's not a meteorite but a living creature from the other shore, a monster. In the Graben Abyss, everyone who has experienced the final trial of the king of disciples has to face countless monsters. Thus, they develop rapidly in the fights with them. These monsters hatch from meteorite-like stones like this, suck the blood of humans, and devour human flesh to complete the stage of evolutionary growth."

"These monsters are born with the strength of the fourth zone. With every ten people they devour, they can complete one level of evolution. The strongest royal monsters have the strength equivalent to the king of disciples of the seventh zone, and they're also the existence that guards the Graben Abyss."

“If I remember correctly, there are six royal monsters. Two were killed by Fulton back then, while the other kings of disciples joined forces and seriously injured three, rendering them into a deep sleep. Only one royal monster is left loitering in the Graben Abyss now.”

After hearing from Fennel, Philip was extremely grave. He never expected the door to be such a terrifying place that harbored such creatures.

Philip frowned, his hand suspended in midair. He said, “I feel that it has formed a connection with something in my body. I don’t think it’ll harm me. Instead, I feel as if I can command it.”

With that said, Philip tentatively reached out with his right hand and placed it on the meteorite. Suddenly, the instant his right hand touched the meteorite, a dazzling red light flashed before it disappeared just as quickly. The contraction and expansion of the meteorite also slowed down as if it had quieted down.

The staff member saw the data displayed by the monitoring device and said, “Marquis Ron, the values have dropped. It seems much calmer.”

Hearing that, Marquis Ron and Fennel turned to look at Philip.

Fennel asked, “How is it? What do you feel?”

Philip focused and thought for a long while. He withdrew his hand and said, "It's a strange feeling as if there's something inside very close and reliant on me. Moreover, it seems to be sending me an important message, but I can't figure it out for the time being."

At the sight of this small alien creature, everyone in the room was dumbfounded!

The eyes of the female researchers shone brightly as they stared at the little creature that had poked its head out from the cracked meteorite. They clenched their fists, blinked their large eyes, and exclaimed in excitement, "Wow, this little guy is so cute! I really want to hold it."

Fennel and Marquis Ron were also stunned.

The little creature kept looking around at the outside world with its pale golden eyes. Then, it jumped out lightly from the broken shell, all shrouded in a golden glow. It was just like a pale golden lamb but with two red antlers on its head. Other than that, its four hooves were also bright red as if it were stepping on magma. It just stood on the laboratory table, staring at everyone and chirping.

Fennel came back to his senses and said gravely, "Oh no! This is a royal monster! A monster born as royalty must be killed at once!"

"What?! Keep it? Are you crazy? That's a creature from the other shore, a brutal monster! Countless human warriors have died under their fangs and become their food! No way, we must kill it immediately!"

Fennel's attitude was very tough and unrelenting. However, Philip smiled and said, "I'll bear the responsibility if anything happens. I'm keeping it because I can feel the trust it has in me. Moreover, I can find out more about the door and the world of the other shore through it."

Fennel frowned. Philip was right.

The Black Dragon Heart that was previously guarded by the royal monsters had been absorbed by Philip. Since the royal monster had displayed its dependence and trust in Philip, it might be a way for humans to understand the world of the other shore through it. However, this approach was too risky because there was no evidence that the monster was 100% submissive to the Black Dragon Heart.

What if it was an act put up by this little creature?

Maybe it also wanted to integrate into human society and explore human civilization.

Fennel voiced his concern. Philip nodded and said, "You have a point."

Following that, Philip touched the little creature's head with one hand, closed his eyes, and began to communicate with it. Soon, a pale golden barrier formed between Philip and this little royal monster. Immediately after, the monitoring devices in the secret room sounded the alarm.

Mila had been taken away?

Philip jolted and asked, "Mom, what happened? Isn't Mila under close watch?"

On the other end of the phone, Martha was very anxious. She sobbed and said, "It's all my fault. I was careless. Mila said she wanted to go out to play, so I took her out. I didn't let your people follow us. I just turned around to chat with my friends and Mila was gone. Oh, but they left a letter for you."

Martha was very anxious, afraid that Philip would blame her. She had no choice. Her son-in-law was now the young patriarch of a wealthy family. She could not afford to offend him at all. Martha had come to terms with it. In the future, she would depend on her son-in-law.

"What letter?" Philip frowned and asked coldly.

At the same time, he asked Fennel to arrange for a private plane to return to Orienta.

"The words written on the envelope read the Singer family."

Philip snorted and said, “When the Singer family reached their hands out to Mila, their ending was already set in stone! Without the Singer family, any Tom, Dick, and Harry family can still take charge of the Northern supernatural disciple world!”

Philip had made his intention clear.

Fennel said no more and told his subordinates to pack up. He got ready to return home with Philip on a private plane. After all, it was impossible for Philip to go to Mystic City in the Northwest alone.

He left things in the Hall of the Sun to the Strategist. Before leaving, Fennel also called Athena up and asked her to take care of the hall. Of course, Athena was quite willing to do so. She also emphasized that she would definitely go to Orienta to look for Fennel.

As for Roger, he would remain in the Hall of the Sun to recover from his injuries for the time being. Roger had his plans that Philip did not know nor intended to find out. Philip did not even tell Roger about Mila.

The next morning, the private plane landed at the Riverdale airport.

Philip and Fennel got off the plane. They got into the car prepared by Theo Zander and headed straight to First Palace.

All the streets in Riverdale were on lockdown.

In less than ten minutes, Philip returned to First Palace, where Charles and Martha were sitting in the living room. Martha's eyes were red from crying, while Charles paced around anxiously.

"Stop crying. What's the use of crying now? If not for your carelessness, Mila wouldn't have gotten kidnapped." Charles had not slept a wink last night.

Martha sobbed and said, "You can't blame me for that. I didn't know that someone would lay their hands on Mila. If Philip hadn't messed with someone outside, who would have done such a thing to Mila?"

"Enough! Are you still blaming Philip now?" Charles said angrily.

Martha only said this because she was nervous and worried. She quickly asked, "Charles, do you think Philip will blame me when he comes back later?"

George received news about Mila's kidnapping last night and suppressed the news within the Clarke family for fear that the people of the branch family would find out. If they found out, maybe the branch family would get involved too. In that case, things would get tricky.

George immediately dialed the intercom of the family guards' base camp and ordered, "The young patriarch has given the order to mobilize four teams of sea, land, and air to head to the Northern Singer family! Do this immediately without fail!"

"Yes!"

The guards of the base camp immediately sprang into action. In less than three minutes, the land guards assembled a hundred fully armed guards, all of them the most elite guards of the main Clarke family.

On the sea, five escort cruise ships were mobilized with all ammunition fully loaded. They headed straight for the Northern port of Beechwood City where the Singer family was located. Four fighter jets also lifted off from the Clarke family's airport with thunderous roars like eagles soaring into the sky toward Beechwood City.

Jenkins snorted and said, "Hehe, Leon Jefferson is very gutsy. Let's see if he dares to fight the Singer family head-on for the sake of that young brat!"

After that, Jenkins said to the middle-aged man, "Pass him my message that we won't let her go. The Singer family will invite Villa Master Leon Jefferson as a guest here with open arms!"

"This..."

The elder of the Singer family was hesitant and said, "Patriarch, is this reply really appropriate? He's the master of Cherry Villa, after all. If we really provoke him, I'm afraid it'll be detrimental to the Singer family and Terrain Villa."

Jenkins snorted and said, "I'm not afraid of Leon Jefferson!"

Hearing that, the elder of the Singer family nodded and said, "I'll send him the reply now."
