wedding dress stared back at her.

The young lady's lips were quivering and tears began to pool in her eyes but not wanting to ruin her wedding make-up, Tinsley picked up a handkerchief and used it to clean the trace

A pathetic smile hung on Tinsley's lips and so she reached out her hand but before she could touch the mirror...

"It's time for the bride to appear, Lillee are you done?" Someone asked which made Tinsley quickly dump the veil on her head and fixed it back.

The door was suddenly unlocked from outside which made Tinsley raise her head.

Her mom, Mrs. William's figure appeared to her through the mirror which made Tinsley's face which made the pathetic smile on Tinsley's eyes grow wider.

"Tinsley," Mrs. William called. "Remember not to alert Conrad. Just do it for us and your elder sister, please." Mrs. William said, but there was no trace of sadness or remorse on her

Yes, it was only about them and Lillee they cared about which was the reason why they didn't fail to make Tinsley stand as a substitute bride on Conrad and her elder sister, Lillee's wedding.

"Okay." Tinsley replied in a shaky voice. Her lips were quivering but everything was well-hidden by the veil.

Mrs. William continued to give out warnings like she had been doing since the very beginning, "Don't talk to anyone except it's extremely compulsory and you're Lillee until Lillee is back from the modeling show." Mrs. William continued to inform.

Not at all caring to ask about how Tinsley is coping up with being used as a substitute bride

"As long as you do everything I say, you can successfully pass the role of Lillee." Mrs. William explained which made her nod.

but Tinsley was already used and numb to it. Lillee was always the apple of her parents eyes

Mr. William suddenly appeared in Tinsley's view. "Did you hear all your mom asked you to, you mustn't mess it up." her father warned coldly which made her nod silently.

"Please come out, Lillee William."

Tinsley stood up and walked to Mr. William who immediately held her hand with a fake smile on his face.

how wouldn't he? Conrad and Lillee had always been childhood sweethearts who swore to love each other for eternity.

Unfortunately, Lillee was invited to a modeling show out of the country and so she had pushed all the wedding aside to pursue the dream that would finally make her famous.

Tinsley and Lillee could easily pass for each other because they have the same body structures which they took from their mother, Mrs William, but that thought wasn't enough to assure Tinsley because Conrad always recognizes the love of his life.

And that made Tinsley's heart caught in her throat as she made way toward him.

'This was all wrong! Everything was all wrong!' she trembled with fear. But she had no choice than to follow her parents' order. You mustn't mess it up.

'Do you, Conrad Norton, take Lillee William to be your wedded wife....'

The wedding vows, everything that was being said continued to flash in her ears and like a machine, Tinsley continued to give answers like a robot.

Tinsley's mouth immediately turned dry and her heartbeat immediately sped up.

Didn't mom and Dad say there'll be no kissing of the bride in order to not blow her cover?

And before her hand could fly toward the veil to cover herself tightly, Conrad suddenly reached for the veil and threw it away.

At that minute, the party seems to undergo a massive change as everything stops. The noise scared Tinsley; it was Conrad's smirk that immediately turned back into a cold and furious expression, Conrad looked like he was about to strangle Tinsley to death.

The church was so silent that one could hear the sound of breathing but that wasn't what

"Where's Lillee?" Conrad's booming voice resounded in her ears which made Tinsley's mouth dry.

But wait, why does her parents frown as if they didn't know about this?

Conrad raised his hand slightly as if he wanted to slap Tinsley's face which made her
