

The Kiss That Sparked iOnline book summaries 1321

Chapter 1321

Ida didn't tell him outright, but she didn't lie either. When he asked, she copped to it.

Byran stared blankly at Ida's message on his phone as his hand slightly shook.

Ellinor noticed Byran's weird vibe. "What's up with you?"

Byran acted like he didn't hear her and awkwardly rubbed his red and swollen eyes. "Nah, nothing!"

Ellinor squinted at him and noticed that he was trying to hold back tears. "What on earth are you doing? Got dumped by Ida, didn't you?" Byran realized he was a terrible actor and turned his face away. "Nope! I've gotta hit the books for the exam; I'm going to study!"

With that, he bolted up the stairs.

Ellinor was left in a state of confusion.

Balfour chimed in. "Just let it slide. He's always up and down like that."

Ellinor furrowed her brow, wondering if that was really the case.

"By the way, Ellinor, I ordered some stuff for your delivery. It should be here soon. Check it out and see if you like it. If anything's missing, just let me know."

"I've got all I need. You better cancel the order before the stuff gets here, Mr. Howard!"

Balfour disagreed. "What you got is yours, and what I got for you is out of my good will. The more, the merrier. It'll come in handy."

Ellinor knew Balfour wouldn't back down. He didn't want to waste her breath, so she let it go.

She'd just pay him back when she transferred the money later.

At the time, Sophia was dragged to the corner by the Howard family's servants and then let go.

Looking at the formidable servants of the Howard family, Sophia realized that if she went back, she'd definitely be dragged back again. But she didn't want to miss such a golden opportunity.

This was her best shot to cause trouble for Ellinor's baby..

Before, she couldn't do anything to Ellinor's belly without leaving traces.

And she never played a game she wasn't sure she could win.

So she even considered raising the baby with Theo once it was born. After all, Theo had an adopted child anyway.

There was no difference when it came to raising one or two. She'd also have her own baby with Theo later.

Though this was her plan, she was still a bit reluctant.

What woman would want to raise the baby the man she loved had with another woman?

If she waited now, Ellinor's baby might be born safely.

Marissa Blanchet placed great importance on Ellinor's baby. If it turned out to be a boy, it would be endless trouble for Sophia.

The child adopted by the Blanchet family could at most enjoy good food and education in the Blanchet family, but definitely wouldn't inherit anything.

But it was different for the baby Ellinor gave birth to.

This child was Theo's biological child and Marissa's and Putnam's first grandchild. His status might threaten her and Theo's future children.

Sophia stopped at the intersection and thought of a solution to her problem for a long time. She made up her mind and headed straight for an advertising shop on the roadside.

The clerk-saw her and asked, "Can I help you with something, miss?"

Sophia replied, "I need to print some leaflets. When can you get them done at the earliest?"

The Kiss That Chapter-wise reading Chapter 1322

Chapter 1322

The clerk asked, "What kind of leaflets do you need printed? Once we design a layout, it should take about thirty minutes."

"I don't need complex designs; just get it done as fast as possible."

"Sure thing. We'll do the simplest layout for you and try to finish in fifteen minutes."

The evening rolled in.

After dinner, Ellinor took a stroll in the Howard family's garden, enjoying the evening breeze and admiring the moonlight.

Suddenly, she heard some grumbling from ahead.

"What a mess! I wonder which careless vendor scattered these leaflets everywhere."

"Exactly! Those who aren't interested in the leaflets just chuck them away, and the wind blows them into our garden."

Two servants were sweeping the ground and complaining. They then heard footsteps approaching.

After turning around, they saw Ellinor.

They immediately showed respect to her. "Ms. Mendoza, you might want to walk over there. We're sweeping, and we're afraid the dust might bother you."

Ellinor smiled. "Alright, you guys keep working hard."

She didn't pay them much mind. She smiled at the two servants and walked by.

Once Ellinor left, the two servants started chitchatting again.

“Ugh! Look at this leaflets. Why are they printing about Mr. Blanchet’s murder?”

“Isn’t it clear? It says Mr. Blanchet died suddenly, and they’re now asking for any leads. Whoever provides useful information will get a big reward.”

“I wonder who would dare harm Mr. Blanchet.”

“What’s it to us anyway? Our relationship with the Blanchet family isn’t great, so it’s none of our business.”

As they talked and swept, they suddenly stopped at a pair of feet. They looked up and saw that Ellinor was back.

Ellinor looked at them seriously. “Who did you say was killed?”

The two were startled by Ellinor’s serious face. They were just the Howard family’s gardeners, so they had no idea about Ellinor’s past relationship with Theo.

One of them quickly answered. “It’s Mr. Blanchet; he died in last night’s explosion. His body was badly damaged, and now the Blanchet family is looking for clues. We read it on these leaflets.”

Ellinor looked down at the dusty leaflets,

She bent down to pick one up, but her belly got in the way.

Seeing this, one of the gardeners quickly helped her pick one up and handed it to her.

Ellinor grabbed the leaflet. One side was an ad for a barbecue restaurant, and the other side was what the gardeners just mentioned.

Theo was killed in an explosion?

3

No way!

How could this be?

No way, that was Theo!

Ellinor looked shocked; her chest felt tight, and she had trouble breathing.

"The Kiss That Sparked it All ( Ellinor )" A romance novel or romantic novel

The Kiss That Sparked Free online novels Chapter 1323

Chapter 1323

Even though that guy really kicked the bucket, what did it have to do with her?

She was done with him.

She tossed the leaflet, didn't linger, and quickly turned to head back into her house..

The two servants saw her hurrying and couldn't help but worry. They immediately started calling after her.

"Ms. Mendoza, slow down! Watch your step; don't fall..."

"Ms. Mendoza..."

Ellinor, huffing and puffing, rushed into the living room, where Balfour was on the couch, checking Byran's homework.

She strode over to him and asked straight out, "Is Theo's death for real?"

Upon hearing Ellinor's words, Balfour looked up. His face froze, and he asked with furrowed brows. "Who told you?"

After seeing Balfour's reaction and connecting it to recent strange happenings, including Sophia's afternoon visit, she was sure the news on the leaflet was true.

Her eyes turned bloodshot as she demanded, "Why didn't you tell me?!"

Balfour, looking gloomy, stood up and slowly approached Ellinor. "Ellinor, I didn't mean to hide it from you. I just worried it would upset you."

Not wanting to hear him out, Ellinor shoved Balfour away. "Back off! I need some air!"

With that, she turned to leave.

Balfour reached out and grabbed Ellinor's wrist. "Ellinor, what's done is done. You going out won't change anything. Cool down, didn't you say you wanted nothing to do with Theo?"

Ellinor's mind was a whirl. Her chest ached as if she were being cut with a blunt knife. "But I never thought he'd die!"

Balfour frowned and looked at Ellinor with concern. "Ellinor, calm down."

Right now, Ellinor was in no mood for advice. She tried to pull her wrist out of Balfour's grip. "Let me go! Lend me a car! I need to go out!"

"Ellinor, you're expecting and are very close to your due date! You have to think about the baby, too! Think about it, if Theo is really gone, your baby is the only bloodline he left in this world. Do you really want to risk it?"

After hearing this, Ellinor paused and began slowly quieting down.

Balfour gently pulled Ellinor into his arms, patting her gently again and again. "It's okay. Be good and stay at home. Don't go anywhere."

Ellinor's eyes were full of tears; her gaze was firm but unfocused. Her voice was low but trembling. "Tell me, who caused his death?"

At this point, Balfour didn't want to hide anything from Ellinor anymore. "From what I know, Theo's father led a complicated private life. He had an illegitimate son who probably wanted to kill Theo and take his place.

Theo's father was a playboy in his youth, fathering many children with many women.

Theo had to learn from an early age to deal with the threats posed by his half-brothers. Each of them was hoping for his early demise so that they could have a shot at the Blanchet family's inheritance.

Ellinor knew nothing about the Blanchet family's internal affairs. This was the first time she heard about it.

She had wondered why only Marissa and Putnam from the Blanchet family ever showed up and why Theo never mentioned his parents, but she never asked him.

All of a sudden, Balfour felt Ellinor in his arms lose balance and collapse onto him. He looked down to find Ellinor's eyes closed. "Ellinor? Ellinor! Ellinor..."

Unable to wake Ellinor, Balfour realized that something was wrong.

"Quick, call an ambulance! No, don't bother with an ambulance. Get a car here now! Take Ellinor to the nearest hospital!"

Byran, who had been standing by dumbfounded, also panicked. After snapping back to reality, he ran to get the driver.

"The Kiss That Sparked it All ( Ellinor )" A romance novel or romantic novel

The Kiss That Sparked it All Online story chapters1324

Chapter 1324

At the hospital.

After examining Ellinor, the doctor came out to explain to her family. "She fainted due to excessive emotional fluctuations, but luckily, she was brought here in time. Both the mother and the baby are okay."

Upon hearing the doctor's feedback, Balfour and Byran finally relaxed and sighed in relief.

The doctor continued. "However, her due date is fast approaching, and due to the shock, she may go into labor early. I suggest admitting her straight away."

Balfour was planning to do just that. After Ellinor's ordeal, he didn't feel comfortable taking her home.

So he nodded at Quinton next to him.

"Go and get Ellinor admitted."

Quinton respectfully responded, "Yes, Mr. Howard."

After watching Quinton head off to handle the admission paperwork, Byran frowned at Balfour. "Why did Theo..."

Balfour scowled. "Don't you dare bring it up again? Do you think Ellinor's shock wasn't big enough?"

Realizing he had said something he shouldn't, Byran sadly lowered his head, saying no more.

Balfour warned him again. "When you go in, don't mention Theo in front of Ellinor."

Byran nodded. "Yeah, I got it."

When Balfour entered the ward, Ellinor was already awake. She was staring blankly at the ceiling, lost in thought.

Seeing Ellinor like this made Balfour feel indescribable pain. He approached the bed and gently asked, "Ellinor, how do you feel? Any discomfort?"

Without turning her head, Ellinor shook her head, her voice unusually cold. "I'm fine; nothing's wrong."

Balfour couldn't help but feel like something was wrong with her after seeing her like this. He reached out to touch Ellinor's head.

"Ellinor, I had Quinton admit you to the hospital. You should stay here until your delivery. I'll be by your side the entire time; don't worry."

Ellinor came back to her senses slightly and looked at Balfour. "You don't have to do this. Go on with your work; I'll be okay here alone. Don't worry, I've calmed down, and I won't mess around with the baby in my belly."

Balfour was somewhat relieved to hear her say this. "Ellinor, that's the best attitude to have. Things have happened and can't be undone. The most important thing is to live well and protect those around you, like your child."

Ellinor smiled faintly. "Of course! I will definitely protect my child! As for that man, I have nothing to do with him anymore. What does it matter whether he's dead or alive? If he's alive, he'll just cause trouble for me and my child. Might as well be dead and out of the way! That way, I won't have to worry about anyone trying to take my child away, right?"

Balfour frowned. "Alright, now that you understand, stop thinking about it and get some rest."

Byran wiped away his tears and grumbled angrily, "Humph! Even if you've broken up, you can't say such harsh words! Theo was so good to you, how can you think him being dead is a good thing?"

After hearing this, Balfour coldly raised his eyes and sternly scolded him, "Get out!"

Feeling upset, Byran unusually expressed his displeasure towards his brother. He scoffed and stormed off.

While watching Byran leave, Balfour gently said, "Ellinor, don't mind him; he doesn't understand."

Ellinor nodded "Brother, I suddenly want to eat a cream puff."

"Okay, I have someone buy it for you right away." As Balfour agreed, he didn't notice anything unusual at first, until he showed a surprised expression and looked at Ellinor in disbelief.

"Ellinor, what did you just call me?"

The Kiss That Chapter summary generator Chapter 1325

Chapter 1325

Ellinor looked at Balfour, her face expressionless as she said, "Bro."

Balfour was visibly shocked, and his hands began to tremble with excitement. "Ellinor, say it again; I didn't catch it."

Ellinor seemed a bit aloof. She furrowed her eyebrows, but she fulfilled his wish nonetheless.

"Bro, I wanna eat some cream puffs."

Balfour was so touched that his eyes welled up. "Alright, I'll get someone to buy them right away."

Ellinor obediently nodded. "Hmm, I'm also a bit thirsty. I want some water."

Balfour immediately rose to his feet. "Alright, I'll get you some right now."

He turned to face the hospital room, which they had just moved into, and realized that it had no water.

Balfour habitually ordered Quinton to fetch some water, only to realize that Quinton had gone to handle the hospital admission procedures and had not yet returned.

“Ellinor, wait a moment! There’s no water dispenser here; I’ll have Byran fetch a cup from somewhere else.”

Ellinor obediently responded.

Balfour took the water jug and exited the room, initially intending to send Byran, whom he had just dismissed, to fetch water. However, he realized that Byran was not outside the room and had disappeared.

Ellinor was still thirsty.

Balfour looked back at Ellinor lying in bed, feeling a bit uneasy. But recalling what she had just said, he thought she must have come to terms with things and wouldn’t do anything rash.

So, he closed the door to the room, took the jug, and briskly walked to the hospital’s water dispenser.

Unexpectedly, he ran into an acquaintance right at the entrance of the water room.

“Mr. Howard, which room is Ellinor in?”

Sophia was looking through each hospital room in the corridor. After seeing Balfour, she immediately went up to him.

Upon seeing this cunning woman, Balfour frowned warily. “How did you know she’s in the hospital?”

Sophia chuckled bitterly while explaining, “I went looking for Ellinor this afternoon. After being chased away by you, the more I thought about it, the more I felt that I should tell Ellinor about Theo. I went to your house again in the evening, but even before I could knock, I saw your car zoom out! I asked your butler, and he said that Ellinor wasn’t home and had gone to the hospital.

I guessed she must have been taken to the nearest hospital, so I came over. How's Ellinor now? Is she okay?"

Balfour squinted his eyes. "Quit pretending."

Sophia looked innocent. "Mr. Howard, what do you mean? How am I pretending?"

Balfour said coldly, "Don't you know why Ellinor was suddenly stressed out and taken to the hospital? Wasn't your intention in coming to our house this afternoon to upset her? I've already asked our servants! They said Ellinor got upset after seeing the news of Theo's accident on the leaflets blown into the yard. Ms. Sophia, do you think everyone is a fool? No one would distribute leaflets near our home unless they had an ulterior motive.

And the Blanchet family hasn't even made this matter public. Who else could have made those leaflets but you?

"The Kiss That Sparked it All ( Ellinor )" A romance novel or romantic novel

The Kiss That Online novel reading Chapter 1326

Chapter 1326

Sophia put on a surprised face and asked, "Do you have any proof? Without evidence, you can't just accuse me! I just wanted to see Ellinor. Theo is long gone, and as his long-time friend, I wanted to see his woman and child."

She even pretended to cry.

Balfour wasn't swayed by her tears. He was in a hurry to see Ellinor and didn't want to waste time on Sophia. "Enough. You're not welcome here, and Ellinor doesn't want to see you either."

Sophia, seeing that Balfour didn't give a damn about her feelings, shot back. "Mr. Howard, what's your deal with Ellinor? What gives you the right to speak for her and prevent me from seeing her?"

Balfour replied coldly, "I have every right. As for my relationship with Ellinor, that's none of your business, and I'm not going to tell you!"

With that, he stormed off into the water room.

He thought Sophia would follow him in and continue her rant, but she didn't.

He quickly filled a jug with water and didn't see Sophia in the hallway when he came out.

Without giving it a second thought, Balfour hurried back to Ellinor's room.

But Ellinor was no longer in the bed; only the blanket was left.

Balfour's pupils suddenly shrank. He dropped the jug and quickly called the hospital, demanding they seal off the exit and find Ellinor..

However, Ellinor had already left the hospital.

She was still in her hospital gown. Having left in such a hurry, she didn't have time to change.

She hid at a crossroads far from the hospital, pulled out her cell phone, and was about to call Chase when a red sports car pulled up in front of her.

Ellinor was on alert. She was worried it was Balfour's people trying to take her back, so she instinctively started backing away.

It wasn't until the car's window slowly rolled down and Sophia's alluring face appeared that she realized it wasn't Balfour's people.

"Ellinor, get in. I'll take you to Theo!"

Confirming it wasn't Balfour's people, Ellinor relaxed a bit. But she didn't trust Sophia.

Sophia knew she was on guard, so she explained, "I know you probably want to call your friends Chase or Ida to pick you up, right? But they won't take you. They'll only send you back to the hospital.

They knew about Theo's situation long ago, but like Balfour, they kept it from you. How could they possibly take you to Theo?"

Ellinor frowned slightly. "Why would you take me then?"

"I want to take you because, like you, I can't believe Theo is just gone. I want to go to the crime scene and look for clues. I'm not familiar with this place, and there are many words and phrases here I can't understand. With you, we might be more efficient."

As Ellinor was staring at Sophia, she heard Byran calling.

"Ellinor! Come back! Don't wander off! Come back!"

Crap! If she didn't get in the car now, she might get dragged back to the hospital.

She quickly turned to see Býran chasing after her. Ellinor didn't have time to think; she hurriedly opened Sophia's car door and got in.

Being pregnant slowed her down significantly, and Byran was almost on her. Luckily, Sophia was quick enough to step on the gas and leave Byran in the dust.

"The Kiss That Sparked it All ( Ellinor )" A romance novel or romantic novel

The Kiss That Sparked it Free online chapter summaries 1327

Chapter 1327

In the car, Ellinor sat quietly, not saying a word.

Sophia turned to look at her. "Ellinor, why so quiet all of a sudden? Don't you want to know where I'm taking you?"

Ellinor stared straight ahead, not looking at Sophia. "Didn't you already tell me? We're heading to the crime scene to look for clues." Sophia curiously asked, "Aren't you scared?"

Ellinor's face was expressionless. "If you're scared, get out of the car and give me the keys and the address. I'll go by myself." –

Sophia paused for a moment. "Of course I'm not scared. I hope Theo's still alive and that the body isn't his. For that, I'm not afraid of anything."

"Then stop the chitchat and focus on driving."

Sophia fell silent.

Sophia sneaked a glance at Ellinor's ballooning belly. She seemed to have stopped considering her own body and the baby inside. For Theo, she was really prepared to give everything.

It seemed that Theo was still in Ellinor's heart.

Sophia had already guessed that Ellinor would take the opportunity to flee the hospital when Balfour went to fetch water, so she purposely went to chat with Balfour to buy time for Ellinor.

Knowing that Ellinor had just learned about Theo's accident and must be in a mess now, Sophia decided not to talk to her anymore. She quietly drove the car and sped towards the abandoned factory in the suburbs.

C

In the suburbs, near a factory that had been bombed into ruins.

Seeing the mess, one could imagine the power of the explosion.

After getting out of the car, Ellinor looked at the ruins in front of her under the moonlight. All the possibilities she had imagined about Theo possibly still being alive were overthrown at this moment.

If Theo was really near this abandoned factory, his chances of survival were very slim.

"Are you sure Theo really came here? Even if his car and ID were found here, it doesn't prove he was here himself." Ellinor asked Sophia.

"Ellinor, I also hope Theo didn't come here. But the police pulled up road surveillance footage, confirming Theo was in the car. He even got out of the car at the service area for a rest."

Ellinor frowned. "Have the police figured out what happened? Why did Theo suddenly come to this desolate place?"

Even if Balfour's explanation was correct and Theo's half-brothers were up to no good, Theo was too smart to come here.

Sophia shook her head. "No one knows why Theo would come here. Now the police have only found Theo's ID and a blown-up phone on a body that was blown beyond recognition. The cause of the explosion is still under investigation. During the day, the police will come here to investigate; we can only come in at night.”

Ellinor was silent for a long time. It turned out that Theo hadn't replied to her messages in the past few days because he had an accident.

Her heart hurt so much that she could hardly breathe.

But now wasn't the time for heartache. She needed to find clues as soon as possible. If he had indeed been murdered, then she absolutely couldn't let the murderer get away with it. She had to avenge her unborn child's father's death.

Ellinor took a deep breath, slowly walked towards the ruins, turned on her phone's flashlight for illumination, and began to look for clues.

The Kiss That Read books online for free Chapter 1328

Chapter 1328

Sophia also flicked on her phone's flashlight and walked over to Ellinor, asking in a slightly lost tone, “Ellinor, what are we supposed to do now?”

Ellinor was scanning the surroundings intently and replied calmly, “We start searching. Look around for any suspicious items that might have been left behind.”

Sophia nodded in agreement and then looked around at the pitch-black environment.

“But this place is so huge; how are we possibly going to search it all? Plus, the cops already searched the place during the daytime; there probably won't be any suspicious items left.”

Ellinor thought Sophia was talking nonsense. Hadn't she thought this through before bringing her here? Wouldn't it be more productive to use this time to look for clues instead of talking?

Ignoring Sophia, Ellinor bent down to rummage through the rubble of the destroyed building and picked up a reflective item. It turned out to be a piece of scrap metal, which she promptly discarded and continued her search.

Because of her pregnancy, bending over to search was exhausting and made her unstable. Only when she could no longer bear it did she straighten up to take a break. It was at this moment that she heard the voices of two men coming from not too far away.

“Boss, the cops have sealed off this abandoned factory. If you dropped something here after that big explosion, it’s nearly impossible to find it. I suggest we give up and stop looking.”

“Enough with the chatter! Give me the flashlight!”

Ellinor heard the footsteps getting closer and reacted quickly. She swiftly pulled Sophia behind a pillar that had not been completely destroyed.

Sophia was startled, but she quickly calmed down and also heard the conversation between the two men.

“Boss! It’s dark, even with a flashlight. We can’t see clearly; we should stop looking.”

“If you keep talking, you’re out!”

“Okay, I’ll shut up.”

They were hiding in a concealed spot, so Ellinor could not see the men’s faces, but their voices sounded familiar. She felt like she had heard them somewhere.

Just as she was trying to recall, Sophia nudged her and whispered, “Ellinor, could they be the bad guys who hurt Theo?”

Ellinor gave Sophia a cautionary look, signaling her to keep quiet.

The place was too quiet; any noise could give them away.

Sophia promptly nodded and covered her mouth.

The two men seemed to be there for the same reason as them. They were without a doubt looking for something.

Ellinor observed the two men from the shadows, realizing that if she could follow them quietly, she could possibly find some clues.

However, things did not go as planned. They were discovered!

One of the men, a chubby one, suddenly said alertly, "Boss, look! There seems to be a red car parked over there."

The man who had been searching through the debris with a flashlight straightened up and followed the direction indicated by the chubby guy, finding the red sports car.

"Oh crap! Someone's here! Find them!"

"Yes, Boss!"

The two men immediately switched from searching for items to searching for people and began sweeping their flashlights all around.

Ellinor instinctively tightened her grip on Sophia's wrist, keeping a keen eye on the surroundings, ready to make a run for it.

Turned out that Sophia had forgotten to turn off her phone's flashlight, and the reflection it cast on the car caught the chubby man's attention.

Ellinor had assumed that, given Sophia's age, she would be more composed in dealing with situations. She didn't expect their cover to be blown due to her carelessness.

"Who's hiding there? Come out!"

"Come out!"

"The Kiss That Sparked it All ( Ellinor )" A romance novel or romantic novel

The Kiss That Online chapter summaries Chapter 1329

Chapter 1329

The two men had already found their hiding place.

Ellinor was about to bolt with Sophia in tow, but they didn't even manage to take a step.

Sophia held her hand tight, refusing to run.

Frowning, Ellinor turned back and said urgently, "What are you doing? Run!"

But Sophia still held on to Ellinor, shaking her head.

"Ellinor, let's not run. You're pregnant, we'd never outrun them."

Ellinor was at a loss for words. "So what do you suggest we do?"

While Ellinor was still surprised, Sophia led her out in front of the two men.

She feigned ignorance and said, "Sorry, we were just passing by. We didn't mean to disturb you guys. We apologize if we caused any inconvenience. If there's nothing else, we'll leave you to your search."

The chubby one blocked their way and looked them up and down. "Just passing by? You two ladies just happen to be passing by in the middle of the night?"

"Uh... we..."

"We really had to use the bathroom and couldn't find one on our way. So we came to this secluded place. We didn't expect anyone to be here." Ellinor replied for Sophia, but she kept her head down, avoiding eye contact with the men.

The bathroom?

The fat man let out a mocking laugh when he heard this excuse.

The skinny man, however, approached Ellinor and said coldly, "You, look up."

Ellinor didn't move.

The skinny man seemed impatient. He drew a gun from his waist and pointed it at her chin, forcing her to look up.

As the man saw Ellinor's face, she also saw his.

The tall and thin man had silver-gray hair, a piercing in his left ear, and a cold, wicked look in his eyes.

He held the gun to Ellinor's chin with one hand and had a flashlight in the other, shining it on her face. He looked at her for a while and then said with a smile, "So it's you! Theo's well-hidden wife."

Ellinor didn't understand why the man with the silver hair would call her that. She simply said, "Sir, you have the wrong person. I'm not Theo's wife"

The man with the silver-gray hair jabbed her harder with the gun. "Stop pretending! I know you, you're his wife."

Ellinor said calmly, "You're mistaken. I'm not his wife. She is! She's the one who married Theo. If you have any grudges, you should take them up with her"

As she spoke, she pointed at Sophia, standing next to her.

Sophia was taken aback and then looked resentful. "Ellinor, how could you at a time like this.__?"

In fact, from the moment Sophia brought her out, Ellinor remembered who this man with the silver-gray hair was.

When she first met Theo, she was once kidnapped.

The man who orchestrated that kidnapping was this very man with the silver-gray hair and the earring in his left ear.

"The Kiss That Sparked it All ( Ellinor )" A romance novel or romantic novel

The Kiss Free ebook reading Chapter 1330

Looked like this trouble was his doing again.

Chapter 1330

The silver-haired man glanced at Sophia standing by the side and was seemingly completely uninterested. He then shifted his gaze back toward Ellinor.

The barrel of the gun moved from Ellinor's chin to her big, round belly, giving it a gentle poke.

“It doesn’t matter if you guys are married or not, what matters is who Theo really fancies. And I’m quite interested in the kid in your belly. So I don’t need her, only you. Just come along with us nicely.”

After saying that, he jerked his chin in a certain direction, indicating that Ellinor should walk over.

With the gun pointing at her, Ellinor had no choice but to comply.

Sophia asked, Wait! Where are you taking Ellinor?”

The silver-haired man responded, “None of your business! Stop being so nosy!”

Sophia furrowed her brows. “But...”

The fat man looked at Sophia uneasily. “Boss? Are we really letting this woman go? What if she exposes us to the cops?”

The silver-haired man squinted. “If we kidnap her, we’ll be asking for trouble. Thaddeus’ daughter should know the rules of the underworld. She won’t expose us to the cops because of her father’s reputation in the underworld.”

The fat man looked at Sophia in shock and took a fearful step back. “She... She is Thaddeus’ daughter?”

The silver-haired man kicked the fat man. “Coward! What are you hesitating for? Go take this pregnant woman away.”

In the end, Sophia was left in the ruins. The two men dragged Ellinor into a van and drove away.

Sophia stood there, watching the van speed off, as her worried face quickly turned into a smug smile. She turned around, got into her sports car, and drove off.

Late at night.

Several cars were parked outside the Blanchet family’s house, all from the Howard family.

Balfour got out of the last black car and personally rang the Blanchet family's doorbell.

If it weren't for Ellinor, he wouldn't come to the Blanchet family's house.

Byran also came along.

After talking to the Blanchet family's butler through the video doorbell, the Blanchet family's front door opened.

A servant came to greet them and led them in.

Upon entering the Blanchet family's hall, only Theo's sister, Veronica, was waiting for them.

Perhaps due to the recent tragedy, the atmosphere in the Blanchet family's home use was noticeably low.

[illegible]

Veronica looked haggard. She was in a poor mental state and had a hoarse voice. She asked unhappily, “What are you two doing at my house in the middle of the night? Are you here to laugh at us?”

Balfour did not argue with her and directly asked, “Ms. Blanchet, has Ellinor been to your house?”

Upon hearing the name Ellinor, Veronica looked at them in shock. "Ellinor? She didn't come here today! What happened to her?" Balfour looked up at the second floor, seemingly doubting Veronica, but her expression didn't seem like she was lying.

“She hasn’t come back, nor has she contacted you?”

"The Kiss That Sparked it All ( Ellinor )" A romance novel or romantic novel