

The Kiss 61

Chapter 61

Bartlett hurried over with a middle aged man carrying a medical kit, "Theo, my personal doctor just arrived. Why not have him take a look at Ellinor first?"

"No need for the fuss." Theo, holding Ellinor, bypassed Bartlett directly

Bartlett, knowing Ellinor didn't want to go to the hospital, followed to try to persuade them

But Collin turned around and stopped him, 'Mr. Rex you don't need to worry about Ellinor. Mr. Blanchet has already called an ambulance. It's outside

An ambulance Bartlett narrowed his eyes, looking thoughtfully at the sight of Theo carrying Ellinor away, and said no more

Inside the ambulance, Ellinor lay on the stretcher, her face looking even worse.

Her pale face wasn't because her physical discomfort had intensified, but because of her complicated emotions

"Superior Sir, I thank you! For taking an ambulance to the hospital during my period, I must be one of a kind in Greenhoven!"

The man sitting next to her stretcher, due to his tall stature, sat in the vehicle with his long legs bent, occasionally bumping his head on the roof

Theo, who had followed the ambulance as family, gave Ellinor a disapproving glance, "Are you still not satisfied? You're not a kid anymore. Can't you remember your own menstrual cycle?"

His tone was displeased, like an adult scolding a careless child

Ellinor frowned, her pale face showing a bit of grievance, she complained. "Of course I remember my cycle, just don't know why it came early this month, and it's suddenly so painful I never get cramps..."

As a man. Theo didn't quite understand or could empathize with women's menstrual issues.

Ellinor's face was as white as a sheet, and it was obvious that the pain was no joke.

Theo checked Ellinor's sweaty forehead, then reached up to rub her hair, "Hmm, at least you had the sense to message me when you're not feeling well. That's worth some praise"

His condescending manner was like petting a grumpy but powerless sick kitten!

With his warm and rough palm on her head, Ellinor was taken aback, feeling a bit awkward...

Hehe, she didn't care about his praise at all!

She's just doing her job, playing the role of his wife for three months!

If it wasn't for her mom's painting today, she wouldn't have agreed to go to the exhibition with Bartlett.

The moment she planned to go to the exhibition with Bartlett, she sent a text to Theo informing him.

As Theo had said, for the next three months, he wouldn't tolerate any misunderstandings about him being unfaithful.

Since Bartlett is a man and has shown interest in her, it's even more necessary to inform Theo to avoid any unnecessary misunderstandings

About Byran, Ellinor had noticed from the beginning that he was following her, but she didn't mind!

What she didn't expect was her body's sudden condition, or that Byran would go to such lengths to bring Veronica and Marissa to catch her cheating!

In the ambulance, two young nurses were sneaking peeks at Theo....

"Look, he's so handsome and so good to his girlfriend! What a godly boyfriend!"

"His girlfriend gets cramps and he's so nervous he calls an ambulance! My boyfriend only knows how to play video games!"

Ellinor looked at Theo, the Superior Sir, with confusion. A godly boyfriend?

She'd love to hand this hot potato of a boyfriend over to them for free!

Chapter 62

In the emergency room of the hospital, the emergency doctor checked Ellinor's lower abdomen and asked her about some related symptoms, then called for a senior doctor to treat her.

The senior doctor frowned, then turned to the family members nearby, "Has she been popping a lot of supplements lately?"

Theo had been rarely home, so he didn't have a clue about Ellinor's diet

Collin stepped up and said, "Mr. Blanchet, according to our butler, Marissa has been cooking nutritious soups for Ms Mendoza three times a day. Could that be the problem?"

The senior doctor shook his head after hearing this, "She's young and healthy, there's no need for her to overdose on supplements. Too much of a good thing can cause discomfort, even early periods. Her nosebleed and menstrual pain are the result of an overdose of supplements!"

Theo asked. "So what should we do now?"

The senior doctor said, "No biggie! Just stop the supplements, I'll prescribe her some painkillers. She should drink more water and watch her diet when she gets home"

Collin went to the pharmacy to get the medicine.

Ellinor tried to sit up and weakly reached out to grab her shoes on the floor...

Despite trying her best to put on her shoes, she just didn't have the energy

"Do you need a hand?" Theo watched her and asked with a slight smile.

Ellinor didn't look up, it's okay, I can do it myself..."

Despite her firm words, she was indeed weak, her hands had no strength.

Just as she was worrying, a large hand reached over, gently adjusted her shoes for her, and then helped her put them on.

Ellinor looked up and saw Theo's head, she was surprised. This usually arrogant guy was actually helping her put on shoes?

Collin came back with the medicine and was also stunned to see this sight. Mr. Blanchet actually helped someone put on shoes, it was quite a shock.

Theo's movements were efficient yet gentle. He helped Ellinor put on her shoes.

He looked at her petite feet, not sure if her feet were too small or his hands were too large.

Theo started, "Those supplements that grandma makes you eat, you just eat them all? Don't you ever refuse?"

Ellinor frowned, "Grandma means well, she works hard to make soup for me, how could I refuse? You're hardly ever home, if you were, you could share the burden with me, then I wouldn't have to eat it all by myself"

Theo looked at her, his eyes slightly narrowed. "You wish I could come home for meals every day?"

Ellinor thought for a moment, then shook her head seriously, "You better not come home, it's easier for me to handle grandma alone. If you're home, I have to act affectionately with you, which makes me really uncomfortable!"

Theo's face suddenly darkened, he put her foot that he had just put the shoe on heavily on the ground, "Walk by yourself!"

Ellinor was startled, why did he suddenly get so angry? She's a patient now!

Back at the Blanchet family's house, Marissa looked at her guiltily, "Ellinor, it's all my fault. I thought giving you more supplements would be good for your health, I didn't expect it to make your period so painful!"

Ellinor leaned against the bed head, smiled, and shook her head to comfort Marissa, "Grandma, I'm fine."

Chapter 63

"Your face is looking awfully pale, and you're still saying you're fine?" Marissa was worried sick. She turned to her grandson. "Theo, go massage Ellinor's belly"

Theo grimaced

Ellinor too stiffened up, waving her hand, it's okay! Grandma, I've already taken some painkillers I'm feeling much better

Manssa disagreed, "If you're already feeling better, then him massaging your belly should make you pain-free"

"Grandma Ellinor didn't know how to politely refuse, so she looked at Theo, hoping he'd say something

Theo smiled faintly at her awkwardness,

"Don't worry, grandma. I'll get someone to bring her a heat pad."

Marissa wasn't happy. "How could a heat pad compare to her husband's massage?"

Neither Theo nor Ellinor had anything to say to that.

They looked at each other, both clearly reluctant...

Marissa picked up on something. "Theo, Ellinor, why are you two acting so stuffy? You don't seem intimate at all. Haven't you slept together yet?"

Ellinor was taken aback, then forced a laugh, "We have! We've slept together several times, grandma!"

Theo squinted at Ellinor, who was dead serious, and smiled, "That's night, several times"

Marissa frowned, "You're already living together as husband and wife, why are you still shy? Theo, what are you waiting for? Go take care of your wife!"

Under grandma's supervision, Theo went over and sat next to Ellinor. He leaned in and whispered in her ear, "I'm sorry"

As he spoke, his hand was already on her painful lower abdomen....

The belly is an animal's most vulnerable spot, only the most intimate and trusted people are shown this side, like dogs and cats rolling over to show their belly, not minding to show their weakness

But her relationship with Theo wasn't quite that close, so Ellinor tensed up and felt uneasy.

She blushed out of sheer embarrassment but still forced a smile at Marissa

Marissa watched as her grandson gave her granddaughter-in-law a belly rub, then asked, "Ellinor, feeling better?"

Ellinor blushed and nodded, "Yes, much, much better!"

Marissa was satisfied, "Good, your face is looking better than before. I guess this method works! Theo, keep doing this for Ellinor, don't go anywhere tonight, just stay home and keep her company"

"Don't worry, grandma, I will," Theo replied with a smile.

Marissa gave a few more instructions before leaving

Once grandma was gone, Ellinor's tension eased up, but the warmth on her belly caused her to blush again, "Ahem, Superior Sir, grandma's gone, you can stop now!"

Theo's hand was still on her belly, not stopping. He raised an eyebrow at her, "If this method really works, I don't mind continuing to massage for you."

Ellinor was embarrassed, "No, no need

Theo looked at her with a sly smile, "What, are you shy?"

Ellinor frowned glaring at his handsome face, said indignantly, "I'm not shy!"

Theo mocked her, nodding, "Yeah, you weren't shy when you loudly told grandma we've slept together several times."

Ellinor was mortified, "Theo!"

Chapter 64

Watching Ellinor blush in embarrassment. Theo's smirk grew wider "Ellinor, if you want to be a good wife, you gotta learn to call your husband 'honey' "Call you 'honey?" Ellinor thought about his suggestion, then scoffed, "Nah, I think I'd get goosebumps!

Not willing huh?

Theo's face darkened, his hand on her stomach pressing down harder

Ellinor suddenly felt uncomfortable, she grimaced, "Ouch, be gentle!"

Because of her cramps, her voice was weak. The phrase be gentle in this room, where only the two of them were, seemed rather suggestive.

Both froze, looking at each other with stiff expressions.

After a moment of silence. Theo chuckled, "How gentle do you want me to be, hmm?"

His hand really did lighten up, tickling her stomach like a playful tease....

Ellinor felt ticklish and was sure this man was just messing with her. Annoyed, she snapped, "Hmph, you better take your hand off me and back off!"

Hand?

Theo leaned closer to her, "What are you so nervous about? Blushing like that?"

Ellinor put her hand on his chest, trying to push him away. "I'm not nervous, I'm just, um....

Hot

That word added another layer of suggestion to the already charged atmosphere.

hot..."

She was uncomfortable, her face red from being teased, she bit her lip nervously Her long lashes cast shadows on her large, teary eyes...

The usually careless Ellinor now looked so vulnerable, Theo's eyes softened, his throat suddenly dry.

Fine, no more teasing!

He gave her a deep look, pulled his hand back and handed her a glass of water from the bedside table, "Have it."

Ellinor took the water, "Thanks"

Theo got up and went to the bathroom.

Ellinor sighed in relief, today Theo was acting a bit off...

Meanwhile, at the front door of the Blanchet family home.

Veronica sat in her pink sports car, growing more and more irritated, and banged the steering wheel in frustration.

After a failed scheme, she had been scolded by her grandmother. In a bad mood, she went for a drive.

But now, she didn't dare to go home. Seeing her brother's car in the yard, she was scared, scared of being scolded again....

That damn Ellinor was her nightmare!

Ever since Ellinor married into their family, she felt like she was always in trouble. Even her doting grandmother was now constantly displeased with her, always urging her to learn from Ellinor

Learn what from Ellinor? Her poverty?

As Veronica was feeling restless, she noticed a short, plump man sneaking around their front door...

Who was this?

Veronica got out of the car, watched for a moment, then walked over and asked, "Who are you? What are you doing loitering around our house?"

Chapter 65

Morgan jumped a bit, fumbling to explain, "Um... this is the Blanchet home, right? I was looking for Mrs. Blanchet

You're looking for Ellinor?

Just hearing Ellinor's name annoys me now Veronica thought, studying Morgan with a disdainful look "What do you want with her?"

Morgan sized up Veronica. From head to toe, she was wearing limited edition designer brands. She was pretty, with a haughty air about her. She looked like a spoiled rich girl....

So, he made a guess, "Miss, you said this is your house? Could it be you're Mrs. Blanchet?"

Veronica furrowed her brows, realizing he had no idea who her brother's wife was. She didn't bother explaining, instead questioning, "And what if I am! What do you want with Mrs Blanchet?

Morgan, thinking he had found the right person, immediately put on a fawning smile, 'Mrs. Blanchet, there's some gossip about Mr. Blanchet that I thought you might be interested in. Do you have time for a chat?'

Gossip about my brother? Veronica was curious and puzzled. After a moment of thought, she nodded, "Follow my car. Let's talk somewhere else"

Morgan hopped into his car and followed Veronica's pink sports car to a dessert shop.

Inside the shop, Morgan placed several photos on the table and slid them toward Veronica

The photos were of Theo and Ellinor together. Veronica looked uninterested, "What's the meaning of showing me these?"

Morgan was puzzled by Veronica's calm reaction, "Mrs. Blanchet, this woman is Ellinor, your husband's mistress!"

Veronica was taken aback, "A mistress?"

So this fat guy had misunderstood

Morgan continued, "This woman is using her youth and beauty to seduce Mr. Blanchet. It may disrupt your relationship in the future. I can help you get rid of her, but after the job's done, I hope you can do me a small favor"

Veronica, who was just thinking about how to retaliate against Ellinor, was intrigued, "What favor?"

Morgan smiled, "It's a small favor. No big deal for someone like you, Mrs. Blanchet!"

After hearing Morgan's intention, Veronica thought it was no big deal, "Deal. If you can get rid of this woman named Ellinor and make my brother.. ahem, my 'husband' despise her completely, I'll make sure he invests in your Nexus Industries project!"

With the terms settled, Morgan was overjoyed, "Mrs. Blanchet, you're truly straightforward! Just wait for the good news! Within a week, I'll make sure Mr. Blanchet completely despises Ellinor!"

After Morgan left, Veronica sat in the dessert shop for a while longer, sipping her drink with anticipation.

Ellinor, let's see if you can escape this time!

The next morning.

Theo unusually stayed home for breakfast.

At the breakfast table, Ellinor was given a lot of attention. Marissa, worried about her recovery, offered to have Theo feed her.

Ellinor tried to refuse, but Manssa insisted

Expecting the aloof man to refuse, she was surprised when he just smiled mysteriously and went ahead, cutting the fried egg into bite-sized pieces and feeding her.

So cheesy!

She couldn't refuse in front of Marissa. So she had to open her mouth and eat, all while maintaining a smile.

It wasn't until her phone rang, like a lifesaver, that she had an excuse to leave the table. She quickly answered the call in her room.

It was the principal of Creston University on the line.

Chapter 66

Since they haven't seen each other for a while, the principal of Creston University made small talk with Ellinor for a while before getting to the point,

"Ellinor, your graduation ceremony is next Monday. As one of our outstanding graduates, you need to bring your parents to the ceremony. The school hopes that you and your parents could give a speech on stage, sharing your learning experiences"

Ellinor politely declined. I'm really sorry, Sir, but I don't have parents"

No parents? What are you talking about? Your file says your father and stepmother are both alive!*

"Sir "

Over the phone, someone seemed to be calling for the principal. The principal responded, then hurriedly said, "Ellinor, remember to bring your parents early on Monday. Don't be late!"

With that, the principal hung up.

Ellinor was a bit annoyed. Although she technically had parents, they might as well not exist.

From a young age, Arnold had been hands-off with her. As a father, he never attended her parent-teacher meetings, and her stepmother, Tracy Mendoza, was even less likely to make an appearance for her sake.

But the principal always thought of her as his excellent student, and she didn't want to let him down.

After some thought, Ellinor decided to try calling Arnold, Dad, are you available next Monday?

Over the phone, Arnold was enjoying breakfast with Tracy and her daughter. "Next Monday? That's the day your sister is signing a contract with a new company live online. Tracy and I need to dress up and support your sister!"

Ellinor was surprised, "Sis is signing with a new company? Seems like her career wasn't affected by the negative news last time!,

Arnold laughed happily, "Yes! The whole thing was a misunderstanding. The girl in the video was not your sister but an actress who had surgery to look like her. Your sister was maliciously slandered, but thank goodness Auntie Tracy had a way to reveal the truth and clear her name. Moreover, because of the attention the news brought, a big agency is chasing to sign her!"

Ellinor smiled faintly. Tracy really knew how to get things done, whitewashing her daughter, Sheila Mendoza.

Arnold asked, "Ellinor, why did you ask if I was available next Monday? What's up?"

Thinking of the principal's instructions, Ellinor hesitated, then said, "Monday is my graduation ceremony. The school asked me to bring my parents. So, I wanted to ask if you could

Arnold cut her off before she could finish, "Ellinor, I've always been at ease about your studies, so I won't go to your graduation. Your sister's signing ceremony is more important, as it has to do with her future career."

The answer was expected. Ellinor laughed sardonically, "Alright, I got it. Bye, Dad."

Just after hanging up, Sheila sent several messages in a row: "What? You want Dad to attend your graduation?"

"Too bad, I'm the most important daughter in Dad's heart! What's the point of your good grades? Dad doesn't care!"

"Oh, and I have some great news. I'm about to sign with the biggest film and television company in the world. They represent international superstars. I'm not far from being one myself! Dad told me he's proud of me and even bought me lots of gifts!"

Sheila then sent a picture of several brand-new designer bags.

Ellinor smiled faintly, replying, "Good luck!"

Without the jealous response she hoped for from Ellinor, Sheila's boasting felt like punching cotton. She sent another message, "Ellinor, no matter how hard you try, you'll always be an ordinary illegitimate child! Don't even dream of surpassing me, you're not worthy!"

Ellinor didn't care about Sheila's shallow boasting and arrogance. What she cared more about was how to explain to the principal about the absence of her parents at Monday's graduation ceremony...

Just then, Theo walked in, opened the wardrobe, and took out a suit jacket.

"Come here"

Hearing his commanding tone, Ellinor frowned, "What for?"

Theo said, "Help me tie this tie!"

Ellinor was speechless

If it weren't for her previous promise to play the role of his wife, she wouldn't play along with him!

She got up, walked over, and put a delicate tie around Theo's neck...

He was too tall, she had to stand on her toes to barely reach, and because of the height difference, her movements looked clumsy and uncomfortable.

Chapter 67

Theo was staring at her with a smirk.

It took Ellinor quite an effort to tie Theo's tie. She glared at him and suddenly a lightbulb went off in her head, "Superior Sir, are you available next Monday?"

"No." The man answered quickly, almost coldly

Ellinor pouted and didn't say anything else, but she purposely inessed up his tie and walked away.

The man frowned and fixed his tre himself. What? Is something happening on Monday?"

Ellinor turned to look at Theo After thinking about it, even if Theo was free, what role would he play at her graduation ceremony?

Plus, this man was too high-profile, it would inevitably attract unnecessary attention!

"Never mind, just asking!" She gave up.

Theo didn't ask any further. He walked up to her, lifted her chin, and asked from above, 'Is your stomach still hurting?"

Ellinor glared at him, "Thanks for caring, sir, I'm fine now!"

"Good, just don't die in my house He casually finished, let go of her pointed chin, put his sult jacket on his arm, and walked away

Ellinor waved her fist at the man's tall figure. Theo really deserved a punch!

Later, Ellinor thought of Marissa. If she asked, her grandmother would probably agree to accompany her to the graduation ceremony

But grandmother was old and the graduation ceremony would be long and boring, it didn't seem right to bother her..

Forget it, she'll just go by herself when the time comes!

Monday

The principal of Creston University was giving the opening speech at the auditorium...

For today's graduation ceremony, each department selected a top student, who was accompanied by the ir parents.

Each parent was proud of their child.

But Ellinor stood alone, out of place

At this moment, in the counseling office upstairs.

The counselor said in a worried tone. "Mr. Blanchet, your sister has failed for the seventh time since she enrolled. If this continues, whether she can graduate smoothly is a problem!"

Veronica was summoned for being a slacker again.

Theo sat on the sofa in the counseling office, supporting his forehead with one hand, no longer wanting to deal with his sister.

He glanced down and saw Ellinor standing on the stage.

"What's going on downstairs?"

The counselor came over and looked down, "Mr. Blanchet, it's the graduation ceremony for the seniors! The students on the stage are the top students selected by each department. Today, they attend the graduation ceremony with their parents and give graduation speeches."

Speaking of which, the counselor also noticed Ellinor standing alone on the stage, "Eh? Why is Ellinor standing alone? She was the top scorer in the college entrance exam. The principal's favorite student. Why didn't her parents come?"

Theo squinted, thinking back to a few days ago when Ellinor asked him if he was available on Monday. Was it because of this graduation ceremony?

The counselor sighed again, "I can't believe her parents don't even cherish such an excellent girl!"

Theo asked, 'Counselor, do you think a husband counts as a guardian?'

The counselor was taken aback, "Mr. Blanchet, what did you say?"

Chapter 68

On the stage, Yvette, the honor student from the Music Department of Creston University, was giving her graduation speech with her father by her side.

Overwhelmed by the memories of their four years in college, they were both on the verge of tears.

"Man, Yvette's dad looks so young! And so handsome!"

"Yvette is the most beautiful girl in our Creston University, no wonder with those good genes from her parents!"

"Wow, Yvette's dad just said he's going to donate three pianos to the music department! He's loaded!"

I'm so jealous of Yvette's life! She comes from a wealthy family, her parents adore her, she's pretty, and she's academically excellent too!

With her vanity fully stoked from all the compliments and envy pouring in from her classmates, Yvette stepped down from the podium with her head held high.

Backstage, she spotted Ellinor, waiting for her turn to take the stage.

By tradition, the last to go on stage was usually the most important person.

Yvette wasn't thrilled about this, but she didn't dare to protest as it was the principal's decision.

She decided to approach Ellinor and feigned surprise, 'Ellinor, you came all by yourself today?'

Ellinor nodded, "Yep"

Yvette put on a sympathetic face, "I heard from some classmates that you're an illegitimate child who was sent to live in the countryside. You had to work really hard to get into the city for school! It must've been really tough for you, being sent away at such a young age! Poor thing! I guess that's why you work so hard, because you don't have parents to depend on! Luckily, I don't have to work as hard as you do, my parents love me and they give me everything I want!"

Ellinor smiled, "Really? So you plan to rely on your parents after graduation?"

Yvette choked on her words, looking upset,

"Ellinor, I was just trying to show some concern, but you just have to be so prickly! Well, my dad was right, people who are pitiable often have despicable qualities!"

Hearing her name called by the emcee, Ellinor left Yvette on the spot and walks onto the stage

She thanked her alma mater and her teachers, reminisced about her college life, and talked about how she has grown...

The young woman on the stage, makeupfree, exudes calmness and confidence. Her humorous graduation speech was quite infectious, making the audience laugh and cry at the same time.

Not like those melodramatic speeches from the previous speakers, which only moved themselves.

Whispers began among the crowd....

"Ellinor sure lives up to her reputation as the top student, I really like her graduation speech!"

"Speaking of which, Ellinor is also one of the most beautiful girls in our school, albeit with a less privileged background compared to Yvette!"

"Real talk, Ellinor from the Math Department is the true genius here, and she's even prettier than Yvette!"

"Even if she's pretty and talented, isn't she still just an illegitimate child? Did you guys notice?"

She came alone today, no parents to accompany her!"

"I heard she was born to her dad and his mistress! Like father like daughter, I bet she's no angel in private!"

Yvette, who had returned to her seat among the students, feigned compassion and nudged her friend, "Oh my, you guys, don't be so harsh. Ellinor's already pitiful enough. Even if she did something 'desperate, it's all for survival, right?"

Her face showed sympathy, but inside, she was feeling pretty smug

Before college, Yvette was always the center of attention. But since she became classmates with Ellinor, she's always been overshadowed by the top student!

Now, she's finally found something that Ellinor couldn't beat her at – family background and social status!

Ellinor could never match up to her on these two points!

As Ellinor's speech continued, the auditorium suddenly went eerily quiet...

After a few minutes of silence, the students started whispering again...

"Did you see that? The man who just walked on stage is so handsome!"

"Oh my god! Who is that? I've never seen a man so handsome in real life!"

Chapter 69

"He's handsome and oozes confidence. Is he a specially invited guest of the school?"

Ellinor had just finished her speech when she felt all eyes on her. Curious, she turned around and was shocked to see Theo

Theo? What was he doing here?

Theo's gaze swept over Ellinor before he walked up to the microphone, adjusted its height, and spoke in his deep, captivating voice. "Hi everyone. I'm a family member of Ellinor's. I'm here today to express our gratitude towards Creston University for their education and care of Ellinor. I'm pressed for time so won't be saying much. I plan on making a donation to Creston University in Ellinor's name, a new laboratory building, to show our appreciation."

Ellinor Theo, are you okay?"

The auditorium was abuzz with surprise and shock.

Everyone was shell-shocked by this unexpected good news.

"Wow! He's a man of few words, but he just donated a building!"

"Such a handsome guy donating a building, is he Ellinor's dad?"

"He's here as a parent, so he must be Ellinor's brother. But they don't look alike at all!"

"He's too young to be her father, isn't he?"

The principal of Creston University excitedly stepped onto the stage, "Students, let's thank Ellinor's generous family and give a big round of applause for Ellinor and her family!"

Applause broke out, filling the room.

Yvette looked upset. Her pride was completely shattered, and once again, her limelight was stolen by Ellinor! In contrast, the three pianos her father had just pledged to donate seemed so insignificant!

Wasn't Ellinor an orphan with no one to care for her? Who was this handsome and generous man to her?

Meanwhile

A female student rushed into the freshman language class, "Veronica, big news! Your brother just donated a building to the school!"

Veronica, who had just been scolded by her brother for her studies, still had red eyes. But hearing the news, she was over the moon, "I knew it! Although my brother scolded me, he still cares about me! He donated a building to the school to make the teachers go easy on me in exams!"

The student awkwardly said, "Uh... I don't think your brother did it for you..."

Veronica didn't believe it and waved her off, "Stop kidding, if it's not for me, who else could it be for?"

The student regretfully said, "It's really not for you, it's for the senior Ellinor!"

Veronica's eyes widened in surprise, 'Ellinor? She's also in Creston University?!'

The student had an incredulous expression, "Ellinor is an outstanding figure in Creston University. She was the top scorer in the national higher education exam, a record that has yet to be broken! I heard that she didn't want to come to Creston University at first, but our principal personally persuaded her to come!"

"Right! Moran, the senior, has always been in love with Ellinor. He has been courting her for three years without success!"

The first piece of news made Veronica a little angry, but the last one was too much for her to take!

She liked Moran, but when he rejected her, he said he already liked someone else. She never expected that person to be Ellinor!

A classmate then asked. "Veronica, so your brother has two sisters? Is Ellinor your sister? Why does she have a different surname?"

Veronica answered impatiently, "Ellinor is not my brother's sister!"

Confused, the classmate asked, "Then who is she? Why did your brother attend her graduation ceremony as a parent? And even donated a building for her"

Veronica gritted her teeth, "She is..."

Chapter 70

'She's bitch!'

The girl was a bit awkward, not knowing why Veronica detested Ellinor so much Uhm Veronica, your family is really loaded, huh? You can just donate a building like it's nothing!"

Despite the Blanchet family always being low-key, everyone in school knew Veronica was a rich girl. But they had no clue she was part of the Blanchet family, and her brother was the Theo Blanchet!

Veronica was in no mood for flattery now. She asked, 'Is my brother still at school?'

The girl replied. "He should be in the principal's office discussing the building donation"

Veronica got up and stormed out of the classroom, pulling out her phone to call Morgan.

"Hey Weren't you supposed to make my brother, uh, I mean, my husband totally fed up with that woman Ellinor? It's been days! Where's your action?"

Morgan was also helpless, explaining,

"Mrs. Blanchet, to be frank, I've been staking out the Mendoza's place for days, but I haven't seen Ellinor. Can't make a move without her around! No idea where she's run off to

Upon hearing this, Veronica realized Morgan didn't know the whole story. Of course, he wouldn't find Ellinor if he was staking out the Mendoza's place because Ellinor doesn't live there!

I'll send you Ellinor's location later. Get on with it today!"*

Morgan was more than happy "If Mrs. Blanchet could lend me a helping hand, that would be awesome!"

She hung up, a dark resentment flashing in her eyes.

Ever since

Ellinor joined the Blanchet family, her grandma and brother didn't dote on her like before, and even looked at her unfavorably

Moreover, her ideal sister-in-law was not some country bumpkin like Ellinor, but Ms. Howard from the Howard family!

Ms. Howard from the Howard family was a well-bred lady who had always treated her well. Even for the sake of Ms. Howard, she had to drive that damned Ellinor out of the Blanchet family!

Principal's office.

The principal of Creston University invited Theo to his office and earnestly discussed the details of the building donation.

After everything was settled, the principal personally saw Mr. Blanchet out.

Ellinor was by Theo's side throughout, witnessing the whole donation process, which was beyond her comprehension.

After saying goodbye to the principal, she left with Theo.

The university corridor was very quiet at this moment.

Ellinor turned her face slightly, looked up at the tall and handsome Theo, and finally asked, "Superior Sir, why did you come to our school today?"

Theo, striding forward leisurely, glanced at her and said, "You asked me if I was free on Monday, right? It was for this graduation ceremony, wasn't it?"

Ellinor didn't deny it. "Yes, it was!"

"Why didn't you tell me everything then?"

"I thought about it, and decided it was too trivial to bother you with!"

Theo agreed and said softly. "To me, it really is a waste of time."

Ellinor was speechless. Yeah, she knew he would say that!

Theo then added, "But to you, the graduation ceremony is an important event in your life. At least for now, you're still my wife in name, I don't mind indulging you in such small matters."

Ellinor said, "But you didn't have to donate a building to show off your wealth, did you?"

The man's lips curled up in disdain, "You really think I did this for you? I just wanted to support the country's education and contribute to society. You were just a side note."

Ellinor rolled her eyes, "Ha, I see!"

He wanted to donate a building and so he did. Why did he have to do it in her name? Moreover, he had agreed with the principal that the building would be named after her once it was built!

So high-profile! It would be hard for her to distance herself from him in the future)

"Ellinor"