Wake up Eva! I startle awake at Ghost's worry, my hand instantly flies out to the side of the bed to find Cas but his spot is cold and unruffled. He hasn't come to bed yet. At first I'm a little disorientated. Instead of taking me down to the basement, Rowan led me upstairs. Turns out the room next to the new nursery is the old Alpha's bedroom which Rowan also had redecorated and the bedroom furniture moved up. It looks exactly like the basement except it's bigger and has windows, the moon light streaming into the room is what confuses me.

'What's wrong?' I ask her as I rub my stomach, I can feel the pup moving around and apparently she's on the move because right now she's kicking the hell out of my kidney.

'Something is wrong, you need to get to Selena or even Cas.' Now she mentions it, I can feel something pulling on my side, feeling around I can't feel anything but there is a definite pulling sensation.

'The pup?' I ask her as I pull myself up and struggle to my feet, as soon as I stand there is a gush of wetness, I can feel it warm and thick as it runs down my legs. Looking down I almost scream out when I notice the fluid that is running down my legs is tinged pink with blood.

'Move, now.' I nod my head as I slowly start to shuffle across the hard wood, I make slow progress as I try to contact Cas via the Pack link. He seems to have closed himself down though because I can feel him but there is like a fog blocking us, I can't seem to penetrate it no matter how much I try.

'Ahhhh!' I scream out in pain as I make it down the first set of stairs, the pain in my stomach has gotten worse. It's like a tightening that is also coupled with a clamping band wrapping itself around my stomach.

“Luna?” Francis’s voice sounds on my left as I lower myself to the step and clutch at the banister, “Luna, what’s happening?” I feel his hands. on my shoulders as I hunch over in pain and squeeze my eyes closed.

“Pup.” I manage to gasp out, “get Cas!” I feel another gush of something warm between my legs, it feels thicker and much warmer than before and I’m suddenly terrified to look.

“Stuart, go and get the Alpha. Ben go and wake Selena, go now.” I feel hands under my legs and at my back a split second before I’m lifted into the air, I push my face into Francis’s bare chest as another pain racks my b*dy.

“Francis, the blood.” Stuart sounds panic as he confirms the one thing I didn’t want to know, I can feel my heart rate beating a drum as Francis starts to carry me down the stairs.

“Shut it, go now!” Francis growls at him before I feel two bodies push past me and run down the stairs, “don’t worry Luna. I’ve got you.” I want to answer him, I want to tell him that I appreciate his effort but I want Cas. I need my Alpha, my mate, but all that leaves my mouth as a scream of pain as I feel Francis speed up.

“Put her on the bed.” I hear Selena bark at Francis as he carries me into the office.

“How did you get here so fast?” Francis asks her as he lowers me onto the hospital style bed,

“I was already here, go and find Cas. He’s out in the cells with Rowan and Heath.” I let go of Francis’s n*eck as I feel Selena’s hand rub across my stomach, “don’t panic Eva, I’m here.” Her voice is soothing but I can still hear the tinge of worry under her calm voice.

“What’s happening?” I ask her as another pain hits my side and travels right down between my legs, “it hurts!” I scream out as I clutch at the sheets below me.

“Your pup is coming, the bleed has gotten worse and Ghost can’t heal it. Eva look at me,” I force my eyes open to see her sun k*ssed face staring down at me. “You need a c-section, I need to get this pup out now or you and the pup will be in serious trouble." I can feel the sweat beading on my forehead as I nod at her, I trust Selena and if she says she needs to cut the pup out then she needs to.

"Please, save my baby." Selena's lips form a tight line as she nods her head and starts to turn around. "Listen to me." I grab her hand, forcing her to stop and look at me again, "you save my baby, I don't matter. This pup is is all that matters, it's the one truly good thing I have ever done in my life. It's not been tainted by hurt, pain or kidnappings, it's not seen me bloody and bruised, it doesn't know the me that I hate. This pup will only ever know love and for that it needs to be born so it can know it's Pack, it's family.

"You're both going to be fine. Now I need you to sit up so I can put an injection into your spine." I shake my head as another pain crashes into my body, "Eva. Look at me," I pull my eyes open again. "What you're feeling now is contractions, if you don't sit up so I can numb you then you will feel everything I do to you and it's going to hurt." The look of pure panic on her face has me trying to sit myself up, using my hands I push against the bed but I barely move an inch. back to see him. "Get off me." He growls at someone a split second before he's looking down at me, he has a smear of blood down the side of his face and he smells like the decay of death. "Sit up Angel, let me help you." He reaches for me with a bloody hand, his knuckles are split and are openly weeping.

"What happened?" I ask as I hesitate to put my hand in his, Selena grabs my arm and starts to yank me before Cas can even answer me.

"Sorry Luna but we don't have time." Between the two of them they have me sitting up on the bed, Cas quickly comes to the foot of the bed and holds my arms as Selena pulls my top up so my back is bare.

"Were you lighting?" I ask him quietly as I feel Selena's fingers slide up my spine.

"We can talk about it later, take a deep breath Angel." I hold his green eyes as I feel a sharp pain in my spine, I grit my teeth as I feel myself try to tighten up against the pain.

“Alright lay her back down, Eva, that’s going to work really quickly and it’s going to feel like your whole b*dy has gone numb.” I nod my head as Cas starts doing little breaths in and out, I find myself following his breathing without even consciously realising it.

“Why is this happening?” I ask as I feel the feeling in my b*dy start to recede.

“The bleeding I found a few weeks ago has gotten worse, I was worried Ghost wasn’t able to heal it so I was going to do this in the morning.” Selena starts to drape me in blue fabric, the view of my large stomach is soon gone.

“You knew?” I ask Cas, he looks guilty as he nods his head. “And you didn’t tell me?” I can’t keep the hurt out of my voice, I thought we were past keeping secrets from each other.

“We thought it best you had a good night’s sleep beforehand” Cas glances over at Sclera as if asking her for back up but she must be busy getting ready to cut into me

“So what” You decided to go and beat the shit out of someone instead” I shout at him. I’m suddenly filled with an irrational anger that isn’t completely my own He actually looks down at his hands as I scream at him like he’s only just realising what he’s done

“Alright, deep breath Eva You will be meeting your pup in a second Selena interrupts, our argument before we can really get going, moving my eyes off Cas I rest my head against the pillow as I get ready for Selena to pull my pup from me

The fact that Eva can stare daggers at me while Selena gets ready to cut into her shows how strong she is. When I started beating Jeremy I had no idea I would be interrupted with my mate being in labour, the second Francis and Stuart mentioned blood, it was like the world fell away and all that mattered was Eva and our pup.

“What was that?” Eva tries to sit up but whatever Selena injected. seems to have caused her to become immobile, “I can’t move!” Eva’s panic is evident as I grab her sweaty hand and lean down to k*ss her forehead.

“It’s just the drug Eva, keep calm. I can almost see your baby.” Selena says from behind the screen she’s erected, I’m sure it’s to keep what she’s doing from mine and Eva’s view. Selena can’t hide her worry from her scent though, it’s clinging to the air just like Eva’s blood and anger.

“Go and look, make sure she’s alright.” I know Eva means the pup so I lean down and k*ss her sweaty forehead again as I let go of her hand and walk behind the screen.

The second I see Selena elbow deep in Eva’s stomach I really wish I had stayed behind the screen, I start to wobble as my vision goes blurry. Every instinct inside of me is screaming to rip Selena apart for hurting our mate but the rational side of me knows she’s helping.

“Almost got it.” Selena grits her teeth as she tugs hard and then she’s removing her hands from my mate, while holding a small bloody bundle in her hands. “Pass me the cloth Cas.” I barely hear her as my eyes zero in on the small bundle in her hands, “Alpha!” I suddenly feel really weak as I feel Storm start to howl in joy as he realises what my brain has yet to register.

“Selena, what’s wrong with him? Is the pup alright?” I want to tell Eva to stop panicking and that everything is perfect but I can’t seem to move or even make a noise leave my mouth.

“Rowan! I need you!” Selena screams while holding the tiny bundle, “he’s fine Eva. Seeing your mate like this can’t be easy. You have a beautiful little boy.” Three things happen at once, I smell a male enter the room, Eva starts to cry tears of joy and then my world goes black.

‘Call yourself an Alpha!’ I open my eyes to see myself face to face with a slate grey wolf with yellow eyes, he’s flashing all his teeth at me as he growls fiercely. ‘Passing out at the birth of your son. You should be ashamed.’ I do the only thing I can, which is dropping my head to bare my n*eck to Storm, he’s rightfully angry with me.

‘It was too much.’ I tell him honestly, I don’t know if it was having Selena confirm that Eva had just given me a son, smelling Rowan in the birthing room or the panic in Eva’s voice. It was like a sensory overload and my b*dy did the only thing it could at that moment.

‘You dropped like a sack of bricks.’ Storm scoffs at me as he starts to circle me.

‘She said it was a girl, it was meant to be female.’ I tell him, it’s the first time I’ve admitted aloud that I was praying for the pup not to be male. I don’t even think I truly admitted it to myself.

‘Oh well then, guess you will have to become an asshole. I’ll get the punishment cupboard cleaned out.’ I clench my fists as I push myself into a sitting position, ‘what? Not good enough, should we just take him out into the forest and drown him in the stream?’ With a roar I lunge at Storm, I collide with his side as I start punching at his muscled stomach and hind legs.

‘You won’t hurt my son, he’s innocent. He’s mine and no one will hurt him.’ I scream as I try to inflict as much hurt on my wolf as possible.

‘So, why so scared Alpha?’ Storm shakes me off as if I’m nothing more than a mild annoyance, he sits on his hind legs and watches me try to catch my breath. His fur is sleek and shiny as he watches me from behind his glowing eyes.

‘What if I hurt him without meaning to?’ I drop back on my ass and unclench my hands to see they are drenched in blood, it’s practically dripping down my hands to pool at my feet.

“You wouldn’t even know how to hurt a pup.’ Storm licks his l*ps as he watches me, ‘you don’t have it in you Castiel. I’ve seen the deepest parts of you, you aren’t Vince or your father and you most definitely. are not your mother.’ I stretch my hands allowing the blood to flow between my fingers, I can feel it running down my forearms as I look up at Storm.

‘You can’t know that for sure.’ There is no way a pup gets treated like I did and doesn’t walk away with some kind of deep seeded issues.

‘Maybe but she does.’ I look behind me, we aren’t in a room or even outside, it’s more like we are just surrounded by darkness and from within that darkness the whitest wolf I have ever seen seems to just appear and start to walk towards us.

‘Ghost.’ I breathe out as she gets closer and heads straight for Storm, they greet each other by rubbing their muzzles together, I swear I hear one of them purr.

‘Do you think the Goddess would pick a weak wolf for me?’ Ghost asks as she circles Storm, her eyes are glued to him but I know she’s speaking to me.

‘No.’ I tell her quickly as she nuzzles her face into Storm’s side, he just keeps watching me as if Ghost is not doing anything to him.

‘You were broken Castiel and so was Eva.’ Storm lays down so that Ghost can fully nuzzle into his side, ‘you were both lost and without hope. Together you have given each other what you needed, what you both craved.”

‘A family.’ I whisper as I wipe my hands down my shirt to get rid of the blood. ‘it’s all I’ve ever wanted. A family filled with unconditional love.’ Ghost sits up and looks at me with her yellow eyes, she tilts her head to the side as if she’s trying to see me at a different angle.

‘Did we ever place a condition on our love?’ I shake my head no, Eva has never asked me for anything, she’s never even asked me to love her. I gave it freely and unconditionally, then go and give our pup the same love. Help him grow, he’s going to be amazing.’ I stand up as I feel hands on my shoulders, looking down there is nothing there but I can feel the strong hands squeezing me. ‘Castiel?’ I look up at Ghost to see her and Storm share a sad look.

“What?” I ask her as I feel the hands shake me more forcefully.

This will be your and Eva's only pup, I can't heal the damage it did to her b*dy. The years of abuse and neglect have taken their toll on her, give this pup your everything. Before I can answer her I feel a hard force connect with my face and light starts to blind me, the two wolves start to disappear from my sight but not before I see them snuggling down together

"Is he alright?" Eva's panicked voice has me flinging my eyes open, I'm flat on the hardwood floor and staring up at Rowan as he looks down at me with a worried look.

"Pup?" I ask him in a low voice, his face breaks out in a wide grin as he steps back and holds a hand out to me.

"See for yourself." He says as I rub at my jaw where he's clearly slapped me to wake me up, clasping his hand I let him pull me off the floor. Looking around I see Selena is once again behind the screen and Eva is laid back on the bed holding a bundle of fabric.

"Hey you. nice of you to come back." Eva grins at me as tears slide down her face. wiping my hands down my joggers I walk towards her as she tilts the small bundle towards me.

"A son." I whisper as his perfect little face comes into view, his eyes are closed but his head full of black hair and tiny button nose, make it obvious he is ours. "What are we calling him Luna?" I ask her as I crouch down beside the bed and carefully place a hand on his blanket covered chest.

"Dean." She tells me in a quiet voice, I look up at her watery eyes to see a happy smile gracing her face, "he was my first friend and he taught me about shifters. Really taught me, his life was cut short before he could see what he had given me." I try to swallow a lump in my throat as I smile at her and nod, turning to Rowan I see him standing a respectful distance back and looking at his feet.

"Tell the Pack. Alpha Heir Dean is born, healthy and loved." Rowan beams at me as he runs from the room, turning back to Eva, I start combing my hand through her hair as we watch Dean start to wriggle around.

Cas

Looking out of the window I watch as Cas bids the group off to the Moon Ceremony. Thanks to The Elders and now Dean's fast arrival, me and Cas decided it was best to send Rowan with some Pack members to at least give Everfur a presence for the first time in years.

"Alright, let's try this again." I murmur to Dean as I sit down in the rocking chair that appeared this morning. I think Cas was sick of seeing me try to get comfortable in the bed, I will admit it's much easier to feed Dean in the rocking chair.

'You mean try and feed.' Ghost taunts me, for some reason ever since Dean was born she's been really snarky and a little mean to me.

'I'm trying.' I tell her as I pull my bra down and expose my n*pple to Dean's squealing mouth, as normal he tries to latch on but he just can't seem to get the idea.

'Animals in the wild do this, can you just feed him already.' Sighing I drop my head back as Dean continues to scream his little lungs out. He fed that first time but now we are two days in and he has not eaten a thing. I can't help but feel like I'm failing him in some way.

"No one ever taught me how to do this alright. I've just been given a pup and basically been expected to know what to do, I don't understand why he isn't feeding." I feel the warm tears start to slide down my face as the frustration becomes too much and I can't contain my emotions any longer. It's like a dam breaks and finally the river has overflowed and there is no stopping it.

"Luna?" I sniffle and look up to see Sally pushing her way into the bedroom with a warm smile on her face. "Oh Eva." Sally drops whatever she's holding onto the bed and rushes over to me in the rocking chair.

"He wont eat!" I wail, "he just screams and screams, he hates me!" Sally crouches down in front of us and puts a wrinkled hand on my knee, it's a comforting gesture and one I find myself needing.

“Eva? Angel, what’s wrong?” I tuck my face into my chest as Cas comes barrelling into the bedroom, I don’t want him to see me breaking down about our son.

“Alpha, with all due respect, please leave and give me some time with Eva.” I’ve never heard Sally talk to Cas like that before and what’s even more shocking is Cas actually nods his head and leaves the bedroom.

“You just kicked your Alpha out of his own room.” I sniffle as I giggle a little, Dean still continues to scream his little lungs out.

“Well, Alpha or not he’s still a man and right now you need some help.” I watch as she crouches down next to me and starts to stroke at Dean’s full head of black hair, “babies are really good at sensing our moods. If you are tired and stressed, he will be too, it will make him not want to feed. So, pass him here and I’ll get him settled while you go and shower and then you can try again.” Reluctantly I hand Dean over and stand from the rocking chair.

“Are you sure?” I ask her as Dean continues to scream, his tiny hands. are clenched in rage and his face is bright red.

“I’m certain, once you have finished showering you can try again and if it still doesn’t work then I have brought a bottle up so he gets a little something in his tummy.” I’m swamped with guilt as I walk away from a crying Dean and shushing Sally, I leave them alone in the bedroom to head into the adjoining bathroom.

This bathroom is much bigger than the one in the basement, there is actually a bath in this one, it has little jets on it that I can’t wait to try out. The shower is massive with little water jets that blast you from the sides, I haven’t really had time to enjoy either of them but I will one day. Very aware that Dean is still screaming the Pack house down I quickly strip out of my sleep wear and step into the shower. Looking down at my b*dy I notice the c–section scar is now just a red line, Selena said it takes humans weeks to be able to even walk after but thanks to Ghost I am able to be up and about just over forty–eight hours. afterwards.

‘You realise you just left your new–born with a random Pack member.’ I roll my eyes at Ghost as she continues to attack me about my failings as a mother.

“What’s your problem?” I ask her as I rinse the shampoo from my hair.

'I'm exhausted, all the pup does is cry day and night. You realise when. I'm not chatting to you I'm normally sleeping.' I nod my head in understanding, me and Cas haven't exactly had a lot of sleep either, Ghost's attacks actually make more sense now.

'Lets try this again.' I tell her as I turn off the water and ring the excess from my hair, stepping from the shower I wrap myself in one of the bath towels hanging from the door.

"You need to try and eat something little one, your momma and papa need sleep so they can look after you properly." Sally is speaking quietly to Dean as he continues to wail in her arms, she's walking back and forth across the bedroom as she bounces him softly.

"Alright, let's try this again." I tell Sally as I shrug myself into Cas's massive bathrobe, I don't have one of my own. He keeps offering to get me one but I like wearing his so why bother. Walking over to the rocking chair I sit down and hold my hands out for Dean, his little face is scrunched up, his little face is bright red and he's making so much noise it actually assaults my ears.

"Alright, nice relaxing breath and then bring him to the n*pple." I nod my head at Sally as I bring my chest down to Dean, he continues to wail as his little l*ps smack against my n*pple. It's almost like he's searching for it but can't quite figure out it's right there in front of him.

"Come on Dean, it's right there." I tell him softly, I can feel Ghost willing me to just shove my breast into his mouth but even I know that's not the right move. "It's not working." I tell Sally as I feel the tears start to boil to the surface again, "it's me, he doesn't want me." Sally kneels down in front of me and starts to run a gentle finger down the side of Dean's face.

"It's not you, every mother goes through something like this. Books and movies set unrealistic standards and most babies struggle at first. Once he gets going he won't stop but if you really are struggling I have some formula." I shake my head as I try to bring my n*pple to him again, he again continues to wail and scream.

"All the books say 'breast is best'. Even Selena said it." I hiccup as I start to cry again, "I need to do this, he needs this from me." Sally puts a hand on my arm making me look up at her.

"It's only the best if both mother and baby can get on board with it. Formula doesn't mean you have failed, it just means he will finally have a full belly and maybe even sleep." Sally's eyes hold mine as I slowly nod my head. I really wanted to do this whole breastfeeding thing but honestly I don't know how much longer I can do this. I'm becoming overwhelmed and I know Dean must be starving and if Sally is right then he is experiencing all of my stress and anxiety too.

“What do I do?” I ask as Sally walks over to the bed and plucks up the bottle of formula she popped onto it when she first came in.

“It’s already at the right temperature, after you have slept I’ll show you how to make it up.” I accept the bottle of white liquid from her and adjust myself so I’m fully covered, “now just hold him and bring the teat to his l*ps.” I nod my head as I do just that, Dean continues to scream but as soon as a small drop of liquid falls onto his l*ps he latches onto the n*pple shaped teat and starts suckling like his life. depends on it.

“He’s doing it!” I say with joy, Sally beams at us as I give a deep sigh and lean back in the rocking chair, “thank you Sally.”

“Don’t mention it, every new momma gets overwhelmed at some point. I helped with Cas and multiple Pack pups so if you have any questions. you just ask.” I grip her hand in mine and look into her eyes as we both listen to the peace and quiet of Dean finally eating.

‘Meet me in my office.’ I tell Heath as I make my way down the stairs, being kicked out of my own bedroom is a new experience but I know Eva has been a little overwhelmed with everything.

‘On my way.’ Heath answers me as I close down the link, with Rowan on his way to the Moon Ceremony to represent the Pack he passed his notes over to Heath so he can do the Alpha, Beta weekly rundown. The Pack house is pretty empty as I make my way down to the basement. Rowan thought I would take my fathers old office but I just can’t do it. Eva has helped me put a lot of my past behind me but some wounds just cut too deep. I’m considering having it ripped out and made into a playroom for Dean, maybe he will even bring his friends along in a few years time.

‘You’ll block off that awful cupboard though, right?’ Storm asks as I make my way into the basement, I can smell that Heath is already down here. Sure enough my Head Warrior is sitting on the sofa sipping a massive mug of coffee.

“Got you one.” Heath nods his recently shaved head at the steaming mug on the coffee table, ‘I remember the first months with my little one, I basically lived on this stuff.’ I smile at him as I head straight for the coffee and drop myself into the armchair.

“Sally kicked me out of the bedroom.” Heath tilts his head back and laughs so hard his cheeks go red and he has to put his coffee down.

“She pulled the same crap on me when Alec started cutting his first tooth.” It seems Sally is still not too old to be inputting herself in between new pups and their parents. I have to admit the woman has more balls than half of the males I’ve met. “How is Dean and Eva?” I sip at my coffee as I try to decide how honest to be with Heath, I don’t know how much is too much, I’ve never been a father before.

“He’s fine, we are still adjusting but we will all get the hang of it.” I try to answer as diplomatically as possible, I don’t want to betray Eva by talking about how she’s struggling to feed Dean or how neither of us have slept since he was born.

Heath just watches me as he raises an eyebrow, if he believes me or not he doesn’t call me on my bullshit which I appreciate.

“Rowan gave me the Beta rundown, want me to?” He picks up a notepad from beside him and I just nod my head, between The Elders. and then Dean’s fast arrival it’s been a good few days since me and Rowan had a sit down.

“Slam me with it.” I tell him as I drain my coffee cup and on the coffee table.

“Well, the work on the High Street is going as planned. The foundation for all four shops and the new daycare are all down. They reckon the work will take about a year in total but the medical centre might take longer.” I knew it was going to take a while but a year is longer than I was hoping, I know the medical centre is going to be more work than the rest thanks to the legal requirements.

“Have we had word on the medical centre?” I ask him, Rowan had to apply for special planning permissions but thanks to Dean and Stuart, we finally met the state requirement to have our own legally built medical centre.

“Rowan got the letter yesterday, we are cleared to open a medical centre that can do minor surgery. Of course we won't exactly have officials knocking on the door to see what Selena is up to.” I nod my head as he hands over the official looking documents, glancing at them I see they are full and will require a more in depth read later.

“That's great, it will be nice to finally not have to go into Midsey each time we have a hurt Pack member.” Heath smiles as he nods in agreement.

“Ben has decided he wants to go back to Swiftmane, he assured me it's nothing personal. He just misses his friends, family and Pack.” I'm not surprised at this, alot of Pack members venture out and find that they miss their home Packs. As wolves we are very Pack oriented and sometimes those ties are hard to change.

“Does he need an escort back or is he joining them at the Moon Ceremony?” Before he got on the bus Ben's farewell did seem rather formal and honestly I find it a little rude that he didn't tell me himself that he was leaving.

“He's meeting up with Fraction and Anna at the Moon Ceremony, he wanted to tell you himself but he felt with Eva and Dean you had enough on your plate.” I can't argue with that so I just dip my head as I run a hand across my stubbled chin.

“That makes sense. Jeremy?” I ask after the last man I want to hear about, however, if Dean hadn't come when he did I would have likely beaten the man to death.

‘Deserved.’ Storm growls at me, as Heath looks to the wall and seems to consider how to answer me. He was there that night, he watched me literally beat the man into ground

"Jeremy is a mess, Selena looked him over but honestly I don't think her heart was really in it." I half expected Heath to tell me Jeremy was already dead, honestly, I'm not sure which outcome I wanted.

'Yes you are. Bastard deserves to die.' Storm obviously agrees with the punishment I rained down on Jeremy.

"He'll die?" Heath nods his head with his l*ps in a firm line, clearly my Head Warrior is trying to hide how he feels about this situation. "And the drugs? Has that died down since the rogues and Jeremy have disappeared from the scene?" Heath flicks through the notepad, the way he's scanning the pages makes me think he's looking for something in particular.

"Seems Harry hasn't had any issues at the mine since the rogues got dealt with and it seems the local law enforcement at Midsey have reported a drop in drug dealings." I breathe a sigh of relief as I slouch. back in my chair.

"We need to contact the other Pack's, if Jeremy had something to do with the drugs then that means The Shalamayne did. They need to know the type of thing that could be bled into their Pack." I want to give the other Alpha's a heads up that this drug could find its way into their Packs, I've seen the havoc it can have on a wolf

"I'll reach out to some of the Head Warriors and I'll have Rowan do the same to the Betas'." Heath picks up his coffee cup as he closes his notepad, "I need to go and relieve Francis from the cell duty, as long as Jeremy is breathing I want someone keeping guard." I'm about to stand. when the door at the top of the stairs opens and I see Eva's pale legs. appear. "I'll leave you to it." I smile at Heath without taking my eyes off Eva as she glides down the steps, Heath nods his head at her as he quickly dashes up and closes the door behind him.

“No pup Angel?” I ask her as I hold my arms open for her, she walks over to me with a wide smile on her face.

“Sleeping.” she tells me as she waves a small white device in her hand, “he ate!” She squeals at me as she throws herself into my arms and, lands on my lap, my hand automatically goes to her dressing gown covered ass.

“That’s fantastic, did Sally help?” I ask her as I lean in and sniff deeply, she smells like Dean and a scent that is all my Angel.

“We can never let her leave, she’s amazing. She watched him while I showered and then she talked me through how to feed him and that if he doesn’t want the breast then it’s not a problem.” I disagree but then. again I’m not the one who had her stomach cut open after carrying a pup for months, if formula is the route she wants to take then I’ll support her.

“That’s great and at least with formula I can help with the night time. feeds.” Eva nods her head enthusiastically before yawning deeply, “alright momma, time for bed. Dean sleeps, you sleep.” Putting a hand under her legs and one at her back I stand up, she squeals as she wraps. her hands around my n*eck.

“I can’t wait to get the all clear from Selena. I miss you,” I groan deeply as she places a wet k*ss on my n*eck. I want nothing more than to be buried inside of my mate but before that I need to have a conversation with her about the future.

His Rogue Omega: Chapter 122

☆ Eva ☆

Turning my face up to the sun I let its rays soak into my pale skin, it doesn’t matter how much time I spend in the garden, I can never seem to get the sun k*ssed glow that Selena or Cas seem to naturally have. The smell of wild lavender swamps around me and calls me over to the collection I’m currently planting around the cell block. Recently I’ve added large wild daisies and white roses but something is missing and I can’t quite put my finger on it.

“Try lilies, I do love a good lily.” I smile as Ghost stretches before slinking across the lawn, the sun bounces off her fur making her white. fur almost glow.

“Don’t you think that will be too much white?” Kneeling down in the warm grass I slide my hands into the dirt surrounding the flowers. I do love the way it feels as it separates my fingers, I don’t know why I find gardening so relaxing but apparently it’s my happy place considering this is where I always come in my dreams.

I don’t realise that Ghost hasn’t said anything for a while until the sun starts to lower and I’m planting the last lily into the soil. The flower bed is finally complete and it looks beautiful considering it’s next to such an ugly building.

‘We need to talk.’ If that sentence had come from Cas I would panic but as Ghost says it I feel an ice cold bucket of fear wash over me.

‘What is it?’ I ask her as I fall back onto the grass and turn around to see her laying the grass behind me.

‘Dean, I know you love him and I know that eventually you want more pups. I’ve seen the craving start within you.’ I shift my eyes down to my d*rt* hands, I’ve only had the thought a few times. Dean came so quickly that I can honestly say I’m in no rush but a few more pups running around with my hair and Cas’s eyes could be amazing.

‘A big family would be nice.’ I say to her as I pick at the dirt under my nails, I can’t keep the small smile from my l*ps as I imagine me and Cas older and with a small army of children behind us.

‘Dean will be your only child Eva.’ I gasp at Ghost’s words, it feels like she’s just dropped a stone in my stomach and it feels clean through my b*dy.

‘No.’ I shake my head as I place a hand over my empty stomach, ‘I want more, I’m sure Cas does too.’ Ghost slinks over to me without standing up, it’s almost like an army crawl, it’s not until her wet nose is pushing against my hand that I realise I’m crying.

‘It’s not Cas and you know it, deep down you know why.’ I nod my head as I stroke her fur, she turns into my touch and I can feel her vibrating next to me like she’s trying to comfort me.

‘Jeremy.’ I snuffle and lay down in the cooling grass as I push my face into Ghost’s smooth fur, ‘how did I even have Dean after everything he did to me? I know the answer before Ghost answers me.

‘I did everything I could Eva, I got you as far into the pregnancy as I was able. Each time I healed you the damage would come back worse and worse.’ I thought I was over my hatred for Jeremy, I let the pain he caused me fall away as I let Cas wrap me in his comforting hold.

‘Did Cas kill him? I never did ask him, I guess I didn’t really care.’ I force my tears to stop as the sky around us turns black, it’s gone from day to night in the blink of an eye. We are suddenly laying under a blanket of stars and inky black sky.

‘He’s alive, Cas got close though.’ Pushing against Ghost’s strong b*dy I sit up in the grass and stare at the sky, I am finding myself oddly glad that Cas didn’t kill Jeremy, I have something I want to say before he meets his end.

“Thank you for giving me Dean.’ I slide my fingers through Ghost’s fur once more before I close my eyes and will myself to wake up.

Waking up from being in the garden always confuses me, the dreams. are so vivid that it isn’t until I see Ghost that I even realise I’m dreaming. The dark of the room is only diminished by the soft glow of the night light Cas insisted we plug in, Dean is sleeping at the end of our bed in his white bassinet.

‘Don’t do this Eva.’ I shrug Ghost off as I slowly pull myself from under Cas’s arm, he’s got it slung across my stomach in his sleep. I’m not sure. when he came to bed after fking me to sleep, maybe he never left and crashed right there beside me. Standing next to the bed and pulling on his shirt along with some panties, I can’t help but feel a little guilty. We promised no more secrets, no more lies and here I am sneaking out in the middle of the night to confront my abusive ex boyfriend. Dean stirs in his bassinet making me glance down at him, he’s still sleeping peacefully but seeing his soft pale face and full head of black hair I realise I need to do this. Not just for me but for Dean too, when Dean gets older and asks why he has no siblings I want to tell him that the man responsible paid a price for the damage he inflicted. –

“Don’t worry, I’ll be back.” I whisper down at Dean as I lay a k*ss on my finger and press it to his forehead, I know he won’t even know I’m gone but I will.

Creeping through the Pack house at three in the morning is weird, it’s oddly quiet considering lately the Pack house has constantly been filled. It’s like the Pack is desperate to get eyes on the new Alpha heir, it’s been fun showing him off but it’s nice that they all go home at the end of the day.

“Luna?” Francis sounds confused as he watches me pad across the dark garden in nothing but a t-shirt and no shoes.

“Jeremy still in there?” I ask him without slowing, he moves to block the door which is the only reason I stop. “Move Francis.” I put my hands on my hips, Francis’s hips don’t leave my face for even a second which shows me how much he learned from our little outing before I started seeing Cas.

“Can’t let you in there Luna, Jeremy is still dangerous.” Letting Ghost come forward I watch Francis dip his head in submission, “I meant no. disrespect, Luna!” Francis speaks quickly as I pull Ghost back.

“Move, I need to speak to him.” I stare at Francis but when he doesn’t step aside I let Ghost growl at him, I watch the warrior actually shake before stepping aside.

“Alpha Cas won’t like this Luna.” I swallow hard as I nod my head, I know Cas won’t like this and I don’t expect much time alone before he comes and pulls me out of the cell block.

“Give me as much time as you can,” I tell him as I push the heavy door open, it kind of ruins my whole badass Luna thing when I actually grunt as I put my full b*dy behind it.

The door finally gives out and I have to catch myself before I hit the floor. Francis doesn’t say anything as I step into the dimly lit hall, it’s been a while since I’ve been in here. The smell of blood, sweat and urine smacks me in the face, I feel Ghost recoil from the smell as I block my nose and push forward. There are little lights along the ceiling that give the impression of light but it doesn't actually offer all that much.

'Goddess, he looks like he's on his last legs.' Ghost gasps as I step into the second cell along and see Jeremy, or a shape that resembles Jeremy, laid on one of the beds. He's covered in bruises and cuts, his blood has pooled under the bed and seems to have soaked into the thin mattress. His once sinfully handsome face is beaten so badly that all of one side is swollen, I can't even see his eyes thanks to the swelling.

"Jeremy." I clear my throat as I call his name without entering the cell, when he doesn't answer me I lift a bare foot and slam it into the end of the small bed. "Wake up Jeremy." I know he's still alive because I can hear the dull thumping of his heart.

"Zoe." He groans out, his head moves to the left a little but he flinches. from the pain, his voice is gruff and barely audible.

"Eva, my name is Eva." I tell him sternly, "did Cas do this?" I cross my arms over my chest as I watch his chest slowly rise and fall, he's wearing black dress pants and black socks but otherwise he's bare.

"Stupid shifter, should all die." I can't help but laugh a little, Jeremy groans out as he tries to lift a hand to his face.

"I don't think we will be the ones to die, you don't smell too good Jeremy." I make an audible sniff, "you are smelling like death. You haven't got long left." I know it's mean but I can't help but feel some happiness in Jeremy dying from a beating. There were so many times. that I thought he would kill me with his fists, how the tables have turned.

"Then let me die in peace." Even beaten and dying he still manages to have that horribly bossy tone that used to have me running for a hiding spot. Uncrossing my arms I slowly walk into the room and crouch down beside him, leaning into him I get close so he hears every word I have to say.

"You're going to die in here, alone and without any friends or family." I can feel Ghost under my skin but I hold her back, I'm here to say my peace not kill him. "I have a mate, a son and a Pack. You almost took all of that from me but I got it all, it's mine and no one can take them. from me." Jeremy turns his head to me but he can't open his eyes.

"You don't deserve any of it, shifters should all die." I'll give him one thing, he sticks with what he knows.

"Good job I'll make sure she keeps it." I glance up from Jeremy and see Cas leaning against the cell door watching me speak to Jeremy, "you done Angel?" "I don't hate you Jeremy, I pity you. You will never know the love that I have or the family that wants me." Standing up from the side of the bed I walk over to Cas as he beams at me and holds his hand out to me, "and you never will." One Year later

I swear this pup poops way too much.' I laugh at Ghost as I try to change Dean's blow out diaper, it's not often this happens but when it does it's always when it's my turn to clean him.

"Come on sweetie, hold still for momma." I try to keep my voice light and carefree but honestly I feel like pulling my hair out, "how about. you stay still and I let you go play with your dada." As if he actually understands me Dean goes still on the changing mat and I manage to finish up without any further incidents.

'Bribing a one year old, shame shame Luna.' I shoo off Ghost as I gather Dean up into my arms and leave the playroom, Cas is in the office with Rowan so I head that way. The sound of tears stops me before I enter the basement, letting the door close, I poke my head around the corner and see Sally comforting a young female.

"Sally?" I whisper, she looks over at me which reveals the young. brunette, she's stunning except for the bruise on her face. It looks like someone has smacked this teenager in the face.

“Ah Luna, we could use you.” The young girl doesn’t even look up as Sally speaks to me, I nod my head towards Dean, letting Sally know I’ll be right back. I race down the basement stairs as fast as I dare while holding Dean, I don’t bother knocking on the office door, I know whose inside and neither party will mind me coming in..

“There’s my wolfie.” Cas drops his paperwork and holds his arms out for Dean, Rowan just laughs as I practically throw him at his father.

“Sorry guys, I have something to deal with.” I run out of the office. blowing a k*ss to both of my men and race back up the stairs before either of them can say anything.

“I’m here,” I’m out of breath by the time I get back to the kitchen, the young girl is still crying and Sally is still trying to comfort her. “What happened?” I ask as I approach the two sitting at the kitchen table.

“I messed up at work and now I’ve lost my job.” The girl wails loudly before dissolving into more tears, I look at Sally and raise a questioning eyebrow at Sally.

“Beth works at the coffee shop on the high street after school.

Apparently today she broke a shelf and destroyed two weeks’ supply of stock.” The coffee shop is just one of five new stores we have had built in the last year, “Mr Monfield fired her because sadly Beth is a little accident prone.” I suddenly feel very sorry for this young girl. Not. many girls her age would go out and find a job but then be fired from it, it can’t be easy for her.

“And how did this bruise happen?” I ask Beth as I crouch down in front of her and brush my hand across her cheek. The bruise is pretty fresh but it’s already a lovely shade of purple and blue, in a day or two it’s going to be a full rainbow explosion.

"The shelf hit me in the face as it fell. What am I going to do Luna? I mess everything up and my family relies on my income since my father died." I again look at Sally, her wrinkled face drops to the floor, I instantly don't like where this is heading.

"When did he die?" Beth wipes at her bruised face before looking at me with a sad smile, "the clearing. He died protecting Alpha Cas when the rogues attacked." Beth nods her head and I suddenly feel very ashamed, if it wasn't for me those rogue's would never have come here because Jeremy would never have sent them.

"Luna, since Lucy started college I'm short staffed in the kitchen and could use an extra hand or two." Patting Beth's hand I nod my head towards the kitchen sink, Sally seems to get my meaning as starts to walk to lead the way.

"I'll be right back," I tell Beth before I stand up and head to the sink, grabbing a glass, I turn on the tap and let it run. "You sure? She's very young and sounds a little accident prone." I understand Beth needs at job but I'm not sure if being around sharp knives is such a good idea.

"I'm sure it is a nerve thing, Mr Monfield can be a bit bull-headed when he wants to be." I study Sally as I get Beth some water, if she says she can help the young girl then I'm sure she can.

"Alright, let's offer her the role." Turning off the water I turn to go back. to Beth when Sally tops me with a small hand on my arm.

"You know, she came here looking for you, not me. She needed help and she came looking for her Luna." I try not to smile at that but I can't help the small one that creeps onto my face, I even feel Ghost preen a little. No one from the Pack has ever come to just me for help or advice before.

"Beth?" The young girl lifts her head up and snuffles before accepting the glass of water I'm holding out to her, "how about you come work in the Pack kitchen with Sally two or three times a week?" I know Cas has a rule and anyone Pack members of school age is not allowed to work more than three days a week. He insists this is so they have time to study and be pups before they are thrust into the world.

“Really?” Sally chuckles as Beth puts the glass of water down on the table and jumps up from the chair. “I would love to!” I laugh as Bath throws her arms around my n*eck and starts squeezing me in a massive hug.

“Well I think that worked out well.” Sally says happily as she turns to start putting together some coffees.

“You think I handled that alright?” I start picking at my finger as I sit in the chair Beth vacated, “maybe I should have talked to Cas first.” Sally shakes her head at me as she brings two cups of coffee to the table and sits down next to me.

“You did perfectly, that young girl was distraught and at least here at the Pack house me and you can guide her, help her grow and then one day she will be ready to stretch her paws.” I smile warmly at Sally, she has this way of saying exactly what I need to hear when I need to hear

1. it.

“What did I miss?” I look over my shoulder to see Cas and Rowan coming into the kitchen, Dean is not with them but Cas is carrying the little baby monitor which tells me he’s down for his nap.

“Beth was upset because Mr Monfield fired her, she’s a little nervous and makes mistakes.” Sally sums up a teenage girl’s trauma in a few words, sure I know it’s not the end of the world but to her it would. have been a big deal.

“I’ll get her added to the rota and paysheet, I need to go and check on Selena. She has a scan this afternoon.” We all shout goodbye to Rowan, he’s been so stressed since Selena fell pregnant but I think he’s just worried about becoming a father.

“I should get the dinner started, leave that with me and have some alone time.” Sally takes the baby monitor from Cas and I just watch as he stares at me, he winks at me before licking his l*ps.

“Come to the office with me.” It’s not a question but I still nod my head as I follow Cas out of the kitchen.

“It’s the middle of the day.” I say as he grabs me by the waist and pulls me into his chest.

“I need you.” He growls as he sniff’s up the side of my face and places a k*ss on my temple, “look at you being a powerful Luna, fixing issues. and ruling the Pack house. I’m so proud of the woman you have grown. into.” I gasp out as I push against Cas’s chest and look up at his face.

“I’m only this woman because I have you beside me, I love you Castiel.” I cup his face with my hand and he turns into, nuzzling his face into my touch before opening his green eyes. They are blazing with desire as I watch Storm prowl behind his eyes, he’s there with us, enjoying this moment.

“I love you too Eva,” I smile at him as he lifts his head and lets me go, “now turn around and put your hands on the desk.” Biting my l*p I turn around slowly and slide my panties and leggings down my legs, I bend over to give him a full view of my ass. I don't miss the growl of arousal that slips from Cas's mouth, placing my hands on the desk, I move my hair so the back of my neck is bare to him.

"Now you have me, what are you going to do about it?" I taunt over my shoulder as I wave my ass at him. I gasp out loud as I feel Cas's warm breath on my ass cheek, no matter how many times he does this to me I will never get bored.

"Yours, always." I moan out at the first swipe of his tongue, submitting to Cas will always be a pleasurable experience, I never thought I would submit to a man after Jeremy.

"Having fun?" I growl at Rowan as I wait for Eva and Dean to come. out of the restroom, leaning against the SUV I pull my shades over my

"How long did it take you to get there last year?" It feels like we have been driving for days when it's only really been around six hours and four rest stops.

"About eight hours, I think it's going to take us a bit longer this year." I scowl at Rowan as he waves at some of the Pack coming out of the rest stop store, "Selena isn't “She’s pregnant and a Doctor, if there was an issue she would tell you.” I look behind me as I talk to see Eva walking across the parking lot carrying a much less grouchy than before.

“Still not happy about being summoned to this Moon Ceremony, it was your turn this year.” I shrug my shoulders and jump off the SUVF to open the door for Eva so she can put Dean into the carseat.

“Well Darryl wouldn’t have summoned us all if it wasn’t important.” Eva says as she masterfully straps in Dean and hands him his little. slate black wolf I bought him a few months ago. “Besides I want to go, I didn’t get to go last year and I’ve never been.” I smile at her as she leans up to k*ss me on the cheek before jumping into the passenger “Relax, she’s likely with a patient or with a patient or napping.” I slam Rowan on the arm as he heads back over to the minivan of Pack members and I jump into the driver’s seat of the SUV.

“Want me to try calling her?” I nod my head at Eva as I start the car up, I’m not sure when it happened but at some point me and Eva just suddenly started thinking the same thing. It’s like we are in perfect sync, the last year with her, Dean and the Pack has been nothing short of bliss.

“Damn mud.” I growl as I slow the SUV to a crawl, the Moon Ceremony is deep in a natural forest, it’s all mud and trees. Which is beautiful but last night there was apparently a small ocean dropped here because the muddy floor is almost like driving over wet cement.

“Selena texted back,” I make a sound to show Eva I’m listening but I keep my eyes on the non existent road, “she had a patient in surgery. She’s all good and so is the pup.” I breathe a sigh of relief as I watch the mud splattered white minivan pull into a parking spot.

“Finally.” I smile as I finally turn the car off and turn to see Dean snoozing in his carseat, “now he sleeps? Screams the whole way here but sleeps now we are here.” Eva actually giggles as she slides from the car and slowly closes the door, I quickly follow her. I’ll get the Pack sorted before I deal with waking up a one year old.

“This seems more like a festival than a gathering of shifters.” Eva looks a little disappointed as she lifts her Doc Martin covered foot and flicks the mud off that’s gathered.

“This is just the parking lot,” I smirk at her as I walk towards the minivan. “Get Dean in the carrier and then we can get sorted.” I quickly jog off as she gets a little red in the face and looks like she’s about to start shouting at me.

‘Coward.’ Storm growls at me as I shrug my shoulders and start helping Rowan group some of the younger Pack members, everyone is over eighteen but until they are twenty-one they are mine and Rowan’s responsibility.

“We need to get over to the yellow zone, Darryl and Fraction have messaged saying they are already there.” Rowan seems much happier, I guess he finally got hold of Selena as well.

“Right let’s get moving then.” As if my little man knows he’s surrounded by shifters with amazing hearing, Dean starts squealing at the top of his lungs telling me Eva has him out of the carseat.

“Want me to help?” I growl at Eva as I try to get the tent pole in place, whoever designed this thing is a master torturer.

“I got it, just stay there with Dean.” I hear someone laugh behind me. but I ignore them and just keep trying to thread the pole through the impossibly tight loop.

“Come on Cas, surely you’ve gotten thicker into a tighter hole.” Eva bursts out laughing as I turn around to growl at Fraction, “here, let me at it.” Throwing my hands up in the air I step back from the tent. I’m about ten seconds away from shredding it to pieces. Much to my annoyance Fraction starts threading the pole in with complete ease.

“How the hell did you do that?” I ask him in amazement, I’ve been trying to get this tent up for the last thirty minutes and Fraction has it up in less than thirty seconds.

"Maybe I'm just more Alpha than you." Faction pulls on his beard as he smirks at me, I just shake my head and laugh, I know he means it in jest.

"Any idea why we were summoned here? Darryl's message said it was important I come." Faction looks around like he's checking for who is hearing distance. Eva has gone into the tent with Dean and the rest of the Pack is busy getting their own tents set up.

"Come with me." Faction's voice drops so only I hear him. I follow him through the tents to a more secluded area, there is nothing but trees around us now.

"What's with all the cloak and daggers?" Slide my hands in my jean pockets as I look around to see if anyone has followed us.

"Darryl has summoned all the major Packs because The Elders have made their move." I curse as I slide my hands through my hair.

"They replaced him?" The idea of anyone but Darryl leading the American Packs makes me feel a little sick.

"No, he picks a mate and they are making him do an old school introduction. The ceremony will be tonight, all the Packs have been called to witness it." I feel my eyes widen and my stomach churn as I realise what he means.

"And the female?" It's her who will suffer the most, a public mating is awful and brutal. It was done away with years ago because it damaged females in unfixable ways, it mentally broke some of them. Being claimed by your mate while multiple Packs watch is horrible, some Alpha's would even let others have a go at their mate once the claiming was done.

"Nineteen, tiny little thing, she's pretty sweet but I don't think they are fated. Darryl seems off, he doesn't want to do this but he also doesn't want to lose his Pack." Tilting my head back as Faction talks I look up at the leaf cover canopy, the female sounds young, too young. I have to seriously wonder what the hell Darryl is thinking. doesn't I tilt my head back down to see him shrug. Seems we are just two Alpha's with no idea how to help our leader, some friends we are.

"Nice to see how much you both think of me." I stiffen as Darryl's voice sounds from behind a massive oak tree. I never even heard him approach, the man is built like a brick house but he's so stealthy.

"Just worried is all." Fraction says, I can see he's also stiffened which means he didn't hear him either. Darryl looks a mess, his now full beard is sticking out all over the place and his dark eyes are red and angry looking. Like he's done nothing but stress and worry for a long time.

"You look like shit." I tell him as he walks over to us, he just shrugs his massive shoulders and leans against one of the trees.

"I ain't doing it, can't do that to someone so young. She's a sweet girl, she doesn't deserve this." The pain is clear on his face, he doesn't want to lose his Pack but he also doesn't want to hurt a young female, I can't even imagine the pressure he's under. "I'll mark her but nothing else. I won't kneel to their every want and whim, if shit goes south I need you guys to get her out." Both of us nod as Darryl runs his hand through his beard and sighs deeply, "complete shit show." He growls before walking away, left alone in the trees with Fraction I watch a slumped shouldered Darryl walk back towards the camp.

Chapter 0296

The next morning at breakfast, Elva and I sat beside Susie and across from Veronica and Tiffany. The excitement with Terry's capture seemed to be the popular topic for everyone else at the table, except for us. None of us seemed overly thrilled to ever mention Terry's name ever again.

At least, I knew I wasn't. I could take a guess about Susie, too. Tiffany and Veronica were likely being respectful of us.

We were half-way through eating, when Lilliana stumbled into the dining room. She was put together well enough, in a very simple sundress with matching cardigan. Though the buttons of the cardigan were fastened incorrectly, making it longer on one side.

She rubbed at her forehead with one hand, half covering her eyes. She shunned the bright lights, keeping her gaze firmly down.

All of the girls stopped to look at her as she stood there, miserable and oblivious. When she noticed, she blushed and hurried forward toward her usual empty seat near Olivia. The moment she sat down, Olivia stood up.

"I'll eat the rest in my room," she said. A servant quickly went behind her, grabbed her plate and followed Olivia out the door.

Lilliana sunk further down into her chair.

Elva was staring. I tapped at her plate. "Eat your food, honey. Be polite."

"Sorry, Mommy," she said and lifted her fork.

I did the same, trying to ignore Lilliana myself. It was difficult. Knowing what I knew, I wanted to make sure she was okay, at least health-wise, but staring would only make others Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

stare too.

Unfortunately, the damage had seemed to already been done. Everyone was looking at Lilliana. Whispers were beginning to sound.

Even Tiffany whispered to Veronica, "She looks hungover."

Veronica replied, "She is hungover."

Elva was staring again. I tapped her plate.

She lowered her head. "Sorry, Mommy."

Veronica and Tiffany returned to their own meals as if scolded too.

Susie gave me a sad sort of smile. I wondered how much she knew, if Nicholas had told Mark and Mark had told her. Whatever knowledge she had, she was keeping it to herself, so for that,

Though her pitying looks made my heart hurt. If Susie knew Lilliana went to Nicholas's room last night, then she probably knew I had gone there too. Susie was smart. She could surely piece together what I had been doing there and how it had turned out, thanks to Lilliana's presence

I returned Susie's smile as best I could. Her worry came from a place of friendship, I knew, not mockery. I had no reason to be rude, even if I wanted to forget the previous night had happened entirely. After breakfast, Elva and I returned to our room. Elva took a small nap and then played with her toys. Charlotte and I chatted over coffee until a visitor walked through the door.

Nicholas.

I had known that I couldn't avoid him forever, certainly, but I had hoped for at least a few more hours before we would have to face the embarrassment that had happened last night. "Piper. Charlotte. Elva."

"Nick-lass!" Elva bounced up from her spot on the floor and rushed toward him. He bent down and lifted her up into his arms. Her noodle arms threaded around his neck and they held each other in a tight hug.

"I missed you!" she said.

Nicholas teased a little. "I spent time with you two days ago."

"Not enough. I want to see Nick-lass every day."

He smiled as he leaned in and softly k*ssed her cheek.

Elva beamed with happiness.

My own heart melted at the sight. This wasn't the first time they had displayed such familial affection for each other, but every time it occurred felt like it was the first.

I hated that these moments couldn't last forever. But I would enjoy them for what they were while they lasted.

Soon, Elva got squirmy and Nicholas lowered her down. She rushed back to her toys and Nicholas came toward Charlotte and me.

Charlotte immediately stood. "Please." She offered him her seat.

"I couldn't," he said.

"I have chores that need tending to," Charlotte said. That didn't seem entirely truthful, but gave Nicholas enough reason to sit down. Charlotte winked at me behind his back. "Would you like a cup of coffee, Your Royal Highness?"

"Yes, thank you. That would be lovely."

Charlotte removed her own cup and walked toward the doorway where a pot of coffee and some cups had been set. As she worked, Nicholas inched his chair closer toward mine.

Even those few inches of closed distance sent my heart racing. His gentle smile set my skin on fire.

"I'm sorry about last night," he said, and that cooled me somewhat, though not enough to want to be away from him. If anything, I only wanted to be closer, to feel his warmth ignite within me again. "Don't apologize," I said. "You had no control over what happened."

"I should have been more forceful."

I shook my head. "You could have hurt her without even realizing it." Lilliana had been so drunk, she would have just kept pushing without feeling any pain, no matter how Nicholas tried to push her away. "I'm glad I came when I did," I said. Maybe I saved the both of them. Saved myself too, from acting too rashly.

I was a virgin and had always wanted to stay one until I found either my perfect person or my fated mate. Nicholas, unfortunately, couldn't be either of those things.

He was a prince. He wouldn't marry for love. He'd marry whoever would fit him best on the throne beside his. This person wasn't me. I had no idea how to sit on a throne, and I wasn't sure I wanted to learn.

I had enough problems. So did the royal family.

Our problems didn't mix well.

But that didn't mean that our... attraction, or even our affection, was irrelevant. It just... wasn't enough.

I wanted to be intimate with Nicholas, but I couldn't cross that line. Last night I had been willing. This morning, I wasn't so sure.

I was glad I didn't have to find out if I would have regretted giving my virginity to Nicholas. Nicholas leaned in closer. I leaned in too.

"Piper," he whispered. "Why did you come to my room last night?"

"You know why," I said. I licked my lips. He watched and licked his own. "I'm not ready for everything."

"We'll do as little or as much as you want," he said. "I'd never press you...."

"But...?"

"No, but's," he said, and seemed earnest. His voice lowered. "I want you however you are." "No, but's," he said, and seemed earnest. His voice willing...

I swallowed hard. My nerves itched to be closer to him, to touch him, to wrap myself around him and never let him go.

Charlotte returned with Nicholas's cup of coffee, and he and I jumped apart.

"Sorry," Charlotte mouthed to me, when Nicholas wasn't looking.

I shook my head lightly. It was fine. It was good, actually. Every time I was near Nicholas, I was ready to throw almost everything away to be with him.

I needed to remember myself and my temporary place in his life.

I needed to protect my heart, that wanted so badly to reach out to his and make him my special person.

As Charlotte walked away, Nicholas smiled at me. A fire burned in his eyes.

"You should come back tonight," he said, and I knew I would before he'd even finished, speaking.

That night, I sneaked out of my room when everyone else was asleep. The guards pretended they didn't notice. Then I quietly walked down the hallway, keeping my steps light as I wound my way through the palace until I stood before Nicholas's door.

I gently knocked, and it opened right away.

Nicholas stood behind in. He wasn't wearing a shirt. His muscles were on full display. He did wear a pair of thin lounge pants that hung low on his hips. His feet were bare.

"Piper," he said, voice low. A shiver ran down my spine.

"Were you expecting me?" I asked.

He smiled a little, sheepish. It was boyish on his face, making him appear much as he did back when we had dated three years ago. My heartbeat went into overdrive.

"I was hoping..." He stepped back from the door. "Come inside. Please."

I entered the room and he closed the door behind me.

Despite my trust and comfort around Nicholas, I was nervous in what I was doing here, in what was about to happen. So I continued to face the rest of the room, my back to Nicholas. If I looked at him, I might lose myself.

Maybe I came here for that. But I was afraid of it too.

Nicholas moved into the space behind me. He placed his hands on my shoulders.

"You're tense," he said. "Nervous?"

"I don't know..."

"You don't have to be with me. I know your boundaries and will never press you. You can trust me."

"I do trust you."

He began to give me a massage, pressing his thumbs deep into the strained muscles of my upper back. "Then trust me to take care of you..."

I relaxed at once, turning to putty in his hands.

"I'll take care of you, Piper."

"I know..." I sighed, happiness spreading through me.

He stepped closer to me, pressing his chest against the length of my back. His hands trailed from my shoulders, down the length of my arms. My nerves prickled pleasantly where his

He lowered his mouth to my ear. "Tell me what you want tonight, Piper."

Deep within me, a fire sparked and burned. It spread out up into my heart and down, down into my core.

"You know what I want," I said.

He hummed. "I want to hear you say it."

My heart soared. He had such a way to make me feel safe and special. Even this, right here his obvious consideration for me made me feel properly cared for.

"I want you..." I swallowed down my embarrassment. This was Nicholas, the man I trusted. The man I loved once. Maybe loved still, somewhere inside of me. I was afraid to think about that now. "How do you want me?" he asked, voice so low, it was practically a growl.

"Touch me..." My cheeks burned. "Taste me..."

Slowly, he slid the sleeves of my dress off my shoulders and down the length of my arms. The top half of my dress fell down, catching on my hips and pooling at my waist.

Nicholas traced his knuckles down the length of my spine. He stopped when all he felt was bare skin.

"Piper..." He didn't sound disapproving. More, surprised. "You are not wearing a bra." "I'm not," I confirmed.

He slipped his fingers around my waist and teased my stomach.

"Such a bad girl," he whispered into my ear. His breath was so hot on my skin. Slowly, he lifted his hands upward and cupped my bare breasts. His fingers were cold and I gasped. At the same time, my nipples hardened, peaking into his palms, searching for friction.

I moaned at the sensation.

For a time, he simply massaged me with his hands. I dropped my head back against his shoulder, enjoying his ministrations. Then, blessedly, like he could read my mind, he pulled his thumbs inward and brushed against my nipples.

"Nick," I gasped.

"I've got you. Let yourself go, Piper. I swear I won't let you fall."

My mouth fell open. I could barely catch my breath as he teased, flicking and then rolling the hubs with his thumbs.

"Oh, Nick."

"Does it feel good?"

I nodded.

"Good." He continued to touch until it was nearly too much. I clutched at his upper arms with both my hands, squeezing.

"Maybe we should see what else you aren't wearing," Nicholas said, then. He held onto one breast with one hand, while his other lowered down to my hips. He tugged the dress down over my curves, and it dropped fully down to the floor.

His hand slipped around my backside, and traced the bare globe of my ass.

I had decided to forego my panties as well.

"You are a very bad girl, Piper," he purred. "Let me see you."

my now-

Stepping back, he came around to my front. His hooded gaze traced the expanse of n*ked b*dy. Heat and lust shimmered in the gold in his eyes, sparkling like coins under the candlelight I now realized we were surrounded with.

How easily he had distracted me from my surroundings.

How romantic he had wanted this moment to be for us.

"Nick..."

While I was appreciating the candlelight, Nicholas was appreciating me. His pants were now straining in the front. His fingers twitched, like he wanted to touch but didn't know where to start.

He'd seen me n*ked before in the past, but this felt different somehow. I was standing here, in his room, bare and begging. We were different people than we had been three years ago, but we were the same too, in some ways.

Our lust for each other had a hair trigger.

Nicholas suddenly stepped forward and scooped me into his arms in a bridal carry. He struggled to walk, but he managed to hobble with me into the bedroom. So softly, so tenderly, he lowered me down onto the soft cushion of the bed.

"Nick, please..."

He lowered his lips to mine and claimed my mouth with his k*ss, licking his way inside. Gently, so as not to put too much weight onto me, he shifted over me, rested in the cradle of

His hands traced up and down my sides, starting tiny wildfires along my skin. Wherever he touched burned with my desire for him. I wanted more. So much more. whimpered against his mouth.

That was all the guidance he needed. He broke the k*ss, and instead, dragged his open mouth down the side of my neck. He planted soft k*ss after soft k*ss down my chest, through the valley of my breasts, and over my flat stomach.

Eventually he lowered so far that he had to stretch my hips out further to rest his torso more comfortably between them.

He licked his lips, looking at my exposed core. With extreme softness, he reached forward and pulled back the hood from my clit.

I swallowed my nerves, suddenly feeling so exposed.

This was Nicholas. He was safe. He was kind.

"You are so beautiful," he said, then leaned forward and took me into his mouth.

I threw my head back against the pillows. My back arched up off the mattress, pressing my breasts out into the air. I wished he would touch my nipples again, but his hands were busy pinning my bucking hips in place while he lavished my most sensitive nub with his tongue.

The sensations were incredible, almost too much. His mouth was a hot, wet temple dedicated, in this moment, to my pleasure alone.

He was relentless in his attentions, quickly driving me into a begging, whimpering mess. Words had no meaning. Only his name sat on the tip of my tongue.

"Nick. Oh, God, Nick..."

My delirium was his encouragement, and somehow, he moved even faster, even more insistent, nudging and licking with his tongue, bringing me to the cusp of pleasure.

I clawed at the bedsheets, bunching them in my fists. It was almost too much, I was so close.

Then, without warning, he slipped a finger inside of my core. He slowly moved it in and out. He curled it, pressing into the bundle of nerves deep within me.

"Ah! Ah! Ah!"

My pleasure spiked impossibly high. It couldn't last. I toppled over the edge into bliss. Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.
