

The Truth 27

Chapter 27

"WHAT?!" This question echoed all over the stands and even in the main stand, what Caesar just said was too exaggerated!

Theoretically, those who aren't at the tenth level can study the laws, but they will often waste their time and won't understand anything.

Therefore, it is natural that no one would think of approaching any law cultivation technique before that level unless he was a true genius! Even a true genius will not necessarily take this decision.

The most reasonable option for any young genius is to focus on raising his level quickly until he reaches level ten, only then studying the heavenly laws will become easier, why would a true genius waste his precious time on something that will not benefit him?

But Caesar just said that he can actually use one... That means he has completed the first level of law by at least 60%!

Naturally, jumping from level 10 to 11 takes several years, it's the time needed for a genius to reach that level of law comprehension and build their pillars with it... Several years at the 10th level... When did Caesar start training exactly and what's his level?

Training for a year and a half.. At the Eighth level.. And he has already comprehended more than 60% of the first level of one of the laws...

'Monster' The word found its way into the minds of every present.

"You... you cheat! It is impossible for you to know a law... even if you knew one who would be the weakest of all, would you dare use it in front of me?" Remus shouted

"I think we'll know when you attack me," said Caesar confidently

"You...Hyaaaaaaaa." Remus didn't speak anymore and jumped with the hot, sparking sword in his hand.

Caesar did not try to hide his strength anymore, he raised his halberd and an intense white flame began to come out from it creating a circle of two meters in diameter.

In the blink of an eye, that white flame scorched everything in the vicinity of the circle, the little bigs, tiles, even air itself. then it began to withdrew and climb over the halberd until a white cover was formed on it, then continued its climb until it reached the blade of the halberd and settled on it silently... it appeared like a candle.

The sudden sight astonished everyone present, this is the same glow that appeared in that blow that defeated Bori, but it was so fast they couldn't understand anything.. even now as they are looking straight at him and still can't understand what this is.

The most surprised was Remus himself, but he gathered his courage and continued his screaming and descended with all his might.

Caesar did not underestimate the collision this time and also waved the halberd with all his strength.

BOOM

The collision of the two weapons sent a shock wave to the stands, the temperature of the wave was so high that the referee had to intervene and set up an energy barrier to help the weaker students.

The collusion lasted for about 3 seconds, but it seemed like it was three hours to Remus. his sword... it was melting! This is one of the best swords a young noble like him can wield, but that strange white glow made it show signs of melting in three seconds!?

No.. Not only the sword, he started to feel that his eyebrows and hair were also burning from the intense heat, even though he did not touch the glow! How is this possible? He himself is practicing a minor law of the fire path, how is it possible for him to be affected by the heat to such a degree?

No, it is not only Remus and his sword that burn.. The sparks and Shards coming out from his sword are also being burned and disappear when it touches the white glow.. That thing.. burns fire itself?

"IMPOSSIBLE!!" Remus yelled and tried to retreat quickly

But Caesar did not give him this opportunity and again waved his halberd in his direction to bring him down again to the same situation, after another two collisions the sword was divided in half, and this time the white flame slightly grazed Remus' body. his armor, underwear, even a large layer of skin on his chest got burned

"aaaaaarrgh, get away from me!!" Remus screamed out in pain and fell to his knees

Caesar quickly planted his halberd in the ground, then gestured to Peon.

Peon understood him and threw over the two parts of Caesar's old halberd that Remus had broken and used to torture Theo.

Caesar caught his first weapon ever and started to approach Remus...

"You... what are you going to do? I'm the son of Marcus Rufus! Don't break the contract or you won't bear the consequences!" Remus said angrily

"Of course I didn't forget the contract.. I can't kill me or maim you.. right?" Caesar chuckled with a cruel smile

Remus was instantly frightened and started shouting with all his might "Help! Stop this savage!!"

But no one came forward... Usually, some or even all of the audience would try to interfere to end the dispute peacefully.. especially since this is famous Remus, the son of a Marquess!

but none has moved or even said a word... everyone was afraid of making Caesar an enemy.. Even the referee did not know what to do so he looked at Felix Bradley, the head of the institution, asking for help.

but Felix shook his head and stayed silent as well.

It was a simple gesture, but it said a lot. The referee realized that the head of the institution was ready to defend Caesar even if he killed Remus!

But what happened next no one expected...

Caesar grabbed Remus by the neck and lifted him, "Is bullying fun? You know.. I could have forgiven you if it was something that concerns only me, but you did one thing wrong...

You shouldn't have disturbed my big brother!" Caesar shouted and turned Remus to see his back, then with all his strength planted the broken part of the halberd up his rear.

"Aaaah!" Remus gave a loud shriek before he fainted from pain and humiliation.

"Hmph!" Caesar spat on the ground then took out his halberd and jumped to stand behind Robin as before "You know, you could've asked him for 10,000 coins or something useful instead." Robin turned his eyes toward him.

"But you told me you'd make me strong enough to stick the halberd up his ass," Caesar scratched in his head.

"It was just an analogy! An analogy!! Heh~ whatever.. it happened, let's go," Robin said as he turned his back to the stage and walked away as Caesar and Beon walked a step behind him.

just as they were about to get out Robin stopped and looked at the stand "I hope that my little brother, Caesar Burton, has entertained you all!" then he laughed out loud and continued his way.

most of the audience was already in shock from the cruel sight, and that short, weird conversation between the two of them! even though it was in a low voice, due to the complete silence in the stands, almost everyone could hear it.

'Why is this cruel-hearted beast so submissive to his brother?' No, Even when he gave a reason for what Remus had done, he said that it was because of disturbed my big brother?

Many of them already decided to remain silent when passing by house number 207. some of them even decided it is better they stop walking in that street!

While the really strong ones in the audience focused more on the part when Caesar said you told me you'd make me strong what did he mean?

Was Robin the one who gave him that terrifying white glow? But Robin himself was still at level 5!

While many were thinking about what had just happened...a pretty girl with frowned eyebrows was standing in a corner, silently watching Robin's group leaving....