

The Truth 611

Chapter 611 I will help

"You want to modify Intelligent creatures?" Evergreen thought for a few seconds and then nodded, "...Yes, you can, or more precisely, I can do it if you ask me after you become my owner, but everything has a price, and making big requests like this entails a penalty, and often the penalty will be that you will not be able to ask for anything from me again for a certain period... Let me explain to you how this will go: The change occurs by smoothly implanting the variable molecules into the body of the intelligent creature and waiting for the changes to appear on it slowly so that complications do not occur. Of course, it is preferable to implant these molecules in the embryos so that they are born with this new ability, but it can also be implanted in your body or the body of anyone you want if you want, but this will greatly increase the penalty."

Then she pointed at him several times, "But as I said before, I will have to not help you for a long time after implementing this request, and depending on the extent of the change you request, I may be forced to reject all your other requests, from a range ranging from a few years to thousands of years. Another thing you need to take into account is that the change takes place in one individual, and therefore you will have to wait until that individual gives birth and his lineage continues for several generations first before you say that you have a new race, and of course there is a possibility that that individual will be killed before you achieve anything, so that everything you have done will be in vain."

"Isn't there a way I can demand the modifications to happen on a large scale?" Robin furrowed his eyebrows slightly

Evergreen was silent for a moment, "...There is, I can create something as precise as a virus that affects an entire race and modify it as I wish or use it to wipe that race out completely, but the demands of making something like this are something you cannot bear. It is best for you to forget it for now."

"Oh... What about the modifications to the Beasts, are they different?" Robin raised his eyebrows slightly Evergreen nodded seriously, then raised her finger and began to explain, "Modifications to beasts and plants require a much shorter penalty time. For example, if you ask for a higher defense to be given to the skin of a human fetus, you will be punished for approximately a thousand years; and if you want to give a higher defense to YOUR skin or any adult, such as the boy Caesar, this period may increase to 2000 years depending on the degree of strength of this defense and according to the strength of the person you choose... However, if you ask to modify an ordinary horse to transform and become a Terra Beast, this means that you will be punished with 70 years only for Giving him a strong skin defense, another 50 years for the bone crown to grow, another 200 years for the energy transmission feature, and so on~ In the end, the total punishment will only reach 1780 years. As for the drops of life from your artery, there is no need to care about it, You are destined to have a life force of 100,000 years one day, so what's the problem, or did it take us a few tens or hundreds of years?"

"...Huh, a thousand years I don't have the right to demand anything from you just for asking to raise one infant's skin defense? 1,780 years of penalties for turning one horse into a Terra Beast? Deducting hundreds of years from my life force?! Forgive me but that doesn't seem very practical." Robin laughed and shook his head

"Manipulating races is not the business of humans, and a thousand years is not a difficult thing after you refine me and gain millions or even billions of years of life! Then these punishments will be nothing to you, and waiting for the new race to increase in number will be easy for you, as well as thousands of years, will pass in the blink of an eye for you! You can, for example, request that an infant be modified to breathe underwater, and within just 10,000 years, he will have an entire race and a strong army of the children of that one infant. With their help, you can conquer any water-type planet you want. And if you get bored within 10,000 years, you can just go into seclusion to cultivate or something."

Then Evergreen shrugged her small shoulders, "You just don't realize how powerful this is... In fact, this kind of interference in race construction was once forbidden to humans and was only in our hands, but since there are many humans who have found evil alternatives of their own. to make these modifications, it was decided that we, the spirits of the planets, would also provide this service to our owners, perhaps it would limit the path of evil somewhat." Evergreen looked up and tapped her chin affectionately

"Oh... And did this method succeed in closing that evil path?" Robin raised his eyebrows slightly, but clearly very interested

"Oh, Do you want to lure me into revealing more secrets? Hehe, these are not secrets anyway. You will see if it worked or not when you ascend with me to the Intermediate Planetary Belt," Evergreen chirped and slapped Robin's arm.

"..." Robin sighed, he really wanted her to follow both of them in this part, he felt that she was hearing something forbidden for some reason!

"Let's get back to our topic then..." Robin pointed towards the scene in front of him again with a strange smile on his face, "What do you suggest about these Terra Beasts? Do I use up my refinement percentage in making modifications?"

"NO!!" Evergreen shouted, "I want you to fully refine me then give me your request officially."

"This won't help. You said that the modifications would cost me a penalty for years without your help. Just standing here and watching the planet is a great help to me. I don't think I can do without you for a long time anymore. What if an emergency occurs?" Robin shook his head, a smile still on his face

"Oh, how cute!" Evergreen rested her face on the palms of her hands and squealed, "But don't worry, I have already completed most of the modifications to the Terra. It is perfect as it is, but if we want to make it an official mount for your army, we should just increase its ability to reproduce faster. This will shorten its lifespan, but its reproduction rate will compensate for the loss. Once this modification is complete they will be like those Draco beasts of yours!"

"Oh... And how long is the punishment for this modification?" Robin raised his eyebrows slightly

"Just 60 years."

"Forget it!!" Robin tapped Evergreen's forehead, "I'd rather use a refinement percentage. How much will it cost for a refinement percentage? Even if it's 50%, I'm okay with it!"

"I will not allow this!!" Evergreen stepped forward and kicked Robin's foot hard

"Ouch!!" Robin grabbed his foot and took two steps back as he jumped, "Damn!! Even if I wanted to do what you said, it wouldn't help me. Finishing your refinement will take at least 20 years because the last 30% are all under the control of the Tree Fathers, and refining them is much more difficult. As for the war in which I will need the Terra, it will be after only 10 years, Can't you see that your means of tempting me are very useless?"

"Twenty years is accurate only if you are playing chess with the Tree Fathers outside, but you are at war with them, right? Tree Father Labikan does not seem that he will last long. Once he dies or is forced to give up his refinement percentage, it will be open for you to take easily. You can do the same with the rest of them and it will be over in less than 5 years!" Evergreen took two steps and then grabbed Robin's arm, trying to convince him

"Go away, you little devil, you want me to conquer the entire planet within five years?!" Robin moved her hand away from him, "Secondly, this will not be of use to me in the current war because you will only modify one terrane, and no matter how quickly it reproduces, it will not provide me with an adequate number before the war begins. I will use my refinement percentage to invent more useful means to help me in that war!"

After a few seconds of silence, Evergreen clenched her fist and spoke firmly as if she had made a fateful decision, "...Okay, I will help you for free just this once."

Chapter 612 Deal

Robin looked at Evergreen in surprise for a few seconds before he extended his hand and felt her forehead as if he was measuring her temperature, " Did I hear wrong or did you just say that you will help me for free? Are you okay?"

"Don't you like anything I do?!" Evergreen stomped his toes again, "...I told you before that if I to choose you as my owner, I will have to go all in, and that's what I'm doing."

Evergreen let Robin hold his toes and groan behind her, then she took a few steps to the side with her eyebrows furrowed as if she was thinking about something deep, "I know you don't give much consideration to the Nihari Planet War. You think it's just something you just have to put in some effort to get rid of, and you think your previous knowledge of the timing of the war gave you an overwhelming advantage, and in fact, this advantage appeared in all the machinations and plans that you prepared, but do you think that the huge space array that you prepared or all those machinations will put that war in your pocket? My future owner, you are truly a genius, and the way you plan is amazing. But this war will NOT end the way you want, you must be sure of this. Not because you are not smart enough or that your plan is incomplete, but for a simple reason, which is that you have the golden eye of truth... but no matter what happens in that war, you must survive and continue moving forward! The Terra beasts will give you a greater chance of victory or at least survival, and fully refining me will give you an additional layer of protection, so just do what I say!"

"...What do you mean by that? What do my golden eyes have to do with anything?!" Robin stopped yelling as if he had forgotten the pain in his foot and looked at Evergreen in shock, "Evergreen, do you know anything about the coming war?!"

"I don't know anything about your stupid war! And it doesn't matter what I mean about your eyes, I'm not allowed to speak anyway. you have to focus on what I am saying. I am saying that I am willing to break the rules for you and prepare your mounts for you ten years in advance, but you must promise me that you will do everything in your power to fully refine before that. Do we have an agreement?"
Evergreen looked back

"....." Robin focused his eyes on Evergreen for a few seconds and then extended his hand, "No matter how I think about it, I don't see it as a bad deal for me, I'm planning on riding you anyway, so getting a few mounts on top of that is worth it."

Evergreen extended her hand and shook his hand, "Good, you can start now then..." Her eyes looked extremely heavy and troubled at this moment.

"Of course not!" Robin chuckled, then took a step away from the green orb, and then his avatar vanished

In the garden of the Imperial Palace-- Above the steep hill

"Where the hell do you think you're going? What about our deal?!" A cute clay statue formed in front of Robin and it shouted at him

Robin passed by the statue as if he did not see it, "Go back to your domain, Evergreen. You said that you would be harmed if you materialized in front of anyone other than me or the Tree Fathers because that would be considered an initiative on your part to communicate. I know what I'm doing."

The clay statue slumped down and disappeared, but the metal decorations on the palace gate in front of Robin began to change until it resembled Evergreen's face, "You think I care about the consequences after I made that deal with you? Come back now and finish your refinement, or else..!!!"

Robin's steps slowed before he reached the gate, and his smiling face turned into a frown, "Otherwise what?"

Evergreen remained stern for several seconds before collapsing, "...Or I'll cry!"

Robin smiled again, "You said that destroying the Tree Fathers would speed up the refinement process, right? I'll work on that now... Didn't I tell you that I know what I'm doing? Come on, go back before anyone sees you."

"...Okay, as long as you keep your promise!" The metal face began to disappear and the decorations returned to their places

"Huff~" Robin let out a sigh, then pushed the gate and walked out of his palace for the first time in five years

"Emily, can you hear me?" After only taking a few steps, Robin inserted his spiritual sense into the voice ring, "Are you still on the steep hill?"

"Your Excellency, Emily hears you. Yes, Your Excellency, I am still in charge of the headquarters." The response came quickly

"Good, good... I want you to gather for me the same team of Saints and Sages who participated in the First Warlord Trial and send them towards the covered training hall. Gather for me some of the available Rune Masters and send them there as well." Robin did not issue any orders restricting the spread of information about the Warlord's experiment, intending to create hope and anticipation for the future in the hearts of the Empire's soldiers.

"Your Excellency, all the forces that participated in the Warlord Test were assigned to secure the Space Gate by Governor Alexander and are now in the settlement at the foot of the hill. They will all be in the hall in less than one hour." Emily confirmed.

"Fine, I'll be there!" Robin closed with her and then selected another soul imprint recorded in the ring, "Sweetie, what are you doing now?"

"Dad! When did you leave your seclusion? Where are you now?!" A happy voice sounded in Robin's mind

"I just came out and I am now going towards the Development and Research Center. Do you know what it looks like exactly?" Robin's smile was evident while he was walking. Even when he met someone on the way, he would nod or raise his hand to return the greeting without changing his facial expressions. It can be said that Zara is the only one who gives him this feeling of psychological comfort currently. Perhaps that is why he decided to give her the treasury so that she would remain safe and far away from the war

"Oh, are you finally going to the Sky Opener Tower? You will find it near the headquarters building, almost the same height and with a pointed top like an obelisk. I will meet you there!!" Zara replied excitedly

"Ahaha, Sky Opener Tower? What a name, Old Gu was definitely the one who thought of it, Haha." Although the messages were entirely mental, Robin laughed loudly in the middle of the street, "You can meet me there, but I need something from you first."

"Sure, Dad. How can I help?"

"Do you remember the resources Jabba requested from you for the Warlord Array? I want you to send those same resources to the covered hall but this time I only want a quarter of the amount. Can you secure that?"

"Of course! Do you want to start another experiment?"

"Something like this. Come on, let's meet in the tower, that sky opener thing" Robin smiled, then closed with her, and began searching for that obelisk-shaped tower

"Ah, this is it! This is going to be fun..." Robin rubbed his hands when he was a building that met with Zara's description and began to take his first step in that direction when: Boom

The sound of a huge explosion coming from afar resounded around

The sound of the explosion was so strong that Robin immediately took out his spear and looked in the direction from which the explosion was coming!

"Please calm down Your Excellency, I mean You Majesty the Great and Reverend Emperor, there is nothing that calls for a reaction from you."

"Hmm?" Robin looked next to him in surprise and found a young man, barely sixteen years old, bowing fully. His clothes and age indicated that he was still a civilian from the family of one of the soldiers who had been transferred to the colonies, and the tone of his voice indicated that he was really not worried.

Robin looked around and found all the passers-by on the street continuing on their way normally, and whoever was talking about a topic continued the conversation as if nothing had happened...

Robin put his spear back into the ring and then took two steps toward the young man and helped him up, "What was that, kid? Why doesn't anyone seem to notice that explosion?"

"Oh, this has become part of our daily life now. It would even be strange if we did not allow one or two explosions a week.." The young man laughed, but he quickly remembered that he was standing in front of the Emperor, so he stifled his laughter.

"Normal? What is normal? What exactly are these explosions and why does no one stop them?" Robin asked more sternly

"It is a disciple of Your Majesty, the great Master Jabba. I heard that he began experiments on the array a year ago, and since then we have heard one or two explosions daily. All the hills near us have been almost leveled to the ground because of his experiments, but recently these explosions have become only once or twice a week, so everyone says it must be good news, ahaha.. ahem."

Chapter 613 R&D Team

On top of the steep hill-- inside the sky-opening tower

knock knock

"Your Excellency, I have gathered the entire development and research team, they are all waiting for you outside as you wish." Old Gu's voice came from outside.

"Hmm, Alright, wait a minute.." Robin was currently in a small, empty room in which there was no one but himself, and he was holding in his hand a piece of paper with a very precise portrait of the Terra Beast on it, at this moment he was writing notes next beside the portrait. After a few more minutes, Robin put the picture on it. In his Space Ring, he headed towards the door and opened it with a smile, "Okay, is everyone ready?"

"We salute Your Excellency!" Since Old Gu was no longer a general, he did not give the military salute and merely bowed slightly to show respect, but the same could not be said about the people standing behind him.

There were at least 70 men and women, ranging in age from young talents to old monsters who lived thousands of years, and all of them were either wearing heavy glasses, had untrimmed beards, or had food stains on their clothes. They also didn't give any particular salute even though Old Gu taught them how to bow. Some of them bowed like Old Gu, some fell to their knees, and some lay on their stomachs with both hands extended forward!

"Alright, everyone, get up there is no need for this." Robin laughed loudly when he saw the scene in front of him

"...I'm sorry you had to see this, Your Excellency." Old Gu sighed and shook his head when he saw Robin laughing, but the sight was really funny

"No need, no need. What I see now means that you and Jabba made a good choice. My condition is only worse than theirs when I finish a long seclusion!" Robin smiled and started walking between the members of the development and research team nodding towards them with satisfaction...

These are the true geniuses of Planet Jura. They were all either born with extreme intelligence, as Robin was, or have extensive knowledge and want to contribute to the benefit of the Empire to leave behind a good name for himself after he passes away, as is the case with Gu Barnett.

It could even be exaggerated a little and say that if Robin decided to disappear today, the future of the Empire would fall on their shoulders!

The members of the development and research team were also looking at Robin with great astonishment. This person has united the planet Jura and is attacking other planets not thanks to his raw strength, but thanks to his research. He is without a doubt their ideal, the greatest goal in this field!

"Alright then, can you tell me a little about your current research?" Robin sat down on the floor and motioned for them to sit as well, then asked with a smile

"I discovered a way to turn the ashes of a North Basin pear into a pill to treat hair baldness!"

"I am currently researching a way to utilize bud corpses as fertilizer for growing high-quality crops. According to the latest statistics, the growth rate of these crops has increased by at least 15%."

"This follower began researching a way to use bud blood to increase the success rate of some medicines. After all, bud blood is a plant sap filled with life energy, so it is ideal when added to some pills and powders for treating serious wounds and injuries, and indeed when we tried it we found improvement in the performance of this type of medicine increased by 30%."

"My team and I have made improvements to the designs of the armor and weapons of the infantry and Draco riders to better suit their needs. Now the Draco riders' field of vision is larger and their movement is faster, while the infantry has greater armor in the danger zone, which is the chest and head. We are also working on designs for new armor for your generals and your excellencies, we are incorporating rarer materials to help you better."

"As for me, I--"

Robin's question opened the door for all the team members to brag about their work in front of the Emperor, so they began speaking at the same time, which forced Old Man Gu to intervene and divide the team members into groups according to their specializations, for example, the Chemistry Research Group, the Information Gathering and Recording Group, the Buds' Corpses Adaptation Group, and the Talisman Development Group, The Armors and weapons designer Group, etc.~ Even so, every group was trying to steal the spotlight and talk quickly about their achievements!

But Robin really enjoyed it. Knowing that there were branches developing on a daily basis without his direct intervention made him sigh and smile.

He had really come a long way until he reached this day.

Isn't this what he decided to build the Empire for? The army expands without his presence and provides him with a safe environment and resources, while there are people who help him in his research and do what he does not have time for, This is a dream come true!

Robin kept smiling the whole time as he listened to them brag about their results. It can be said that the chemistry group was the one that witnessed the greatest development thanks to all the different elements found on the planet Greenland and because the indigenous people had good knowledge in this branch, which gave them a great boost.

The wood-cutting research group also made great progress in methods for peeling the bark of the Tree Father trunk, as cutting became at least ten times faster. They also began research on how to benefit from the soft wood and sap inside the tree bark after peeling it... Robin laughed when he imagined Hoffenheim was literally being flayed as he spoke, but he brought this on himself

Robin kept nodding and smiling as he heard one report after another until finally, his features turned serious when a certain group began to speak.

"I greet Your Excellency. My name is Annabelle, one of the members of the Talent Research group that Your Excellency ordered to be allocated to examine the reasons behind the inability of a large segment of Your Excellency's subjects to reach the knight Realm." The one who came forward this time and began his report was a woman who appeared to be in her fifties, with clean, tidy clothes and a serious look. "I apologize to Your Excellency for standing alone, as the rest of my group members are currently on planet Jura to send me the data they are collecting, and I am here to gather these pieces of data and form appropriate theories."

"Go on..." Robin nodded seriously. This particular research group will determine a lot in the future

Annabelle nodded and then continued, "As Your Excellency knows, most of the inhabitants of Planet Jura currently have taken the path of energy cultivation, and everyone who decided to take this path was able to reach at least the second level of the energy foundation before stopping, and when collecting data and conducting some tests on the people who stopped in in these beginning levels, before the tenth level, we found that they either have no motivation to train at all and prefer to continue their original jobs in peace and that their intelligence is somewhat limited and cultivating them is difficult. It can be said that working on them is hopeless and will cost us a lot with no return, and this represents approximately 50% of your subjects."

"Go on... What about the rest?" Robin nodded without any shock. Of course, he was not waiting for all 100% to be able to cultivate the internal energy system. This requires an understanding of cultivation methods, endurance, patience, and the willingness to pursue strength, and these things do not meet with everyone, so that 50% percentage is somehow expected.

"In response to your Excellency, the rest of the 50%, 45% of whom reached the tenth level of the energy foundations and then were unable to continue no matter how hard they tried for an unknown reason, 5% were able to breakthrough to level 11, less than 4% were able to proceed to level 12, but according to our observation of the speed Their training and how easy or difficult it is for them, we believe that only approximately 1% of them have the ability to continue beyond level 15. Those 1% will be able to reach the Saint Realm if they are given the time and resources."

"...5% can enter the Knighthood Realm, but only 1% can go all the way through?" Robin furrowed his eyebrows slightly, "Have you found an explanation for this phenomenon?"

"General Raiden is the one who gave us the closest explanation," Annabelle replied

Chapter 614 General Raiden's miracle

"General Raiden? We have a general with that name?" Robin looked at Old Gu in surprise

"He is the commander of the Lightning Battalion, Your Excellency. After he reached level 37, he was promoted by Governor Alexander to the rank of General and was appointed in General Victoria's army as her direct assistant to learn more from her." Old Gu explained quickly

"Someone from the Lightning Battalion has already reached Level 37?!" Robin couldn't help but stand up slowly, just a little more than 14 years had passed since he unified Planet Jura and spread the Lightning Cultivation Technique among its inhabitants.

14 years... During just 14 years there was a young man who had managed to break through the Knighthood Realm, the Sainthood Realm, and 7 levels of the Sagehood Realm?! The least that can be said about him is that...

"He is an absolute genius, Your Excellency. Everyone calls him the Lightning Boy because of his cultivation speed and great strength compared to his colleagues at the same level, even if his strength doesn't match up to the rest of the generals under your banner right now, it is only a matter of time before he surpasses a few of them, he undoubtedly deserved his rank as General." Old Gu praised

"Amazing... I would love to meet him one day." Robin raised his eyebrows slightly. This news was surprising but it was also good news. This was the first general to be promoted to the elite few after the Great Green Hill Declaration!

Robin then looked at Annabelle again, "Please continue, how did General Raiden give you an explanation?"

Saint Annabelle nodded and began to explain, "As Your Excellency knows, when a person reaches the seventh level of the Energy Foundations Realm, he chooses a Heavenly Law technique for himself and begins to train in it to prepare to build his pillars with it later one... Some geniuses are able to use part of that law before building their pillars, some of them fail to use it, but later they are able with some difficulty to break through to Knighthood, and others do not understand anything from the law they choose and are unable to break through, so they give up and end up at the tenth level forever."

Robin nodded, this was an axiom in the world of energy cultivation

Then she continued, "General Raiden is young, not yet 35 years old, yet he is very strong and his cultivation talent is record-breaking. It can be said that he is one of the symbols of the Empire and a living legend in Your Excellency's army! But he was not always like this... General Raiden was the descendant of a servant family on the Sacred Tree Continent. After Your Excellency unified Planet Jura, the people of all of that continent were interested in cultivating the laws of Plant and Earth Paths, but he failed in both. When we asked him personally, he said that when he reached the seventh level of the Energy Foundation Realm, he began to read about the paths of plants and earth, but he could not understand anything, and when he became frustrated that he might not have the talent, he made a trick in the academy so that he could try studying other laws for free, such as the path of water and wind. Fortunately for him, he was better off in them, as he was able to use 50% of the power of the first layer in the two laws without problems, he tried the fire path and was able to use 70% of it, and when he tried to train in one of the secondary laws of the lightning path, his ability to use the law reached 95%!"

"He managed to use 95% of one of the Lightning Path Laws before building the pillars?" Robin's facial expression changed several times during this short explanation...

Using part of the power of the first stages of the Laws before building the Knighthood Pillars is not impossible, or even rare at that. In the end, the purpose of building the Knighthood Pillars with the Law is to modify the body a little to increase the body's familiarity with that Law and make it easier to use, and the other reason is that the body's resistance and make it able to withstand this particular Law and not burn or freeze when using it.

But this does not mean that the human body cannot handle using part of those laws. Rather, some people find that using the heavenly laws before entering Knighthood is the sign of a genius, and the greater the percentage of the laws that one can use without getting harmed, the greater your hope and speed in breaking through to higher realms.

For example, Caesar was able to use 70% of the power of the first stage of the Major Heavenly Law of Fire when he was still at the eighth level, and this percentage increased until it finally reached 90% just before he broke through to the Knighthood Realm.

Robin was also able to use many of the laws while he was in the cave when he was still at level ten. In this case, he was able to use all the laws that he created techniques for, but he used some of them better than others. He explained that his use of many laws overlapped and affected each other, and therefore he could no longer use all the laws as he wished, and this was logical for him, but according to Raiden's words...

He was not able to practice the first two laws at all, but he succeeded with the other laws and with different percentages. And one of them even reached 95%? At this point what is even the difference between him and a knight? It is clear that his body was built to handle this law even before he built his pillars with it. No wonder they call him the Lightning Boy!

This is one of the things Robin thought about when the topic of talent first came up, but what would he do with this information? The question is still how to raise the talent of the new cultivators so that they can use more than 50% of the rules before trying to break through.

But Annabelle's words opened a new path for him... The Empire did not have any previous data on people who attempted to cultivate multiple paths like Raiden did.

All noble families were reduced to the laws of one path, The Black Sun Kingdom for example had a few minor laws, all for the fire path. The four Empires had element specializations as well, with each Empire being distinguished by having the Major law of one path and the number of minor laws from that same path... Even the human tribes in Greenland and the giant tribes in Nihari have a specialization, like the tribe from which Jabba came, and they all use Lightning Divine tattoos!

It was only after Rubin unified Jura and distributed all of these techniques without supervision, and then appointed an entire R&D team to collect information, that incidents like this began to come to light.

As for what Saint Annabelle wants to say, it is not that difficult to guess. Robin furrowed his eyebrows slightly, "Do you mean to say that Raiden was born with a great affinity for the path of lightning and that he failed to cultivate in the earth and plant paths because they are the complete opposites to the path of lightning?"

Annabelle nodded quickly, "That's right, Your Excellency. We've observed many such cases where the familiarity of paths varies between each person, but we have yet to find someone like General Raiden who can use 95% of the law."

"...Even I didn't know a number like this was possible," Robin muttered, the knighthood Pillars change the structure of the body to support a certain law, enabling him to use 95% of the Lightning Law before building his pillars is something very extreme, this literally means that if a bolt of lightning struck him from the sky, he would not have died!

Robin deeply believed that Caesar was able to reach 90% due to his body being rebuilt by the All-seeing God that day. After all, the All-seeing God used Caesar's foundations made with one of the Minor Laws of Fire as fuel to rebuild his body and return him young again... Who would have thought that there would be people like Raiden born with this kind of innate talent?

Then Annabelle continued, "When we caught this tip of the thread, we decided to conduct an experiment on one of the Flame Continent's academies, whenever there is a person who fails to break through to knighthood we would encourage him to cultivate another rule, then another, then another~ Although this is very exhausting for them physically and psychologically, as in the end, not everyone is general Raiden, but we were giving them money and supporting them in every way to continue the experiments with us until the end."

"And what was the result?" Robin asked quickly

Annabelle smiled, "The success rate in that academy has increased from 5% to 20%."

Chapter 615 Light

Clap Clap

"In just five years, you were able to find a solution and increase the Knighthood breaking through rate from 5% to 20%. Amazing!" Robin applauded warmly as he sat down again with relief, clearly happy with the report

"We do not deserve this appreciation, Your Excellency. All we did was to observe and collect information only, and all of this was based on your orders." Saint Annabelle bowed quickly, but the blush on her face and the slight trembling of her body was enough to show how happy she was with this evaluation. Then she quickly looked back at Robin's face with some concern, "Oh Right, Your Excellency must understand that this study was only done on the number of people who can break through to Level 11, right?"

"Hmm? Explain more..." Robin raised his eyebrows slightly

"In response to Your Excellency, this subordinate means that 20% of Your Excellency can now become knights if we provide them with all the appropriate factors, but how quickly they can reach the 11th level, and how many of them can complete the path to the Sage Realm or above is still something we have not done any research on yet," Annabelle spoke anxiously, clearly afraid that the rest of the report would upset the Emperor

But Robin waved with a smile, "Of course I know. There are still many factors that affect the cultivation process, such as the rate of comprehension, the time invested in cultivating, and even the degree of familiarity with the law. These are things I will leave for you to raise their rates later, but for now, I am satisfied!"

Annabelle breathed a sigh of relief and was saying something else when suddenly a voice echoed

"Dad!" At this moment, a happy voice came from the entrance of the tower, its owner moved quickly and dropped into Robin's arms who was still sitting, "Hehe, you've been away for a long time this time."

"Haha, enough playing little girl. Didn't you come and visit me with lunch every few days during the past five years?" Robin laughed and patted his daughter on the head

"Yes, but I was delivering the food and leaving quickly so as not to disturb you. Your going out today is different! You should spend it all with me, okay!!" Zara hugged him tighter, clearly not caring at all about the dozens of people around them

"Okay, I can't promise that, but I'll try." Robin laughed again, then motioned for his daughter to sit next to him, "Did you finish what I asked you to do?"

"Yes, I collected all the resources and sent them to the covered training hall myself. It is also full of soldiers now. Why are you here though?" Zara nodded and sat next to his father

"Good, good.." Robin nodded towards Zara with a smile and then pointed around, "I was following the work of the research and development team. They are doing an excellent job, much better than I expected. Whatever their own salary is, I want you to double it, okay?"

"Consider it done!" Zara clapped

"Thank you, Your Excellency!"

"Thank you!!"

Dozens of team members bowed again, and quite a few of them knelt directly... Since Robin took over and collecting talent is no longer limited to a person's family name, but rather to his abilities, more than half of those here were from servant families on the four continents, so doubling the salary For them, is a great opportunity for themselves and their families, and even Old Gu and the rest of the ancient nobles smiled from their hearts and bowed, even if they did not care much about the salary, the feeling of being appreciated is what they seek!

"Rest." Robin waved for them to stand again, then turned back to look at Zara and took out a book from his ring, "I will leave this for you to handle, make copies of the first three stages and distribute them throughout the Empire, and put the fourth Stage on the point exchange list next to the rest."

"Is this a new Major's law technique? And the four grades at once, It must be brand new then! What law is this?" Zara received the book with caution and enthusiasm. She was already imagining the reaction when everyone learned that a new major law had become available to them.

"The Major Heavenly Law of Light!!" Robin explained

"Light?"

"wow"

"How is it used?"

It was not only Zara who was interested, but even the members of the development team around him were looking at the book with their eyes wide open. In order to understand their work better, they had to read all the available law techniques. The emergence of a new law may open up new horizons.

Robin smiled under these many questions and directed his words to Zara, "Since it is a completely new law technique, there is no harm in explaining it to young people who want to try it. On the first page of the book intended for the general public, tell them that the user of the Major Heavenly Law of Light will have high offensive capabilities using compressed light which I call laser beams, and although they will never reach the true speed of light, their bodies will still change somewhat to suit the element of light, and they will have a super speed that would far exceeds the speed of wind users and exceeds the speed of lightning users, even to make them the fastest individuals in the Empire. They will have strong detection capabilities because they will be able to detect any movements around them during the day using changes in light, in addition to having the ability to create optical illusions, but they are also the weakest in terms of defense... In short, I see that the ideal function for light element users is to act as a vanguard for the army or special forces because of their speed, offensive ability, and scouting ability. Of course, there are several other properties of light that those who study it will recognize, I only said the broad outlines~"

Whistling sound~ The interest of the members of the research and development team in the new technique has doubled

"The Empire's new generation will be very happy with it, thank you, Your Excellency!" Zara gave the military salute while giggling

Robin laughed and shook his head at her action, then looked at Annabelle again, "I apologize for interrupting you, continue your report... Now we have 50% of my subjects that can be considered hopeless, and 20% have the ability to break through the Knighthood Realm, what about the remaining 30%?"

"In response to Your Excellency, 30% of the cultivators in that academy were able to reach the tenth level, but they were unable to use any of the laws of the available paths. We believe that their bodies contain a very strong attraction towards a certain path, and this path is not currently available in the Empire, and this could be His solution is if we increase the number of available paths. For example, if we add the path of space, gravity, the fire of death, the fire of life, darkness, and other laws that Your Excellency did not allow to be published to the public, in addition to the path of light, of course, then this percentage we believe will reach at least 25%" Annabelle explained the juice of the five years effort with enthusiasm, "The second possible explanation is that their bodies refuse to change to suit any law, which may be a kind of lack of talent as well and in that case we can say that 80% of your subjects can be excluded and we can focus on Just the 20%."

Robin looked down for a few seconds and then began to rub his forehead, "...The Fire of Death and the Fire of Life are laws made for my two sons that no one can have them. The Major Heavenly Law of Gravity is also specific to Jabba, and I did not order to publish it either in the Empire or in Nihari because I consider it my gift to him as his Master, so he can use it as he wishes, publish it or keep it to himself, it's up to him. As for the Major Heavenly Law of Darkness, It is also specific to the Shadow Swords and cannot be published to the masses, otherwise, chaos will occur and assassinations and theft will increase several folds, whoever wants to try this law must join the Shadow Swords and recite the oath of loyalty first. As for the paths of space and time, unfortunately, it is impossible for me to distribute them. I am indeed trying to strengthen my subjects, but not to the point of giving them laws like this kind of Immense power."

"...Time has a law?" One of the team members looked next to him and asked in a low voice

Chapter 616 New Era

"But... Just because I can't apply these laws doesn't mean there is no other way for me to help you raise your success rates a little bit..." After Robin's words, he lost himself in thought for about two minutes, then snapped his finger and looked at Annabelle, "While I was staying in the afflicted Jura City, I created a Rune design that can discover candidates with soul force stronger than average to pick them as Rune Masters, is this method still being followed?"

"Of course Your Excellency, most of the current Rune Masters were chosen by it." Annabelle nodded, so she took this test

"Good! Most of this Rune composition is for identification and examination and only a small part is for measuring the vibrations of soul force emanating from the target. What if we swapped that small part and had the tablet measure a person's degree of integration with a certain law?" Robin said excitedly, "Studying one law before Knighthood is already difficult enough, Trying to study a second one will be even more difficult. Not everyone is a genius like General Raiden who tried 4 laws one after the other, but if there was a test for the youths who wanted to choose a law, this would save a lot of time and effort and it would raise the success rate significantly, even among the 50% who are lazy or stupid, some of them will continue their cultivation path if they know that they have high integration with one of the laws and that their future is bright."

"That's a great idea, Dad!" Zara clapped

A big smile appeared on Annabelle's face as well, "This is indeed possible, Your Excellency. We can reach at least a 25% Breakthrough rate this way. When can Your Excellency deliver the design for these detection tablets to us?"

"That's the idea... I'm not handing you anything." A smile appeared on Robin's face, then he stood up and pointed, "Turn off the lights and throw all this furniture outside or put it in your space rings. I want this room to be empty of everything within seconds. Then stand with your backs against the wall." After giving his instructions he started walking toward the middle of the hall and stood there with his hand behind his back

Hustle Hustle

The things that Robin asked were not difficult for dozens of sages and saints. In the blink of an eye, the huge hall was completely evacuated and they stood in a line with their backs touching the walls, even Zara stood next to them, looking at her adoptive father, smiling, waiting for him to shine as usual.

Robin took a deep breath and then let it out, "Hooh~ Are you ready? Today a new era will begin in the True Beginning Empire... or at least that's what I hope~" He then took out something from his ring, an orange disc the size of the palm of his hand, and passed his energy into it.

Shhh

A bright light suddenly shot out from the disk, forcing everyone to cover their eyes, "AHH!" Then they started trying to open it again one after another, "This...?"

The hall located on the lower floor of the Sky-Opening Tower was intended for exchanging information, welcoming guests, receiving reports, chatting between team members, and other purposes. Therefore, it was built to be 10 meters high and more than two hundred meters wide. This hall can hold conferences and parties in it!

But now it was completely full...

It is filled with strange, bright patterns swimming in its dark surroundings, some of which are somewhat familiar, but most of which they have never seen.

Just seeing these patterns made a strange heat flow through their bodies and sweat drip from their foreheads

"Is that...?" Old Gu couldn't help himself and took two steps forward

"It is exactly what you think. What you are seeing now is the true form of the Major Heavenly Law of Fire. This is what I see when I write the Law Techniques to you." Robin said, still looking around smiling

"Look... that part over there is the one depicted in the Fire Explosion Talisman!" One of the team members pointed quickly

"And that there is the part drawn on the metal smelting furnaces that His Excellency invented during her stay in the stricken city of Jura!"

"That's still not all," Robin nodded, chuckling, then passed his hand and the patterns moved sideways until a large part of them disappeared and new patterns appeared. Robin pointed at a number of these new patterns that were close together, "Do you see those patterns there? they are the patterns of the Minor Heavenly Law of Blaze, and that one there constitutes the Minor Heavenly Law of Fire Shards, and that there is the part that contained the loophole that makes the Barnett family's Major Heavenly Law of Fire Law defective, and that one~" Then Robin began to pass his hand and the patterns began to move and disappear and come up with others for more than a minute without stopping.

"Wow, all of these patterns are still in the First Stage of the Major Heavenly Law of Fire?!" Old Gu couldn't comprehend what he was seeing. He had been practicing this law for more than a thousand years and had never felt or seen anything like this before.

"Haha, of course, the first stage of the Major Heavenly Law of Fire contains all the first stages of all the minor laws of the fire path." Robin laughed out loud stopped scrolling through the patterns any further and looked at the lost R&D team members seriously, "You and your ancestors' understanding of the laws is very shallow, I will give you an example: it is like someone trying to figure out how to prevent a river flood, so he watches the flowing river for a long time until he thinks that he understands the movement of water in the river and then writes to his children that they must direct the water in this way or that they must build a canal in such and such a place. But when I look at the water, I read it as an open book, as you see now, and then I write to you that you must direct the water in this or that way... In both cases, you do not go through the long reflection the old man had towards the river, nor do you read it as I read do, You only benefit from what is written for you."

Then he continued, "Ever since my disciple Jabba told me about your research and its results, I intended to help you and make your path easier for you, but I did not know how. The patterns that I see cannot be drawn on paper or they will be destroyed, and they cannot be drawn on Hides, or else the complete assortment of patterns of the First Stage of the Major Heavenly Law of Fire alone would be drawn on the Hides of thousands of Beasts, so what about the rest of the stages and laws? So the idea was put on hold for a while... But while I was modifying the Warlord Array, I had to find a way to create illusions around it, and this led me to research the Major Heavenly Law of Light, which in a way led me to this idea, I asked myself, why don't I show you everything I see by using the element of light? Unfortunately, this version is what came out."

"What is before your eyes now is the closest thing I can produce that is close to The Truth, but it is not The Truth. I just found out that what I see cannot be replicated no matter what I do, I can only make inferior copies." Robin shook his head and looked around for a moment before turning back to look at the R&D team members, "But this 3D version here is still more than enough to give you an idea of the true world around you, and more than enough to give a huge boost to your research!"

Then Robin withdrew his energy from the orange disk and inserted it into another yellow disk, and when a completely different combination of patterns appeared, Robin began searching between them until he found a specific pattern and pointed toward it, "I will give you a simple example. For example, this is the light condensation pattern with which it is possible to create High-penetration laser beams. You can take the third or even fourth stage of this pattern and make a talisman from it that is specialized in cutting the bark of Hoffenheim. Of course, you will have to discover the ink formula and drawing foundation yourself. You can also make a Minor Heavenly law technique from this part and give it to some handy workers, it will be easier than the Major Heavenly Laws to study and would be a great help in both the Empire's work and wars. Also, you can create a new type of weapon for the Empire's Army! I have prepared for you tablets that hold up to the fourth degree of all available laws, and--"

When Robin finished his explanation, he looked again at the members of the research and development team to ask them if there was something they did not understand, and he found bright eyes.

Some of them shine from tears of joy and longing... and some of them shine because they can imagine the future now

Just as His Excellency said... These disks can facilitate their tasks.

These disks could start a new era for the Empire.

Chapter 617 The second test

617 The second test

Inside the covered training hall--

"We salute your Excellency." The unified sound of the military salute from 5,500 soldiers shook the covered hall and its surroundings, with Sage Julian in front of them. Even the roughly one hundred Rune Masters wearing civilian clothes saluted in their own way as they bowed slightly and placed their right hands on their hearts, with headquarters Head, Sage Emily, was no exception as well.

"Be at ease." Robin nodded satisfied as he ran his eyes over the small army in front of him

"Hmph! Look at you, Dad, feasting your eyes on your army here while you left the R&D team behind in a panic."

"Hahaha, you saw how awkward the place became after the light disks appeared, I had to run away." Robin laughed loudly and continued examining the soldiers in front of him with his slightly golden eyes and soul sense, "I understand their feelings, Those patterns are the most valuable treasure an intelligent person can obtain. It will push their research to be several times their speed and open the door to unlimited possibilities for them. What I saw today confirmed that Jabba and Old Gu did a good job gathering them, I'm sure they won't let me down."

"...Dad, Dad, what do you plan to do here today? Are you going to repeat the Warlord's experiment?!" Zara tugged Robyn's sleeve twice and asked excitedly

Ans she was not alone in her excitement, all the soldiers and Rune Masters standing in front of him had their eyes shining as well... As for the soldiers, they longed to regain that POWER again, and for the Rune Masters, participating in a project like this is a matter of pride that they will tell about to their great-grandchildren!

"This is the plan!" Robin laughed, then muttered with a smile, "But it seems we have an unexpected situation here."

"You've always had sharp eyes, Your Excellency. I was just about to tell you." Emily took a few steps to stand next to Robin

"What's going on?" Zara also began to act like Robin and pass on her spiritual sense to the soldiers in front of her

Robin laughed and shook his head, "Don't bother, my dear. All that matters is that Julian Barnett, the leader of the array, has already become a Martial Emperor, and 200 saints from the battalion members broke through to the Sagehood realm, so we now have an Emperor, 700 sages, and roughly 4,800 saints. I don't know whether I should be happy or disappointed."

"Why are you so disappointed? Isn't this great news? Now the array will be stronger!" Zara clapped

"When a cultivator moves from one realm to another, he experiences a noticeable change in his body, and the energy he can use at one time becomes noticeably greater. I created a very delicate balance between saints and sages in order to create a warlord, and now this balance has been broken. We can turn a blind eye regarding Julian's situation since he is in control of the array and his being an Emperor will be a great boost, but this is a problem for the rest, if the balance is disturbed, the Warlord will not become stronger as you think, but will be incoherent and may collapse at any moment after its formation."

Robin's words not only frustrated Zara, who raised her lip in sorrow, but even the soldiers and Rune Masters began to sweat profusely. Julian only sighed a little in relief because he was afraid of being eliminated, but he was still nervous that the experiment would not be completed.

Headquarters Head Emily was also no better as she began to raise her glasses several times nervously, "I bear full responsibility for this act, Your Excellency. This is my fault because I did not monitor them well."

"...hmm?" The distracted Robin remained silent for a while before he understood what I said, so he looked at her, laughing and shaking his head, "What fault did you do? The number of sages in my army has increased at an excellent rate over the last five years. Even if they are an elite among the elite, this is still something to celebrate!"

"So about your talk about balance..." Emily asked worriedly

"That's easy, just gather me another 2,200 Saints." Robin waved with a smile, "I wanted to try a smaller-sized Warlord anyway."

"This... Your Excellency may not know, but there is a battle currently taking place in the Far East, and all our reserve forces are heading there. It will be a bit difficult to gather the two thousand sages..." Emily spoke in a low voice, clearly afraid of disrupting the Emperor's experiments.

"War in the Far East? Ah, no need to send reinforcements anymore." Robin laughed

"Your Excellency, please let me see the reports on the war first and then make your decision!" Emily spoke quickly. If these reinforcements were delayed, the Empire's presence on the planet Greenland might be wiped out.

"There is no need to worry, I took care of the matter there. You need to give orders for everyone to return to their camps, even the reinforcements of the local residents. Tell them to return to the border, and send an order to the army closest to us to abandon the military march and send us 2,200 saints as quickly as possible, according to the location of the nearest army that will respond to their arrival, they should be here in 5 hours maximum."

"...You took care of it? ...And how does your Excellency know the location of the nearest army?" Emily murmured in a low voice as if she were in a dream. The nearest army going for support was an army consisting of 50,000 soldiers whose mission was to protect the far west. It passed by the headquarters only half a day ago. If the two thousand Saints abandoned the military march and returned at full speed, they would actually come within 5 hours! This precision...

"Why are you still standing here?" Robin looked at Emily and raised his eyebrows

"I will go immediately!!" The sage regained her senses and moved toward the headquarters building quickly

Robin smiled when he saw her condition, then walked towards the Rune Masters, "Who is the most knowledgeable among you?"

"That-- That would be me, Your Excellency," a young man in his thirties came forward and bowed fully

"Hmm? You... you are from the Burton family, your name is... Carson Burton right? You were one of the people I taught the Runes to during my stay in Jura City! You survived the massacre!?" Robin was pleasantly surprised when he saw the young man in front of him, a big smile appearing on his face

"Yes, Your Excellency, I was one of the prisoners of the Flame Empire, and I am currently among the ten most senior living Rune Masters. I... I am honored that Your Excellency still remembers my name." Two teardrops fell from Carson to the floor

"Heh~ Every time I tried to forget the city, I found my mind digging up more and more details until I found myself remembering even the faces of random people I saw on the streets when I went to eat at Uncle Tim's restaurant, so how could I forget you? The human mind is truly amazing..."

Robin looked up slightly. Then he smiled at Carson again, "Good, good.. I'll deal with you then."

"Your wishes are my orders! What do you want from us, Your Excellency?" Carson dropped his bowing position and looked at his cousin with sparkling eyes

Robin smiled then took out a few scrolls and tossed them at Carson, "This is the modified Warlord Array. Nothing has changed from the tattoos currently drawn on the soldiers so we wouldn't start from scratch, there are only a few details I have added to eliminate some of the problems. I want you and the rest of your team to add these details to the soldiers as soon as possible, I also want you to upgrade the divine tattoos of the 200 new sages to be the version of the sages, and choose the strongest sage among them and draw on him The heart of the array, and when the 2,200 saints come after 5 hours, draw the new tattoos of the saints on them. When you finish, I want to have 7000 Saints, 700 Sages, and 2 Array Hearts inscribed with the new versions of the tattoos in front of me, Is something clear?"

"Clear!" Carson bowed down again as he embraced the scrolls, then took them towards his 100-man team of Rune Masters to assign the roles to them.

As for Robin, he nodded, then went to one of the relatively far corners in the hall, took out that scroll with the Terra beast drawn on it, and continued what he was doing a little while ago

This time there was no longer any need for him to interfere in making the Warlord.

Chapter 618 Beast Armor

618 Beast Armor

After an hour--

Emily quickly entered the covered hall again and found the scene completely changed, all the soldiers sitting without the upper half of their clothes while the Rune Masters were moving around like crazy, mixing inks and trying to finish developing the engravings as quickly as possible.

After a quick scan of the area, she found Robin on the side drawing something, and next to him, Zara, pointing towards the scroll in front of Robin, saying in an audible voice, "I think we need to develop the bone crown armor more, just making it more solid won't help much."

"You're right, but how do I develop it further? In the end, this area should provide pure defense for the rider... Hmm, Right! What do you think if I added the feature of creating an energy shield around the bone crown to double the area of protection for the rider? this would also give him more space to dodge the attacks coming from the sides." Robin spoke, tapping the pen on his chin

"The idea is not bad... Hey, why not add a feature that allows energy shields to merge if there are two or more Terra Beasts standing next to each other? Imagine a wide row of Terra Beasts forming a massive energy wall, this would be a mobile fortress!" Zara suddenly greeted her with excitement evident in her voice

Robin furrowed his eyebrows slightly, then lowered the pen again and began drawing a new part in the rune in front of him. It was clear that he liked Zara's idea.

When Zara saw her father finished adding that part and went back to looking at the design from top to bottom again to find any other loopholes or ways to improve, she extended her hand and pointed towards the terra's head, "Dad, how does the beast receive its orders?"

"By saying it, of course, even ordinary beasts understand human language if you interact with them for a while, so how can creatures with this intelligence not understand?" Robin spoke, still tapping his chin

"But during battles, the sounds of explosions and screams are everywhere. How could the Terra rider have the time or effort to shout his instructions to the beast? Secondly, wouldn't the enemies also realize what the Terra would do after receiving the order?" Zara placed her palm under her chin and tapped on the drawing, "Secondly, how does the Terra Beast communicate with its rider if it detects something or wants to warn it of something?"

"...The beasts usually can't speak, you know that, but the Terra beast is smart and might be able to find a way to point with one of its claws or something..." Robin furrowed his eyebrows slightly, then looked at Zara, "Do you have a suggestion on this part?"

"Thought Transfer Technique! I know that the consciousness of humans and beasts is not the same, but not to the point of being completely different. Place a rune on the forehead of the Terra Beast to act as an intermediary between the consciousness of the Terra and its rider, so that they can exchange orders and information at all times!" Zara spoke excitedly

"This will--" Robin almost argued further, but he stopped and used the pen to scratch his hair for a few seconds. Then he started drawing something. Zara knew that he had started to design the communication rune that she had nominated.

After another unknown time after he finished adding that part, he was about to ask Zara about her opinion on another part when he felt eyes on him, so he looked at his sides, raising his eyebrows, "Emily, how long do you plan to stay there?"

"I did not want to interrupt Your Excellency and Her Highness's train of thought. I only came to inform Your Excellency that your orders have been fulfilled and all the reinforcements have returned to their posts." After Emily finished her short report, she bowed slightly, "Now I ask your permission. I will return to the headquarters and leave Your Excellency and Her Highness to finish what you are doing."

"There is no need to wait a little while, you have come at your right time..." Robin looked at Emily from top to bottom for a moment, "When did you achieve your breakthrough?"

"In response to Your Excellency, I became a Martial Empress almost two years ago."

"Good, you've got used to foundation number 41 long enough." Robin nodded, then took out a metal plate and a small vial from his ring and passed it to her, "Understand this technique and practice it a little. This vial contains an important liquid for using the technique, so use it at the right time... Remember, just understand the technique and make sure you can use it but don't try to do anything crazy with it. We'll conduct an important experiment together when you're familiar with it."

"Yes!" Emily accepted the metal plate with both hands, then found herself a relatively quiet spot and sat down

"Dad, what exactly is this technique? Did you invent something new?" Zara raised her eyebrows slightly and asked in a low voice after Emily left

Robin laughed and shook his head, "No, it's the superior energy control technique. It's something Jabba invented years ago."

"Hmm? superior energy control?" A puzzled facial expression appeared on Zara, "What is the use of this technique?"

"Jabba was creative with it, frankly. Its idea is to use the inner sap of the Earth's Twilight Tree in order to give a feeling of euphoria. What is important about that feeling is that it enables the person to feel the movement of his energy very clearly, and thus the technique comes into play, which is a way to control the movement of very small energy strands in the bloodstream." Robin returned to focusing on the scroll in front of him and tapping his chin with the pen, "It cannot be used again for the purpose it was made for, so here we are trying something new... Let's pray it works~"

"A feeling of euphoria? This... drinking something that gets you high in the middle of a battle? That doesn't seem like a good idea..." Zara said with some concern

"Haha, you're right. Maybe that's why Jabba couldn't move or change his attack style during his battle against the Warlord at that time." Robin laughed out loud, "The technique is really missing a lot, but I don't want to waste time adjusting it without making sure whether there is any hope of its success or not. Just let the experiment succeed and I will try to modify it to suit our needs more... Now come and help me complete this armor. This is the first time I've made armor specifically for a beast, It's all supposed to work automatically, and this is really annoying!"

Zara raised her shoulders slightly, then returned to pointing at the Terra Beast's pointed horns and began happily giving new suggestions

The whole day went by so quickly--

The 2,200 saints arrived after a few hours, and the 100 Rune Masters began working on them and were almost finished with them as well. Emily was still sitting in a corner in a meditative position, emitting an oppressive energy that forced everyone to move away at least 30 meters from her.

However, the chaos caused by the Rune Masters, the large crowd inside the covered training hall due to the large number of soldiers, and Emily's suffocating aura did not affect the session between Robin and his adopted daughter. Rather, from Zara's ever-present smile on her face, it seemed as if she wished that this moment would last forever.

How not? The last time she spent such a long time with Robin, chatting and was able to help him with something was during Caesar's absence to participate in the Eight Kingdoms Tournament, that was decades ago!

Immediately after that, the war on Dolivar began, and Robin returned to the stricken city of Jura and named them his children. Since then, he has been alone most of the time and no longer asks her for help. Rather, he even advised her at that time to go out and play with children her age.

Sometimes while she was leading the Seventh Legion or currently while she was sitting in the warehouses, she wished that her adoptive father had followed what he had said when he took her and Peon in for the first time, when he told Peon to go and cultivate and told her to always stay by his side to help him in his research... Wouldn't that have been wonderful?

But at this moment, a strong rumbling sound froze everything

Rumble Earthquake

"What is happening?" Zara stood up and started looking around cautiously, the rest of the soldiers and the Rune Masters also furrowed their brows tightly

As for Robin, he closed his eyes for a moment to communicate with Evergreen, then opened them and began to laugh angrily, "Hmph, Tree Father Labikan has finally decided to make a warlord. It seems that the gravity field has really tired him out."

"A new Warlord? But reports say that Governor Alexander and the rest are already fighting against a Warlord, now there are two?!" Zara shouted in fear, one warlord has been terrorizing all the True Beginning Martial Emperors for days and might kill them at any time, what if another one appears?

Robin stood up and looked away with furrowed brows, "It's Alright, they're not the only ones who can make warlords."

Carson's voice came from behind Robin at this moment, "Your Excellency, the old Divine Tattoos have been developed and we have tattooed the new soldiers. You now have 7,000 saints and 700 sages and two array Hearts ready for the second test."

A big smile appeared on Robin's face, "Excellent, just in time." Then he put the scrolls in his ring and took a few steps towards the soldiers. Zara was also excited about what would happen now

Robin looked around for a few seconds then nodded satisfied, "I see you've organized yourselves like I taught you last time, good... Let's get started!"

Chapter 619 Final Form

619 Final Form

VRoOoOm

A huge amount of energy began to emanate from the soldiers and condense. In the blink of an eye, the energy took its heavy golden form resembling oil, and began to expand.

The Rune Masters did not learn from their previous mistake and preferred to stay again to see the result of their toil, but this time at least they prepared shields and more energy shields and protective methods, "AHH" and yet they started screaming in pain after a few seconds!

Vroom Vroom

At this moment, Emperor Julian and Sage Eric began to activate the Array Heart Divine Tattoo, and the energy began to gather quickly in the form of two humanoid giants, one 25 meters tall and the other 15 meters tall, respectively.

"The moment of truth has come.." Robin muttered as he watched the giants forming, Up until this moment, everything had happened as it happened before, without any change. As for the modifications that Robin asked the Rune Masters to add, they should begin to appear from this point.

Pzzzzz

After the formation of the two energy giants ended, dozens of tentacles emerged from them and began to wrap around the waist of the soldiers participating in the array, gently pulling them up, and then integrating them into the giant's body!

Quickly, the bodies of the giants, which were made of pure energy, became composed of the bodies of the saints and sages involved in their creation, while the energy of the massive array became more compressed around them to protect them. Then the energy absorption from the soldiers calmed down to the minimum, as if they fell into a deep sleep, the high pressure that was on them with every moment vanished as soon as the Warlord's formation was completed.

"This is..?" Zara opened her eyes wide and took a step forward despite the intense heat in the hall

Robin knew what Zara was thinking and replied to her before she asked, "This is the idea that was inspired by Alexander's words during the first experiment. He was saying that a physical body will increase the cohesion and effectiveness of the array, and I have not found a physical body better than the bodies of people who pump the energy into the array, also in this way, the range of the warlord's movement has become infinite and the energy lost during the transfer process from the battalion to the warlord has become nil, I killed a few birds with one stone with this idea~"

"But.. wouldn't that put them in danger? I could choose any one of them and pierce his heart right now..." Zara furrowed her eyebrows slightly, in the beginning, the Warlord was made of pure energy so he was indestructible, but now any even slightly powerful attack could kill a soldier inside, especially since she could see them all through the golden energy cover, they now look like ants that have been covered in honey!

"But.. wouldn't that put them in danger? I could choose any one of them and pierce his heart right now..." Zara furrowed her eyebrows slightly, in the beginning, the Warlord was made of pure energy so he was indestructible, but now any even slightly powerful attack could kill a soldier inside, especially since she could see them all through the golden energy cover, they now look like ants that have been covered in honey!

"If some of them are killed after the Warlord is completed, that's fine. The Warlord's strength will decrease, but it won't collapse. Their situation at the first experiment was worse. The collapse of the array due to exhaustion during an ongoing battle will put them in greater danger~" Robin raised his eyebrows and then smiled, "Furthermore, my Warlords are not finished yet."

OOMMNNNN

"What is this? What is this?!" Zara took a step back again and tugged her foster father's sleeve several times

A dense cover of light began to completely cover the warlords, from the tips of their hair to the nails of their toes, and it was not just a light cover, but that light formed the features of Julian and Eric's faces, their abdominal muscles, even the tiny hair on their legs... The two warlords became an exact golden copy of the owner of the Heart of The Array Divine Tattoo!

The 7000 saints and 700 sages disappeared and were replaced by two giants. If the rune masters had not seen what was happening with their own eyes, they would never have believed it.

"Haha, the idea worked! I had to research the Light Major Law to the fourth stage just in order to obtain this level of optical illusion!" Robin laughed and then started clapping

He then looked seriously at Warlord Julian, "Julian, what was preventing you from using the power of the fourth stage of the fire Law was a problem with the availability of energy. You are now literally floating in it. If I am not mistaken, then when you use the fourth stage in your current state, you will be as powerful as someone at the top of the Martial Emperor realm, even at the top you will not find many who can compare to you! Use the fourth stage freely and destroy whoever stands in your way, with your current strength, in the entire Young Planetary Belt there are not many who can stand up to you!" He then looked towards Warlord Eric, "With 2,000 Saints and 200 Sages, you now possess the power of an Emperor at approximately level 43. You have enough power to wreak havoc throughout Greenland as you wish, so there is no need to hold yourself back."

Paa Paa

The two giants fell to one knee and spoke together in a heart-rending voice, "Your Excellency, give us your orders to destroy your enemies."

"Enn," Robin nodded satisfied, then started moving toward the gate of the covered training hall, "Come with me."

Without thinking, the two giants stood up again and moved at a steady pace after Robin BAAM
BAAM BAAM

Zara and the Rune Masters also followed them in silence to see what would happen

They soon found Robin moving towards the space portal, "I was planning to have you fly towards the battlefield so that you can further explore your current abilities along the way, but the appearance of Labikan's warlord there has doubled the pressure on Alexander and the rest and they may collapse at any time, so I'm afraid that you will have to do that exploration during the battle~"

Robin arrived at the Space Portal and began typing coordinates into the control panel

Bzzzzzzzt

Robin turned his back to the gelatinous space within the portal space, "When I fought the Warlords I found that their strength was between 46 and 42. I think it depends on the order they were made, let's assume the worst and that they are both at average levels so don't underestimate them. There is one more thing, those natural Warlords can draw unlimited energy from their surroundings, and technically they are indestructible as long as the core remains intact, so your strategy should be limited to causing enough damage to them first and then attacking the area below the navel and destroying it as quickly as possible, understood?"

"We will not disappoint Your Excellency." The two warlords replied with their strong voices

"Good, good.." Robin smiled satisfied, "Julian, after the battle is over, you and your warlord stay with Caesar to help him destroy Tree Father Labikan, and you, Eric, bring your squad and return to the headquarters immediately to protect it. come one, let's go!"

"Yes!" The two golden warlords gave a military salute, then bowed so that they could pass through the space portal that had become too narrow for them, and disappeared...

Robin kept his eyes focused on the portal for a few seconds, then muttered in a low voice, "Military movements within the same planet should be faster than that. If the Space Portal was not ready right now, the warlords of Labikan and Flores would have destroyed my Martial Emperors and perhaps destroyed my entire army before Julian and Eric arrived, I can't build such a huge space portal everywhere! ...I have to find a solution."

"Dad..." Zara furrowed her eyebrows slightly and patted her father on the shoulder, "You have just finished a great masterpiece. Don't be too hard on yourself, relax a little, and stop worrying too much, you now have a full team that should take care of such things."

Robin smiled and kissed her head gently, "It's okay, if I don't encourage myself and find new goals for myself constantly, I will get lost. But you're right, inform the research and development team of this dilemma and ask them to allocate one or two individuals to research it. Who knows? Maybe the R&D team would be able to find a solution before me, I will be happy if this happens..."

"...En." Zara nodded gently, but it was clear that she was not convinced by her father's justification. It was obvious that he was carrying a heavy burden, the burden began to lessen a little after the Empire began to take shape, but he was still their main pillar.

At this moment, Emily's voice came from behind them, "Your Excellency, I have finished practicing the technique you gave me, I am ready to begin the experiment at any time."

Chapter 620 A glimmer of hope

620 A glimmer of hope

40 kilometers from the steep hill--

Swoosh

Robin stopped in mid-air and then pointed down, "I finally found a hill that Jabba has not leveled to the ground yet. Although it is small, it will suffice."

Swoosh Swoosh

Zara and Emily floated past Robin as well and focused on the hill below

While Emily's mind was busy wondering what would be asked of her, Zara couldn't contain herself any longer, "Dad, why did you bring us all this distance? What exactly are we going to do?"

"Firstly because I can still hear the sounds of celebrations up the hill from here, especially the colony below them celebrating as if there was a festival going on. I don't think those annoying people will stop anytime soon. Why would they celebrate the success of the Warlord Experiment anyway? Don't they know we're still at war? Robin laughed and shook his head

"They are celebrating especially BECAUSE we are in a state of war, Dad. Every day comes a new list of soldiers' deaths that establishes a state of sadness across the colonies. They long for anything that makes them happy.." Zara explained with a gentle smile.

"You're right, that's why I let them do what they want." Robin nodded and then looked at Emily, "The second reason we came here is because the experiment we are going to do must be somewhere in the wild, otherwise whether the experiment fails or succeeds it will cause huge damage to the steep hill. After all, the technique that Emily trained on is the same technique that Jabba used to destroy his body from the inside during his fight against the Warlord. Perhaps after looking at him now, you can guess the consequences of anything that goes wrong."

"Your Excellency, please give me your order, whether I succeed or fail, I will be happy to contribute." Emily placed her hand on her heart and bowed slightly, but her calm tone did not hide the sound of her heartbeat, which began to accelerate.

Robin was silent for a moment, then laughed in a low voice, "Don't worry, whoever reaches the rank of Emperor will not be foolish or without talent. I am confident that you can implement the technique with utmost precision."

After Emily nodded, Robin pointed towards the small hill below, "You are from the Trent Family from the Sacred Tree Continent, which means you are experienced in the Major Heavenly Law of Plants, I want you to use a Fourth Stage Rapid Germination attack on this hill."

"That technique from the Fourth Stage? But Your Excellency--"

Before Emily could finish her words, Robin placed his hand on her shoulder, "Don't worry, how come I don't know about the problem of using the Fourth Stage of Laws? This is exactly why I gave you the Superior Energy Control Technique."

"Your Excellency, you mean..?" Emily furrowed her eyebrows slightly

"I realize that you understood what I wanted you to do since you learned the uses of that technique, but that's okay, let me explain to you clearly... The problem with the fourth stage of the laws is that they require a large amount of energy in a short period of time, energy that cannot be gathered by normal methods, so we have to gather it in other ways~ And here comes the role of the superior energy control technique, the technique invented by Jabba that can make you control the energy strands from the moment they leave the center of the energy pool until they reach the palm of your hand. All you need to do is accelerate the movement of those energy strands to twice the normal rate."

"Accelerating the movement of the energy strands at twice the normal rate... Isn't this very dangerous, Dad? It is as if you were asking to pump 15 liters of blood into a human body that only holds 5 liters. This could cause an explosion inside her body!" Zara's facial expression turned slightly fearful and then she shifted her gaze to Emily, "And she would have to do this while performing a fourth-stage attack as well?"

"Who said it wasn't difficult? But if someone with enough talent to reach the Emperor Realm can't do it, who can?" Robin raised his hands and shook his head with a smile, "In general, if the head of the headquarters does not agree to conduct the experiment, we can find another candidate, the matter is in her hands."

Frrrr

At this moment, a repulsive aura emanated from Emily, causing Robin and Zara to retreat a few meters

Emily did not respond again to Robin's question to say whether she agreed to the experiment or not, but rather she immediately began to speed up the flow of energy through her body as Robin ordered her to do.

Frrrr

Bzzzzzt Bzzzzzzzt

Within half a minute, a faint glow began to emerge from Emily's skin and eyes

"This is..?" Zara asked apprehensively

"Don't worry, her veins are glowing from the intensity of the heat resulting from the energy current passing at a higher speed, but she is fine... I think..." Robin raised an eyebrow watching the process

About a minute later, when Emily's body began to look like a bright flame in the dark night, Robin couldn't help himself and stepped forward excitedly despite the hot stream of air coming from her, "Here we go... Here we go..."

At this moment, when Emily reached the maximum speed she could achieve, she slowly raised her palm and pointed it toward the hill, then closed it.

CRAAAH

RUMBLE

09:19

Hundreds of tree roots came out from every inch of the hill and began to expand and grow leaves until they became trees, then those trees were pulled back to the ground again, leaving behind a handful of dirt and crumbled rocks that began to collapse.

"Haha.. hahaha it worked! It worked!!!" Robin placed both hands on either side of his head and shouted happily

The hill that had been standing tall a moment ago had been flattened to the ground with a single action... This was the power of the fourth stage of the Plant Law!

But a shout brought Robin out of his dreams, "Headquarters Head!!!"

When Robin looked at Emily again, he found that her glow had gone out and she began to fall from the sky like a doll whose ropes had been cut...

Zara quickly picked her up and began pumping life energy into her body as she carried her to a nearby safe area, "Headquarters Head Emily! Headquarters Head, can you hear me?"

"Calm down, there is no need to panic. Do you think I will harm my people?" Robin came to their side and took Emily's hand with his eyebrows furrowed, then activated the Eye of Truth

After about a minute, Robin let out a sigh and then gently left her hand on her stomach to rest, "As I thought, Her body has not received permanent damage. You can say that her body is in shock because it has never been exposed to such pressure before. With some rest, she will be fine."

"Really? Hoo~" Zara breathed a sigh of relief as well. Emily was one of the few who felt comfortable talking to her from time to time, then she looked at her adoptive father, "Dad, this method is very dangerous. Using it during battles will do more harm than good."

Robin shrugged his shoulders and looked away, "I never said I would distribute it to the Martial Emperors now. The technique still needs a lot of adjustment, but finally, I have something to build upon, finally, there is hope on the horizon... there is hope." Then he started clenching his hands so hard that they started making strange noises

Suddenly the ground began to move as if it were the end of the world, the clouds started to disappear and the atmosphere began to turn grey!

"What is happening?!" Zara flinched and took a defensive position next to Emily

Robin looked around for a few seconds and then shook his head, "It seems that Julian and Eric have arrived on the battlefield, so what is happening now is that Tree Father Labikan has decided to use all of his refinement. Maybe it will be to antagonize more Warlords or something, he is putting everything on the line in this battle. "

"More Warlords? ...Are you going to the battlefield?"

"No need. Julian is enough to destroy at least 5 of them, and Eric being with him decides the battle before it begins. Labikan simply took his last breath." Robin smiled and then went and carried Emily in his arms, "Let's go back to the steep hill, I will settle a few things with the headquarters first, and I want you to spend a few days with Emily until she wakes up, then you can do whatever pleases you after that~ as you see, the war on Greenland wouldn't last much longer."

"What about you?" Zara asked quickly, her adoptive father's tone indicating that he wanted to be alone again

"Me? ...I'm going to the Farm Planet."
