

Chapter 130 His Experience

Alicia threw her accusation at him, clearly frustrated by his actions. "Even an animal needs rest. You didn't let me have any that night!"

Caden responded calmly, "Animals rest and then keep going the next day. You've had a whole week."

In a stern voice, Alicia told him, "Are you actually comparing me to an animal now?"

Caden didn't respond.

Because of her, this conversation had now become weird.

Used to handling these kinds of arguments, he knew better than to continue.

He decided it was smarter to stop there before it escalated.

When he didn't reply, Alicia asked, "So, you finally understand how wrong you were, don't you?"

Caden simply shook his head.

"Technically, I haven't done anything wrong according to the agreement. But I've learned it's sometimes smarter to admit fault."

Alicia blinked in surprise.

What was he talking about?

Did he mean from experience with other women?

Trying to stay composed, she said, "I thought you were more of the controlling type when it came to relationships."

Caden smiled faintly as his expression softened. It was clear he was thinking of someone else. "I wouldn't dare be that way. She's a handful."

This was the first time Alicia witnessed him smile like that.

Whoever he was thinking about seemed to leave him both frustrated and amused.

Alicia wanted to mock him. He was such a confident man, but some woman had bested him.

As she tried to smile, she realized her lips felt stiff.

She rubbed her cheeks and quickly looked away, trying to avoid his gaze. "I need to revise the agreement. Some parts are unreasonable."

Caden noticed the change in her tone and immediately stopped smiling.

Without questioning her mood, he responded, "If agreements could be changed at will, they wouldn't mean much."

Alicia frowned. "You said you'd respect me, but you only cared about your own pleasure. Isn't that a violation?"

Caden responded bluntly, "Weren't you enjoying it too?"

She had no answer to that.

Her face turned red, but she kept her tone firm. "Either way, you went too far. I insist on making changes to the contract."

It seemed that she was determined to make this happen. Caden thought for a moment before agreeing.

As she worked on the revisions, he moved closer, slipping her pants down.

She usually wore loose pants for comfort, which made it easier for him now. Alicia quickly tossed the mouse aside and tried to stop him. "What are you doing?"

Caden held her legs in place.

"Just checking if you're hurt."

Alicia glared at him. "Yeah, right!"

"Why are you suddenly so angry?" Caden looked straight into her eyes. "I admit that night I went a bit overboard, but I checked, and you weren't hurt. I even gave you a week to recover. If you're still upset, then I must have missed something. I need to figure out why."

Alicia fell quiet for a moment.

His question, "Why are you suddenly so angry?" caught her off guard.

Was she truly angry?

She wasn't.

She was just irritated by his lack of control.

She quickly grabbed her pants and pulled them on. "I'm not hurt. What bothers me is how you keep tormenting me!"

"Who stays mad for an entire week?"

She didn't have a response to that.

Something did feel off with her. She finished putting on her pants and then turned her attention back to the agreement, muttering under her breath, "I'm not mad anymore. Let's just focus on fixing the agreement."

Caden remarked, "We can handle that later."

She gritted her teeth, feeling at a loss for words once again. "No, I'm not in the mood."

She began typing furiously, documenting every detail about their sexual activity, including how often it would happen each month and how long it would last.

After finishing, she calmly listed out the changes she had made to the agreement and read them aloud to Caden.

"Let me know if you have any issues with it."

Caden wasn't interested in being formal.

He slipped his hand into her shirt, trying to make her horny. "No. It's all fine with me."

Despite his dismissive tone, he kept his eyes on the screen, making sure Alicia wasn't trying to slip in anything he didn't approve of.

Alicia, on the other hand, didn't have time to plot anything.

Even though she had just said she wasn't in the mood, Caden's touch was awakening something inside her.

They hadn't done it that many times, but he had already learned her most sensitive spots.

She had already been feeling a strange pull toward him, and his touch quickly weakened her resolve.

Caden gently held her neck, leaning in to kiss her. When he pulled back, he noticed her eyes sparkling with emotion. A smirk crossed his face. "Are you starting to feel it now?"

Alicia turned her head away.

"No," she muttered, trying to push him back.

Caden saw through her resistance and said softly, "I came on strong last time because you had made me wait too long. If you turn me down today, we'll end up right back in the same place."

Alicia didn't know how to respond.

"Isn't that a bad deal?" Caden's voice was smooth as he slipped off her last piece of clothing.

Startled, Alicia quickly grabbed his hand.

But then, he pulled her closer, wrapping his arms around her waist and pressing her against the table.

He caught her wrists and intertwined their fingers, holding her steady.

Alicia tried to resist, but her body betrayed her.

She bit her lip in embarrassment. "Fine. We can do it once."

Caden chuckled softly, brushing his lips against her ear. "Alright. Whatever you say, Lucky."

Our ads aim to provide better support for authors.

 I want no ads >